

Cassidy Lichtman is the founder of P/ATH, a non-profit that uses existing youth sports networks to provide coaches, athletes and parents with learning experiences and social media content that teach empathy, equity and empowerment. Previously she was a project manager at shift7, founded by the former Chief Technology Officer of America under President Obama. She was a five-year member of the USA National Women's Volleyball team and is currently a member of the USA Volleyball board where she chairs the Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Committee. She holds a BA and MA from Stanford University where she was a two-time All American and Academic All-American.