Dear DC Friends and Families,

The past year presented many historic challenges for our nation which will likely continue well into 2021. Challenges that reinforced time and time again that we live in a broken and fallen world, ripe with frustration, confusion and uncertainty, along with hardship, anger, and fear. And yet, in an act of pure, unconditional love, Jesus Christ stepped into this world that we might be restored to the fullness of relationship with the living God. Jesus said, “I have come that you may have life and have it to the full” (John 10:10).

It is in the power of Christ and His promises that the DC community has carried forth this year - #DCSTRONG! Fueled by the DC Promise, we prepare students for a life of impact through an innovative and exemplary education rooted in Christ, we opened our campuses on September 2nd for daily, on campus instruction for all students PK-12. By keeping the health and safety of our students, faculty, and staff at the forefront, we have been able to maximize the power of life on life impact in a DC education. We continue to move our community towards attaining our racial and socio-economic principles recently articulated by the Board of Trustees. We celebrate the advances made academically, technologically, and spiritually and we commit to building on these in the coming year.

I invite you to celebrate and participate in the work that God is doing at DC even now, as we press on #DCSTRONG. The stories and photos in this issue of the Keynoter remind us that we serve a faithful God. May the content on these pages inspire us to continue our support of the fundamental work of DC – to prepare students for a life of impact through an innovative and exemplary education rooted in Christ.

In a VUCA world (volatile, uncertain, complex, uncertain) our mission to educate students who will serve God and impact the world through biblical thought and action is vital, now more than ever. Through God’s gracious leading we have a fresh vision and strategic plan for DC. The past year has demonstrated the innovation, resilience, discernment, and perseverance of the faculty, staff, and administration to carry these strategic initiatives forward. And in Christ, we will experience fullness of life! #DCSTRONG!

Soli Deo Gloria,

Dan Steinfield
Head of School
THE PROMISE

WE PREPARE STUDENTS FOR A LIFE OF IMPACT THROUGH AN INNOVATIVE & EXEMPLARY EDUCATION ROOTED IN CHRIST
Recently introduced, the DC Promise builds upon the school’s rich 70 year-old heritage of Christian Education while positioning the school to flourish over the next decade. The unique hallmark of a 21st century DC education is instructional innovation with an unwavering commitment to the truth.

Promises are for keeping. As Christians, our hope in Christ is of a promise fulfilled by God himself. DC’s three new strategic initiatives, says Head of School Dan Steinfield, grow out of the DC promise and articulate how the school will fulfill this promise to parents. Creating a culture of educational innovation, developing long-term sustainability, and cultivating community engagement will enable DC, in the words of its promise, to prepare every student for a life of impact through an innovative and exemplary education rooted in Christ.
EDUCATIONAL INNOVATION

Deeper Learning

To lead lives of impact today and tomorrow, students need to engage in the kind of deeper, independent learning that fosters curiosity and creativity. CACE, the Center for the Advancement of Christian Education, defines deeper learning “as the people of God’s story engaged in real work that forms self and shapes the world.” This definition, says Steinfield, serves as an umbrella for all DC students as they progress on their journey from PK-2 to twelfth grade. It’s not only about what a student learns, but also about who they are—unique individuals created in God’s image and maturing Christ-followers. The “real work” of deeper learning they undertake shapes them as they learn to communicate, collaborate, take risks, and make decisions.

The traditional school schedule leaves no room for these experiences. This is where the concept of core agility comes in. DC will clearly define its college prep liberal arts core curriculum so that, with a more focused core of required classes, there’s space to identify and nurture each student’s unique gifts, talents, abilities, and interests. “We want to provide a rigorous education that prepares students not only for college, but also for a future of engaging and leading in the 21st century workforce, in family and community life, within our churches and even on a global scale,” Steinfield says.

DC students and faculty have already been hard at work on two initiatives that illustrate the power of this kind of learning and serve as examples of core agility in action. “We recently launched a new coffee shop and a school store, both completely student-run, to show the community what we mean,” says Steinfield.

One of the natural economies of this kind of innovative learning is also one of its great strengths. “Twenty-first-century education is about partnerships,” says Steinfield. He envisions adding innovative learning opportunities for DC students through establishing partnerships with like-minded organizations across a range of areas, from the arts to biotechnology.

DC’s Director of Innovation Jim Favino, for example, is exploring a partnership with Yvonne English, the Director of the Center for Entrepreneurship + Innovation (E+I) at Grove City College and a fellow of the Praxis group, to plant an E+I Center at Delaware County Christian School. Innovation and Entrepreneurial (E+I) skills will be important for all students entering a rapidly changing workforce environment. Having the opportunity before college to explore what it means to be engaged in redemptive entrepreneurship will prepare students for the kinds of course and career choices they will make later on. In addition to that, we have the opportunity to help broaden and deepen their thinking about how Christians serve God.

“The focus of these experiences is on students having a restorative, redemptive impact—no matter what they do,” says Steinfield. “It’s part of the DNA of Delaware County Christian School.” While the limitless opportunities that technology affords and the language and framework around innovation in education are new, the proven concepts are not. “Liberal arts education and Applied and Innovative Learning always go hand-in-hand,” says Steinfield.
"THE ARMORY"
MORE THAN JUST A STORE

DC took the concept of investing in students to a whole new level this fall when the school extended a loan to the young entrepreneurs in Becky Pitofsky’s SAIL class to start a school store. The rest was up to them.

Students wrote a vision, mission, and business plan and executed a “pop-up” launch of The Armory in time for Christmas. “They had so much fun doing this,” Pitofsky says. “It was entirely student driven—and it was a big responsibility. I loved watching them step out of their comfort zones, blossom, and run with it.”

Students had to collaborate and communicate with each other and with many different people in the DC community, and engage critical thinking skills in new and creative ways. “Students are used to being told exactly what to do, when, and how,” Pitofsky says, “so it sounds foreign to them when we say, ‘Here’s your goal—go do it!’

“For the school to place this kind of trust in students, and for the students to be able to reflect God’s character as they create, instills great confidence,” she says. The students learned lots of lessons to take forward, too—for example, they now know they need to carry a broader range of products at different price points.

