A rainy day in Knock...

As Mary Byrne made her way home, along with the priests and housekeeper, Mary McLoughlin, they claimed to have seen three floating figures over the south gable of the Saint John the Baptist's church at 8 am. Immediately after spotting the figures, she ran home to alert her parents. After convincing almost her entire village to come out in a rainy day, they claimed that they saw Our Lady, Saint Joseph, and Saint John the Evangelist.

A local farmer claimed to have seen a massive orb a light coming from the same location. After the initial report, almost 1.5 million people went to look for the holy figures themselves in the holy ground leading to the construction of the shrine.
