MYTHS VERSUS THE TRUTH ABOUT CHARTER SCHOOLS

MYTH: Charter schools are private schools.

TRUTH: Charter schools are NOT private schools.

They are tuition-free public schools that are part of the state's public education system. They operate with contracts (charters) issued by the local public school districts. They receive the same per pupil funding as district public schools, minus a five percent administrative fee paid to the districts.

MYTH: Charter schools are for-profit entities run by big corporations.

TRUTH: By law, all Florida charter schools must be organized as nonprofit organizations managed by volunteer community-based boards of directors.

About 20 percent of the charter schools in Florida contract with charter management companies for back-office services but they still operate as nonprofits under the governance of a volunteer board of directors.

MYTH: Charter schools have little or no oversight.

TRUTH: This is completely false.

Charter schools are closely monitored by their district sponsor and the state. They are required to file several reports a year detailing their financial and operational status. Charter school students take the same state assessments as traditional public school students. Charter schools are evaluated and assigned a school grade using the same standards and criteria as traditional public schools.

If a charter school receives two consecutive school grades of "F," the district sponsor has authority to close the school. No traditional public school operated by a Florida school district has ever been closed for poor academic performance. (Since 1997, 316 charter schools have closed.)

MYTH: Charter schools siphon money from school districts.

TRUTH: Charter schools serve the same public school students who would have otherwise been enrolled in traditional public schools.

We believe that educational funding should be used for the benefit of students, whether they attend a district school or a charter schools. In fact, charter schools actually serve public school students at a lower cost per student than traditional public schools.

MYTH: Charter schools cherry pick only the best students.

TRUTH: Parents are the ones who choose charter schools for their children, not the other way around.

The doors of charter schools are open to everyone, pending space limitations. To help avoid over-enrollment, charter schools utilize a lottery system for the fairest selection process.