In all of this, the students hold their sense of purpose seriously. Their mission statement begins: “Our purpose is to create a business that is more than just a store but something that brings our community together and increases school spirit.” Through this enterprise they want to glorify God, exemplify DC’s core values, be environmentally friendly, and support local small businesses.

Students in Pitofsky’s class in the spring semester will be tasked with designing the grand opening for the store.

Like entrepreneurship itself, innovative education is regenerative. When students in a future class pay off the initial loan, the funds will be reinvested in other student-driven initiatives.
Steinfield reflects back on the work of Roy Lowrie who for more than twenty-five years led the DC community. Lowrie believed that, “no child should take an academic penalty to get a Christian education.” Christian schools should be leading in academic excellence and innovation, which in themselves will call for evolution or change over time.

Although the DC community is justifiably proud of its 70-year heritage, it’s important to remember that in 1950 the school looked very different from the way it looks today. In the same way, DC will look very different in 2090. “No one likes change,” Steinfield says, “but many Christian schools, tragically, have closed. We can’t expect to continue to look the way we look now and be able to provide the kind of innovative and exemplary education rooted in Christ that will prepare students to lead lives of impact in our rapidly changing world.” The people who teach, inspire, and model lives of impact for Christ are the most important indicator of student success. “So, the first priority of sustainability is retaining, recruiting, and pouring into DC’s educators, coaches, and support staff,” says Steinfield. This means providing the space, support, and tools these 21st century educators need to do their best work as they move beyond the post-industrial model of education to guide and challenge students to engage in deeper learning.

“While growth in enrollment is also part of sustainability, it’s not about the numbers,” Steinfield says. “Rather, it’s about the school ‘hitting its stride.’” He looks forward to the school regaining its proper place as a national leader in Christian education. Part of the key to making this happen is equipping every parent, teacher, student, and alumnus to be able to share the DC narrative in a clear and winsome way, with anyone who asks about the school. “The DC promise,” Steinfield says, “is an excellent place to start.”

Another key element of sustainability that will help DC hit its stride is its early childhood education program. In the joyful and nurturing environment created by Becky Zaro, the new Director of the Early Childhood Center, and her staff, young learners build faith, knowledge, and confidence as they begin their journey to live lives of impact. The program, which now serves PK3, PK4, and Kindergarten students, will expand to include PK2 next year. Steinfield notes that this expansion is one way the school is working to partner with families to provide Christ-centered curriculum for early learners.

Sustainability, in the end, is all about DC fulfilling its promise. “We don’t see numbers,” Steinfield says, “We see a child who is making an impact.”
During DC’s Shark Tank-like Innovative Design Challenge last spring, students, Emily Chung and siblings James and Mary Schaefer, pitched their entrepreneurial concepts to parents and faculty. A campus coffee shop won the popular vote. Director of Innovation Jim Favino, and SAIL teacher Becky Pitofsky, coached the winning team of three students through the process of launching this new enterprise, The Grounds.

Students did all the research, planning, and budgeting required to write a business plan and established a partnership with Valero Coffee Roasters. The Grounds team figured out not only how to create a sustainable business model, but also how to meet strict COVID protocols to keep everyone safe.

After working hard all summer and through the fall, they opened The Grounds three weeks before Christmas to serve faculty, staff, and students. Like the students who launched The Armory, these students kept the purpose of this redemptive entrepreneurial enterprise in sharp focus. Their vision is to create “a welcoming community space that helps strengthen our school’s fellowship and sense of unity.” They want to offer an affordable, high-quality product in an inviting atmosphere. Their goal is to integrate core values such as community, worship, and friendship. Several ways they plan to do this are by offering open mic nights, displaying student artwork, and offering a safe space to hang out. And as for impact? “We hope to have a permanent impact at DC and keep The Grounds running for a long time!” they say.
Grace-Filled
COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

The DC community is saved by grace to serve with grace. Cultivating a culture of grace builds unity and fellowship within the DC community and also in student-parent relationships. When teachers and staff model the fruit of the Spirit in their interactions with students and with colleagues, students learn to show grace to one another too.

Grace is the foundation for every in-school relationship, and for DC’s external engagement with the wider community. DC’s external engagement is key to sustainability, education, and mission. Newly appointed Director of Community Partnerships, Shannon Schreiber ’02, is laying the groundwork for DC to be a good neighbor and engage in a real way with the community. She’s reaching out to area townships, libraries, sports venues, and more to find ways that DC can partner with, or be of service to, the community.

“Because we care about where we live, we’re continually looking outward to find ways we can serve and share resources,” Schreiber says. It’s about a willingness to stand out and connect DC with needs in the community.

A lot of this work has been going on behind the scenes so that, when the pandemic is over, students will be poised to make a difference. “I can’t wait to see what Shannon brings to the school,” says Steinfield.

In an increasingly interconnected world fragmented by sin, engagement for DC will also mean reaching out far beyond Delaware County. It’s perhaps this goal of a global education that brings all three of DC’s strategic initiatives together. “COVID has shown us that kids need to be prepared to engage as global citizens,” Steinfield says. As DC commits to increasing its own diversity in addition to nurturing a growing appreciation among students of global issues within the framework of a biblical worldview, DC will fulfill its promise to educate students to live lives of impact for Christ.
1. Enhanced cleaning and personal hygiene protocols
2. Reduced density across campus buildings and classrooms
3. Use of face coverings and personal protective equipment
4. Updated ventilation and use of abundant outside space
5. Physical distancing is possible because of DC's small size and expansive campus

THE SCHOOL COMMUNITY RALLIED AROUND OUR THEME AS WE IMPLEMENTED A WEB OF INTERVENTIONS THAT INCLUDED:

For the last 70 years DC has committed to the life-on-life impact of a Christian education. But how do we continue to remain true to this calling during a worldwide pandemic?

LEAN IN AND INNOVATE!

As a community, we reflected on our heritage and worked to fulfill our new DC Promise by making adjustments that provided us the opportunity to open school on time and in person.

