Counselors report that 9th Grade CCR's are going well. They are hoping to have 70% response. A program called Ingenuity has been implemented to help students who desire to stay as KJH students. This program offers core online classes with local instructors for current credit. Those teachers are Pectol, Gregoire, Lanford. Ingenuity Base Camp is another program for student credit recovery, instructors are Jennifer Coyle and Stacie Barney. These programs are funded with TSSA funds.

Teachers/JSSC reports that teachers are glad to have the students back in the classroom, there is a better connection, students seem to be getting use to the larger groups as they try to maintain distancing.

Students find it harder to social distance with all students at the school. Homework is more manageable. Getting to class on time is a little of a challenge. (Block in the 8th Grade Hall)
Sub for Santa is underway.

Mr. Martini explained how the learning process is going for students in quarantine and what resources are available to help them, including teachers connecting with students, and previously set up canvas learning. Community Council reviewed evidence concerning the number of failing grades at the end 1st term. Many "I" grades were given to help students complete work to pass the class without F grades that require make up credit.

A question was asked about how the school is using the academic tracker. Mrs. Whittle tracks student and helps them progress forward and not take move backwards with current credits. She is also used to manage computer check in and out.

The budget report is up to date.

Parents are concerned about getting proper COVID information, some parents do not recognize where the information is coming from. Parents are concerned about the information on dashboard being behind or misrepresenting numbers. Davis School Board emphasized dashboard is not a daily report. The information sent from the principal is the more current, regular information available.

Lisa Wood made a motion to cancel December's Community Council it was seconded by Malia Roundy and approved by all voting members.