Even more important, our efforts have kept DC open all academic year with no shutdowns due to the pandemic. This effort took untold hours of planning and careful communication to allow DC to open school on September 2, 2020.
DC – How did your job change when you accepted this new role?
Minda – “If anyone ever thought school nursing was merely band-aids and ice packs - COVID has proven them quite wrong!”
DC – How was DC able to be so successful in opening school and staying open?
Minda – “First, the collective responsibility of our community in implementing with fidelity our web of interventions - face coverings, handwashing, distancing, ventilation and density. I would also mention our teacher’s commitment to in person instruction as being the optimal format as well as their clear love for being physically present with their students. We had and still have wise, evidence-based guidance from four top medical advisors in the region and the excellent service of the Chester County Health Department to support us. The strong and committed support of the DC Board and Executive Team helped us navigate the seemingly endless God-given provision of resources to meet the ever changing and sometimes crazy demands of proposed public health guidance.”
DC – It certainly sounds like this was a full campus-wide effort!
Minda - “I wish everyone in the DC community could have the inside view I have had, to watch the Division Heads, Head of School, Facilities and IT staff, Athletic Department, administrative staff and faculty, work, serve, and adapt to make in person instruction a reality for our students. All this while exuding the passion they have for impacting the lives of our students. They have been stretched and wearied and spent more hours prepping than any other school year! They are my heros!”
DC – Why do you think DC was ready for the pandemic?
Minda – “One of our medical advisors mentioned early on that we would probably fare well in our endeavors because we are a faith-based school and accustomed to working in community. Those words have certainly proven to be true! The care and thoughtfulness of the members of this community for one another has been evident from day one of this most unique school year.”
DC – How have our student’s parents fared through the pandemic?
Minda - “Our parents are perhaps some of the most involved parents of any school I know. They have given by supporting our campus visitor policy, prayed for our teachers and staff, written notes of encouragement, and modified their traveling, going as far as to cancel trips, parties etc., just to support us in remaining open for in person instruction. We are so very thankful!”
DC – Thanks for sharing your insights and service to DC.

47 STUDENTS HAVE PARTICIPATED IN EXTENDED DISTANCE LEARNING
• 17 International students
• 18 Lower & Middle School
• 12 Upper School

As we look back on the challenges, we have gained strength by trusting in the provision of our Lord and in the words of Jeremiah 33:3 “Call to me and I will answer you and tell you great and unsearchable things you do not know”. We covet your prayers as the school year continues and we work to impact our students for Christ.
Forming a community that more fully reflects the vision of Romans 15:7 “Therefore, accept one another just as Christ also accepted us to the glory of God” requires ongoing work, self-examination, education, lamenting, and repentance. This is no less true for institutions like DC than it is for nations and individuals. When Head of School, Dan Steinfield initiated a conversation with Ray Garcia last February to explore questions of racial and socio-economic diversity and inclusion at DC, both men understood the urgency of change. While they knew there would be no quick fix, they also knew that a school-wide desire to prioritize making DC a more loving and hospitable place for all, based on a common commitment to being obedient to the Word of God and its principles of reconciliation, restoration, sacrificial love, justice, and unity, would bring progress.

Garcia, who began as DC’s new Director of Diversity and Inclusion in September, says steady progress will be achieved by meeting goals on a multi-year trajectory. The fact that this trajectory towards progress was already set at DC was one of the reasons Garcia felt it was right to accept the invitation to lead DC in this newly created position. “While there are certainly parts of our past we lament, DC has a strong foundation and history worth celebrating,” Garcia says. “I love what DC stands for—educating the whole child to grow in knowledge and also in their walk with God, for example, as well as its support of local churches.”

While he had no illusions about the scope of the undertaking, Garcia knew he would be leading a community ready to begin this work.

THE MAN GOD HAS CALLED
As he looks back, Garcia can see how God has been preparing him for this role. During his 15 years as a local youth pastor, several kids from his youth group were students at DC and Garcia has coached football at the school as well. “I’m also a product of education,” he says. “My mom was an educator.” But something far deeper has uniquely qualified him for the work in which he’s now engaged at DC. “My father was African American, my mother is an assimilation of white ethnicities, and my last name signals my hispanic heritage,” he says. “I’m white enough to feel comfortable walking into a room full of white people, and black enough to feel comfortable walking into a room full of black people. And when I walk into a room full of people speaking Spanish, they assume I understand. But I don’t know Spanish. And yet I don’t feel that I fit in any of those rooms.” Garcia laughs. “All that creates a beautiful mess—and this work is just an extension of my own process.’ I want to help DC students express themselves, but they need an inclusive, safe space to do this. They need to see adults who look like them who are teachers, administrators, mentors, and coaches so that they can envision how they can belong.”
Like many brown boys and girls, Garcia began questioning his racial identity when he was very young. "Where do I fit? How do I belong?" These questions also resonate with Garcia as a father. "I realized my own kids could go to DC and not see themselves reflected in many adult role models here. DC has the ability to have a far reach, he says, but the pieces aren’t yet in place to make that happen".

Garcia’s primary professional call is as Lead Pastor of Roxborough Church in Philadelphia. He and his wife Michelle also run The Philadelphia Project, a mission that partners with local churches to create transformative service opportunities. "The elders of the church saw this role at DC as an extension of what we do," Garcia says, "and I have great hope for this season." The four Garcia children—Isaiah, Nathan, Cadence, and Tommy—fully embrace the life of ministry and the joy that it brings.

THE WORK AHEAD

Garcia likens his work at DC to John the Baptist’s ministry of preparation. "The first piece is helping people to examine their hearts, explore cultural bias, and ask important—and sometimes hard—questions," he says. "The fact that we have a homogenous staff, for example, doesn’t make us bad, but the question is, have we lamented enough? We have to identify the reasons why we haven’t become diverse and at least lament these—and maybe repent as well."

The second step is one of action. "We need to hire folks who will increase our diversity," Garcia says, "but we need to hire them into a place that welcomes them. This is Kingdom kind of work. We’re preparing the way for people to lead at the highest levels of our school." A third piece of the work focuses on the student body. "We’re working on instilling a bit more cultural awareness this year," Garcia says, "and going forward we’ll be looking more deeply at curricula, chapel, and the spiritual trajectory as well as mentorships and internships." Although DC’s student body is already one of the most diverse of any private school in the area, the desire is for that to continue to grow. For growth to happen in an authentic way, we must reflect diversity in both racial and socio-economic status. "The horse and the cart come together," Garcia says, "but we have to have systems in place to sustain students whose families can’t afford a DC education."

Scholarships and tuition matching won’t be enough. "We need to figure out how to help students from moderate to low-income families afford not only tuition, but also full participation in the life of the school," Garcia cites the example of one student with limited means who had to choose between buying lunch and paying for extra-curricular activities. "She chose to have lunch every other day," he says. "No student should have to make that choice. We need to have a pool of resources available to sustain and retain these students." DC faculty and staff agree that choices such as this one should not be choices at all. As disciples of Christ, we must know when a member of the flock is in need and provide as we are able.

A CELEBRATION OF DIVERSITY

John the Baptist prepared the people of God for a seismic cultural and spiritual shift that would upend their expectations of what God was about to do in their midst. As he envisions what DC could look like in a decade or two, Garcia emphasizes how solid this groundwork being laid now needs to be. "These big changes will affect the culture of DC," he says. "If they don’t, we’ll only have become assimilated, not diversified."

Being part of a diverse and inclusive community is integral to the DC Promise—to students receiving an innovative and exemplary education rooted in Christ so that they are prepared for a life of impact in the diverse and multicultural world God created.

"In the national landscape today we can see the dangers of not doing this work," Garcia says. "We know what happens when we live in isolation from one another, but younger generations don’t know what it is to live in a world that’s not connected. Technology has given us access to world cultures, and we need to create space to celebrate our global connectedness." In time, with faithful hard work and prayer and God’s guidance, that celebration at DC will look more and more like John’s vision in Revelation 7:9.

Revelation 7:9

"After this I looked, and there before me was a great multitude that no one could count, from every nation, tribe, people and language, standing before the throne and before the Lamb. They were wearing white robes and were holding palm branches in their hands."
RUSS NIXON

Russ has always had a penchant for making lists. Accordingly, upon his retirement, we would like to honor him with several lists that offer a picture of his faithful work and his servant’s heart for DC over the years.

“When I think of Russ’s work and ministry at DC, I think of him as a culture changer. Who will not forget the auctions of the 80s and 90s when Russ made his famous appeal to bid on an item: “Remember, it’s for the school!” And, by the success of those spring events, most of us believed him. When he was the Director of Advancement, he convinced us that we were marketing the school by the way we did our teaching or our work about campus. Other times, it was Russ who walked about campus talking and encouraging us in our labors. Whether as the Athletic Director, or Advancement Leader, Russ believed with all his heart in the mission of the school and because of that, we, too, believed more in what we were called to do. The Lord certainly used him in my life and the life of the DC community.”

- Dr. George McFarland, Donor Relationships Manager

During his time at Wheaton, Thomas served as a resident assistant, a peer mentor, and was a member of the college’s Community Life Council.
Scott Bateman ’73 completed his 40th year of service at DC this past year, and has stepped into retirement. His contagious enthusiasm for learning, his desire to provide fun and memorable experiences in God’s creation, and his love for sharing the truths of Scripture with students inspired those same passions in countless DC students.

“If you ask any student who has attended DC’s Lower School in the last 40 years to share their most fond memories, you will undoubtedly hear a story about Mr.B. In his years at DC, Scott ignited an excitement for learning in his students through the passion he showed in each subject he presented. He consistently went above and beyond to develop positive relationships with his students that lasted far beyond their time in his classroom. His steadfast love for the Lord served as an example for his students and colleagues and filled his classroom with joy and excitement. Scott leaves a legacy that will be carried on in the life of Delaware County Christian School for many years to come.”

- Kevin McIntyre, Assistant Head of the Lower School
As a student, Scott was a “lifer” at DC, attending from kindergarten through 12th grade. A member of the Class of 1973, Scott noted that all of his classes had been in the mansion (upper campus) until the spring of his senior year, at which point classes moved into the then-new high school building. Scott observed that whenever there were needs, such as additional space, God always provided; thus the DC community learned, from its earliest days, to trust the Lord.

After Scott graduated from college, he taught at Timothy Academy in Philadelphia for 3 years, and then in 1980 God gave Scott the desire of his heart - a position at DC. For the next 40 years, Scott taught mostly 5th grade (with a few years of 6th grade). He stayed at DC for 40 years because the mission remained the same: to educate students who will serve God and impact the world through biblical thought and action. We caught up with Scott recently and talked with him about his years of impacting young lives at DC.

Q What is one of your earliest memories from your DC teaching experience?

It was amazing to teach alongside teachers who had greatly impacted me, such as Frank Roberts and Bud Gray. I kept thinking, “I can’t believe I’m a teacher with these influential, wonderful, great people.” I loved teaching 5th grade because I could develop special culminating experiences for the oldest elementary students. Having the freedom to begin some programs that would stick around for 40 years was really special. When I started thinking about taking my students camping, my principal, Lucy Johnston, told me to go for it. That was a great memory. I had camped all my life, and I wanted every kid to have that experience. In 1984 I started taking them to French Creek to provide a safe atmosphere that would give them confidence. In the early years, we borrowed tents from families, and then DC eventually invested in tents. I also got the chance to create the seashore unit. Again, I wanted kids to experience being at the beach and seeing God’s amazing creation firsthand; that’s so important. So, I started the Cape May trip as part of the seashore unit, and then, in 1988, I added the Cape Henlopen summer trips.

Q What advice would you give to teachers who are new to DC?

Each teacher is just a short stopping point along the way with the kids. Pray for their salvation and do your best in teaching them, and leave the results in the Lord’s hands. All the things you pray for a student might not happen in the year that you have them. Sometimes they will, and you can be excited for the moments when your desires for students are met; and sometimes you’ll see your prayers answered further down the road. Find joy and contentment in what you’re doing in each moment with students, and pour into them every last bit you can, and then trust the Lord and be at peace. DC has been my home and family for all my life. The Lord let me be a part of DC for all that time, and I am very thankful for that. I sometimes ask myself, ‘Did I do it well enough today?’ Yes, Scott, we know you did! Well done, good and faithful servant.

“Mr. B’s enthusiasm about every subject made me want to learn.”

“There are certain teachers you will remember your whole life, and Mr. B is one of them. What stands out most is that Mr. B made learning FUN. I still, to this day, remember facts about outcrops and quarries. Mr. B also took such a personal interest in his students’ lives and was invested in us, both inside and outside of school.”

“Mr. B always made learning about knowing the material, not about the grade. He also incorporated so many hands-on activities, like exploring the seashore and dissecting squids, that allowed us to experience what we were learning.”

Fall 2020 saw the launch of our newly expanded Early Childhood Center (PK3-K) and the first year of PK3 at DC! After opening school with 75 students, the ECC has grown to 84 students by January 2021 and added an additional PK3 section to meet interest in this grade and program. Next year DC will add PK2 and applications are coming in quickly. Praise the Lord!
THE ARTS

The Arts are an expression of human creative skill and imagination. Whether through painting, music, sculpture, acting, or other forms of expression, the arts help us to see the beauty that has been created through the generosity of our Father God Almighty. For He graces each of us with talents that are ours and ours alone. It is important that we share these gifts and talents for which He has bestowed upon us.

As the Covid-19 pandemic hit, we saw many cases in which the art sector has been shattered. Through much prayer and determination of DC’s Board, administrators and staff, the arts at DC have been able to redefine and reimagine their existing programs in order to bring to light the talents in which God has shared through members in our community.

Upper School

Among the many offerings at DC, this year the art program reintroduced ceramics after adding several pottery wheels to the art room. Both students and faculty have been lining up to learn how to throw the wheel and get their hands in the clay. Additionally, our 3D art offerings have increased as students dive into woodworking and metal smithing.

ARTIST IN RESIDENCE

DC was proud to launch the inception of an Artist in Residency program this fall. DC alum, Hannah Sun ’19 is a sophomore at Maryland Institute College of Art and Design and is currently working with Mrs. Coats and Mr. Taber twice a week. She is learning about gallery curation as the staff of DC added several gallery spots around campus this fall to showcase student artwork. In addition, Hannah is doing virtual classes in the newly-remodeled “Senior Studio” above the Upper School Art room. She completes her coursework online and then spends time with our students giving demonstrations of her artwork in 3D modeling, woodworking, sculpture and graphic design.

BAND

The Upper School Concert Band used flexible arrangements as a way in which to work during these non-traditional times. During the fall, the ensemble was split into four smaller ensemble groups each preparing chamber music pieces. Both the full band and the ensembles were recorded and these recordings were shared with the DC community in replacement of the annual holiday performance.

THEATRE

This spring, the DC theatre program will tackle a full-scale musical performance of You’re A Good Man Charlie Brown. Based off of the classic comic strip we know and love, Charlie Brown is told through a series of vignettes, allowing for smaller rehearsals and adequate spacing on stage. This production, like the MS play, will be filmed and released digitally in March. With the help of the DC Red Team and Tech Crew, the production will tackle new challenges while delivering high quality performances that are indicative of a DC musical. Please watch for more information about ticket sales.
Middle School

Middle School Art classes were presented with several challenging projects this fall which they accomplished with great merit. Among them were the sixth graders complex drawing arrangements from life. Seventh graders focused on negative and positive space to scale-up large images of whimsical and wonderful frogs. The eighth grade brought to life images of God’s bountiful glory of the heavens, using chalk pastels to create sunrise and sunsets.

Band

For the first time, Middle School Band was split into two groups to accommodate sixth grade players who missed in-person ensemble instruction last spring. Sixth graders focused on skill consolidation by working through method books while playing select small ensemble pieces. Our seventh and eighth grade students had a more traditional approach culminating in recordings that were shared with the community in lieu of the December concert.

Theatre

DC Middle School students were able to participate in a variety of theatre instruction this fall. Sixth graders participated in pantomime and improvisation classes, which culminated in the creation of short silent films. The 7th and 8th grade students rehearsed and produced two one-act plays entirely in class, spending only two Saturdays filming in anticipation of a digital release.

Middle School & Upper School Choir

"The Masked Singers" took on a whole new meaning this year at DC. Both the Middle and Upper School choirs made beautiful music behind masks and staging themselves six feet apart. Choir in both divisions met the challenge and continued to produce exceptional music shared with our community through virtual concerts during the month of December. As most choirs have had to go silent amidst the pandemic, DC choirs met the challenges of the pandemic and helped to bring joy through song and worship.
The theme for this year’s lower school art program, "Art Across America," takes us on a journey across our great country from sea to shining sea. Beginning the year, students studied sea life, expressing their studies of the underwater world through their artwork. Fifth graders, for example, took to their scuba gear and dove deep for inspiration to create sea life themed clay pot sculptures. They learned the skills of rolling, shaping, and decorating through this experience.

Our third graders put on their imaginary boots and trudged across the Midwest enroute to the Heartland. Students studied the great works of Grant Wood, a regionalist from Iowa. He referred the beauty of the countryside and farmland to a grandmother’s quilt. The children learned about God’s creation from different types of landscape and the layers of land - foreground, middle ground, and background. They rendered their artwork with oil pastels and fabric swatches to resemble the quilted farmlands. Students added texture with decorated cardboard building structures.

All of our Lower School students took full advantage of the beautiful grounds at DC to use as their classroom. Students learned about the Hudson River School artists and Plein Air painting. How blessed we are to have this school, with both its internal and external space from which to learn, thrive, and grow.

AFTER SCHOOL FUN REIMAGINED

During October and November, the Lower School hosted grade level after school Fall Fun Days for 2nd-5th grade in lieu of traditional after school programming. Students learned about apple varieties, how to build a campfire, and baked a yummy apple treat on the coals of the fire they built. First Grade participated in Christmas Craft Club. The students created wooden mangers and decorated the characters in fabric. This time of fun and fellowship was to remind the students of the birth of Jesus, and the acts of humility, kindness, servanthood, and generosity coming alive in Christ’s coming to mankind.
As a result of COVID-19, the Knights football season was never able to get off the ground due to opt-outs within the KASL league of schools. Never deterred, Coach Lloyd Hill and his staff decided in spite of the obstacles before them, they would take this season to grow with one another, building their bodies through strength training, while also building their hearts and minds through character and spiritual development. The team had intense workouts both in the weight room and on the practice field. They also spent time in devotions and watched and studied film. Coach Hill believes the ultimate payoff to this season was the camaraderie built amongst team members which helped to solidify the foundation that will produce a fantastic season next year with stronger, character laden young men.

The DC Cross Country team built their foundation with a solid conditioning schedule long before the start of the season. Even with strict Covid-19 pandemic regulations in place, the cross country team was able to train well by running alone and maintaining distance while still supporting their teammates. Two runners became part of the coveted 500 Mile Club in the same offseason. Senior, Michael Rhine, and freshman, Mary Schaefer, successfully completed this task on August 29, 2020. Just as impressively, a number of other team members joined the 300 Mile Club, rounding out an impressive group of young runners primed for future success. In the BAL Cross Country Championships, the DC girls were led by Mary Schaefer with a 6th place finish overall. She was closely followed by Liza Lee in 7th place. In the boys race, Jude Metricarti was the first Knight to cross the finish line. In the District Championships at Tyler State Park, the girl’s team finished with an impressive 3rd place overall. Bethany Jacox led the Lady Knights with an 8th place finish. The boys finished 5th overall and were again led by Jude Metricarti’s 14th place finish. Bethany Jacox was named a state qualifier and ran in Hershey, PA in the PIAA State 5000 meter race.

VARSITY BOYS SOCCER
(Overall Record 10-4)

From the very start of the season, the DC Knights varsity boys soccer team had the look of a team on a mission to finish what was left undone in 2019. This year’s team had several returning senior starters and an array of talented underclassmen. Expectations were high and the Knights did not disappoint, finishing an augmented regular season with a 9-3 record, earning the second seed in District 1 playoffs. Looming ahead in post season play were two well-known rivals, Dock Mennonite and Faith Christian, both who stood in the path of the Knights in 2019.

In the first round of playoffs, the Knights were able to avenge their 2019 loss against Dock by defeating them 2-1 in a well-attended yet socially distanced contest at home on DC’s newly minted turf field. The win granted DC a berth in District Finals for the second straight year. Waiting for the Knights was top seeded Faith Christian, who were defeated by the Knights in the first round of the 2019 playoffs. They too felt like they had unfinished business. In a well-fought contest on a dimly lit field in Sellersville, the Knights once again fell short to the eventual state champions Faith Christian Lions squad by a score of 1-0.

VARSITY GIRLS SOCCER

(Overall Record: 4-7)

Like most athletic teams at DC, the Lady Knights entered the 2020 season with a lot of unknowns. Poised to better their season from a year ago, they began strong with back-to-back wins against Phil-Mont Christian and Christian Academy. They would best both these teams again later in the season. With limited teams competing because of the global pandemic, they found themselves faced with tough competition from both Dock Mennonite and Faith Christian, teams they fell to during both home and away meetings. With the leadership of six seniors, the team built upon the lessons learned both on and off the field and secured a playoff berth as a 4th seed in District Playoffs. In the district playoff game against Dock Mennonite, DC fought hard but lost a heartbreaker 1-0.

VARSITY FIELD HOCKEY

(Overall Record 2-9-1)

Led by a spirited group of seniors, the field hockey team featured a consolidated and shuffled league schedule, being one of only five teams willing to compete this fall. With such a schedule, each team played the others three times. Featuring a nice blend of all classes, seniors through freshmen, this year’s squad showed a lot of grit and fought hard all season. Highlights included two strong wins and a hard-fought tie against Plumstead Christian and two excruciatingly close, one-goal losses against Bristol. Even against superior competition, the Knights fought hard, limiting league powerhouse and eventual BAL champ Dock Mennonite to three goals in the late-season contest.

VARSITY GIRLS TENNIS
(Overall Record: 8-0)

Coming off a storybook 2019 season, this year’s DC girls tennis squad was challenged in the off season when they learned that Coach Turner and Coach Annino would not be returning in 2020. To fill the gap, DC tagged Coaches Connor Power and Maya Neal to lead this talented group of tennis athletes. The team did not miss a beat, finishing the season 8-0 heading into the BAL playoffs. They proceeded to win the BAL Championship and subsequently defeated Lower Moreland to capture this year’s PIAA District 1-AA Championship. The win secured a spot in the PIAA State Tournament where the Knights lost to tennis powerhouse Moravian Academy.

VARSITY GOLF

The 2020 DC Golf team endured a difficult season that included not having any matches at our home course (Applebrook) and a sporadic schedule with limited matches. Despite this, the team showed promise and growth throughout the campaign. With no golfers being lost to graduation this year, we look forward to seeing a return of our entire golf roster a bit more seasoned and ready to go for 2021.
A worldwide pandemic may have altered the normal homecoming festivities, but it didn’t dampen the energy and enthusiasm of the DC community. Students, faculty, and staff participated in a week-long series of events to showcase their DC pride. There was something for everyone from spirit days, grade-level outdoor activities and games, to sidewalk art drawings, special snacks, and fall sports competitions. The week culminated in the annual Friday night Powder Puff game won by the senior class and on Saturday concluded with Senior Athlete Awards and Recognition on the newly installed turf field.
CELEBRATING EUGENE VICKERS P’60’65’68’75GP’92

On Veteran’s Day, November 11, 2020, alumni parent and Navy veteran, Eugene Vickers turned 105 years of age. Mr. Vickers and his family were one of the founding thirty-six families that helped to establish DC back in 1950. He has been a faithful friend and supporter for more than 70 years. On Veteran’s Day, the Newtown Square community and DC honored Mr. Vickers with a drive-by parade and birthday celebration. The Knight Tones Select Choir serenaded and presented Mr. Vickers with birthday cards from alumni and students.

TECHNOLOGY & YOUR PRE-TEEN/TEEN PARENT WEBINAR

On December 5, 2020, DC families had the opportunity to listen to current parent and expert Dr. Leonard Sax MD and Ph.D, who presented a webinar on managing teens and technology. Dr. Sax focuses his work on evidence-based parent strategies to best manage the use of technology in the life of our children. As a leading thinker, author, and keynote speaker on Christian parenting, Dr. Sax has been a guest on the TODAY show, CNN, PBS, Fox News, NPR, the BBC and the Eric Metaxas Show. He has authored books including; Why Gender Matters, Boys Adrift, Girls on the Edge, and the New York Times bestseller, The Collapse of Parenting. It’s not too late if you missed the webinar. Visit DC’s website to receive a recording of the webinar at dccs.org/parenting.

AFTER SCHOOL FUN

During October and November, the Lower School reimagined after school programming. Fall Fun Days were an opportunity for students to gather by grade level to learn about apple varieties, how to build a campfire, and baked a yummy apple treat on the coals of the fire they built.
THE ARMORY
DC’S NEW SCHOOL STORE OPENS
The soft launch of a new school store, led by students through the DC SAIL program, has opened in Lowrie Hall. The Armory features an assortment of DC sweatshirts, jackets, hats, candy and seasonal bundles. The store also offers local honey varieties from Pieters Apiary. The Armory will be open daily during upper school lunches and again on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 2:50-3:30 for Upper School students to shop. Please check with the school prior to visiting the store for updated store hours and for any campus restrictions due to COVID-19 pandemic protocols.

COFFEE ANYONE?
The Grounds is now open! Stemming from the spring 2020 Innovative Design Challenge, The Grounds is a student run coffee shop serving Valerio Coffee and other tasty treats during DC Time. Students can purchase coffee, mocha’s, and teas including seasonal favorites. According to Junior, Emily Chung, “The biggest lesson I learned from starting The Grounds this year was to be flexible. So much has changed from our original plan, and it’s been a challenge for us to go with the flow and adjust our plan according to what works, rather than trying to force something that just doesn’t make sense, especially in Covid times.”

WELCOME BACK!
Head of School, Dan Steinfield handed out coffee to Back to School drivers and hosted virtual “Head of School Coffee Events” in the fall.

BUZZING WITH KNOWLEDGE
Beekeeper and DC grandparent Ed Pieters visited with second graders to teach about honeybees and the job of a beekeeper. Mr. Pieters shared about the roles of the bees in the hive, the life of the queen and the important job of the worker bees. Students then played a pollinator game taking turns playing the role of the bees traveling from flower to flower in the field, collecting pollen at each one.
This fall the Multicultural Alliance hosted a “Donuts and Discussion.” Prior to hosting this event, student leaders prepared and trained how to lead conversations about some of today’s most pressing societal issues. Students joined multiple breakout sessions to engage in meaningful discussion focused on politics and voting as a believer in Christ. Much of the objective was to build unity despite who you were voting for and further build skills in how to have difficult conversations. The event was very successful with over 60 members of our community in attendance, including ten faculty. This year’s student leaders are seniors Endiah Johnson, Jordan Mitchell, and Joseph Collins; and juniors Eowyn Oh, and Emily Chung.

DECORATING WITH CHALK
Upper School Students, led by Upper School Art teacher Christian Taber, decorated the entrance of the School during #DCSTRONG week.

MIDDLE SCHOOL ROBOTICS
Expanding Minds Beyond the Classroom, DC offers an array of school club offerings. Middle School Robotics traditionally partakes in Vex Robotics competitions. While times are uncertain about possible competitions this year, our students have remained busy designing, building and coding.
“SOUPER” COMMITTED TO SERVING OTHERS
Fifth grade students at the Lower campus have a heart to serve. After reaping the final harvest from the Lower Campus vegetable garden, they teamed up with Mrs. Ludwig to make squash soup and get well cards for members in the community who are recovering from illness and surgery.

CLASSROOMS EXPANDED
Our Lower Campus has utilized our outdoor space in new and creative ways this fall with both outdoor tents and natural learning spaces.

A VISIT FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
On October 9th, Frank Brogan, Assistant Secretary of the United States Department of Education visited our school to learn more about our health and safety reopening plan. He was impressed with the use of our web of intervention and our use of outdoor classrooms. He is visiting schools all across the US that have remained open during COVID-19.

DINO DIG DAY
Our students enjoyed a Science unit on dinosaurs with a Dino Dig Day, complete with measuring footprints, excavating chocolate chips, and unearthing fossils in sand.
DC SERVES THE GREATER COMMUNITY

“You will be enriched in every way to be generous in every way, which through us will produce thanksgiving to God.” 2 Corinthians 9:11. This year, our lower and upper school campuses came together to support the efforts of the Chester County Food Bank. Students in all grades participated by collecting donations of non-perishable food items which were personally delivered in time for Thanksgiving food distribution.

SENIOR PARKING SPOTS

Our Senior Class kicked off this year with a new twist, creating their own custom painted parking spots. In late summer, the Senior Class Board proposed to Mr. Dixon the idea of gathering together, socially distant, to start a new tradition and leave their legacy. Future classes are excited to carry on this tradition.

With all the adjustments our students have had to make around the pandemic, Mr. Dixon emphasized that this is a wonderful example of “making lemonade out of lemons.”
Recognition of Faithful Commitment

On October 17th we gathered with alumni and alumni parents to recognize six individuals who served DC for many years.

God blessed us with a picture perfect fall day while we took some time to show our appreciation to Scott Bateman ’73, Peggy Bell, Russ Nixon ’72, Chuck Patterson, Janet Smyth, and Linda Unger. Over 100 people gathered on the new turf field to honor their contributions. These faithful servants impacted decades of DC students as teachers, coaches, mentors, and living examples of Christ’s love in action.

We wish you could have all been with us. If you were unable to join, a video recording from the event is posted on our Facebook page bit.ly/OctAlumVideo.

ALUMNI PRAYER OPPORTUNITIES

THE KNIGHT’S BRIEFING
Over the last two years we have heard from a number of alumni parents who desire a better connection with DC and with the alumni community. While we’ve incorporated several initiatives to improve that connection, we also wanted to include some form of regular communication. The Knight’s Briefing is a monthly prayer call hosted by Dr. George McFarland P’00’03’06. This call is held on the second Tuesday of each month at 7pm and includes a devotional, an update about events on our campuses with a time for response, and a time of prayer for the school. To participate in this Zoom meeting go to bit.ly/KnightsBriefing.

STRENGTHENING DC DADS
Another great opportunity to pray together is Strengthening DC Dads. This group is open to alumni, alumni parents, and dads of current students. They meet the 3rd Tuesday morning of the month via Zoom at bit.ly/DCdadsPray.

FOR MORE INFORMATION ON THESE PRAYER MEETINGS CONTACT THE ALUMNI OFFICE AT ALUMNI@DCCS.ORG.

2011

Emily Homan '11 recently presented to our 3rd graders about her career as a geologist and her work with geotechnical engineers. As part of DC’s STEM curriculum (Science, Technology, Engineering, Math), students had been studying geology and its role in identifying soil types and how to prepare the soil for building different types of structures. Emily talked about the process of a project from start to finish which helped the students conceptualize the Design Cycle, which is the foundation for learning in STEM. Emily shared some photos of her in the field which sparked a lot of interest and conversation.

2012

Jessica Pruette '12 Since graduation Jessica has continued to cultivate DC connections in both her professional and personal life. She’s currently leading a Bible study in West Chester with Emily Bronkema '14 which includes a number of DC alumni. "As each one has received a special gift, employ it in serving one another as good stewards of the manifold grace of God."

1 Peter 4:10
DC has been richly blessed by the sharing of gifts and talents from members of our faithful community. During a time of great challenge for us as a global community, the DC family has unified in support of the Fund for DC and its transformative role in supporting the programs and services we provide our students, faculty and staff. In addition to our annual campaign efforts, we saw a spiritual calling from members of our community who supported specific initiatives that helped to enhance our daily offerings. Two projects completed through these additional gifts included the new athletic turf field and the COVID-19 Emergency Aid Fund.

Like so many, families in our DC community have faced challenges and numerous obstacles stemming from the COVID-19 pandemic. To meet the unforeseen challenges and immediate needs of some in our community, the COVID-19 Emergency Aid Fund was developed. With fifty-five generous supporters, this fund enabled DC to provide additional aid to families who, due to the pandemic, were unsure if continued enrollment at DC was possible. These and many other efforts led to the enrollment growth we have seen in the 20-21 school year. We thank those who have been called to use their gifts to serve others as faithful stewards of God’s grace.
When our athletes walk onto the new field they light up. They’re proud that this is our field. We keep everything to a high standard at DC, and this fantastic new facility is another reflection of our commitment to excellence.”

-Mike Pinelli, Assistant Athletic Director
The long-awaited turf field was ready by mid-September for DC soccer and field hockey teams to play their first home games of the season. “The state-of-the-art facility enables athletes to play a faster game on its level surface, which has great bounce”, Pinelli says. The new field is one of the nicer facilities in the area, and Pinelli laughs when he says players sometimes grumble now about having to play on grass. “I tell them it’s a reminder to be thankful and stay humble,” he says. The field makes an athletic director’s life easier, too. “It was tough to schedule that lower field, which used to be a pond. Whenever it rained, we had to figure out where to move the game and last season we could only use it two or three times.”

“We’ve been wanting and praying for this facility for a long time,” Pinelli says, and he and Athletic Director Reggie Parks are grateful to Head of School Dan Steinfeld for taking the initiative to make it happen and to the entire DC community—athletes, parents, and donors. DC athletes are excited to play their first season of lacrosse on the new field this spring, and the baseball and softball teams will also be able to use it for their practices. “There’s lots of opportunity for the school in general to use this new facility,” Pinelli says, “including lower school development clinics, summer camps, and more. Part of the vision is to use the field to bring the community together.”

DC officially dedicated the new field and honored senior athletes in a combined celebration at the end of the fall season. “We wanted to honor their hard work,” Pinelli says. “After years of playing on grass, they get the bragging rights of being the first to play on the new field.” Pinelli and his wife are looking forward to their newborn son experiencing all that DC has to offer.

“DC is an amazing place to grow in your faith, to develop as an athlete, an artist, an entrepreneur—it’s a great community, where we prepare students for a life of impact through an innovative and exemplary education rooted in Christ.”
Planted in the soil of Truth, watered by the generosity of our donors, and warmed by the Son –
This is the soil where the seeds of a DC education take hold,
This is why we believe that what’s in the soil matters.

WHAT’S IN THE SOIL MATTERS

Teach us to number our days aright, that we may gain a heart of wisdom.
Psalm 90:12
Do not be anxious for anything; by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your requests to God. And the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus.
Philippians 4:6

Finally, be strong in the Lord and in His mighty power. Put on the full armor of God so that you can take your stand against the devil’s schemes.
Ephesians 6:10-11

Don’t let anyone look down on you because you are young, but set an example for the believers in speech, in life, in love, in faith and in purity.
1 Timothy 4:12

May the God who gives endurance and encouragement give you a spirit of unity among yourselves as you follow Christ Jesus.
Romans 15:5

Glorify the Lord with me, let us exalt His name together.
Psalm 34:3

Do not let any unwholesome talk come out of your mouths, but only what is helpful for building others up according to their needs, that it may benefit those who listen.
Ephesians 4:29

You are the light of the world—let your light shine before men, that they may see your good deeds and praise your Father in heaven.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN REDIRECTING YOUR STATE TAXES TO ASSIST STUDENTS IN RECEIVING A DC EDUCATION?

Contributions made through the EDUCATIONAL IMPROVEMENT TAX CREDIT (EITC) provide financial aid to qualified students who attend an eligible scholarship organization, like Delaware County Christian School.

WOULD YOU LIKE YOUR PA TAXES TO SUPPORT A PROGRAM YOU BELIEVE IN?

Contributions made through the Opportunity Scholarship Tax Credit (OSTC) program support DC students who live in neighborhoods with low-achieving public schools (bottom 15% in Pennsylvania). When an approved individual or business agrees to participate in either the EITC and/or OSTC programs for two consecutive tax years, they may be eligible for a tax credit equal to 90% of the total contribution.

FOR MORE INFORMATION CONTACT CARTER SKEEL, DIRECTOR OF DEVELOPMENT AT CSKEEL@DCCS.ORG

We have found the EITC program to be a perfect marriage of supporting an institution that we care deeply about and being prudent and effective in our charitable giving. It allows DC to provide financial aid to families that could otherwise not afford access to Christian education while we receive a 90% tax credit. Another way of looking at it is that it allows us to donate to scholarships at DC for ten cents on the dollar. That makes it an easy decision for us. We know the program sounds too good to be true; but we’re here to tell you that it’s real!”
