Wausau School District Literacy Vision

Wausau School District students will be at or above grade level in reading, writing, speaking, and listening by the end of third grade and thereafter. Students will be reflective, independent, effective communicators who are prepared citizens motivated to continue their learning.

To achieve this vision, we will consistently...

- Ensure student-centered literacy instruction that is comprehensive and grounded in research.
- Provide strong differentiated core instruction with timely intervention.
- Use and communicate multiple sources of assessment data to monitor student progress and inform instruction.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE ARTS SCOPE and SEQUENCE

Introduction

The Scope and Sequence states expectations for students for specific grade levels from pre-kindergarten through eighth grade. These expectations have been compiled not only from a variety of resources, but also from the experience of teachers working with students from the Wausau School District. They have been aligned with the National Common Core English Language Arts Standards, which Wisconsin formally accepted in June 2010.

The Scope and Sequence is a living document that will continue to evolve as we learn and grow together as educators.

SCOPE and SEQUENCE DEFINITION of TERMS

“Reading skills and strategies are not the same. A strategy is a behavior or thought process a reader uses to construct meaning especially when the reader is confused. A skill is an item of information, such as a letter sound, ending, or vowel combination. Skills are important and need to be taught, but they are useless if the student does not have the necessary strategies to use the skills.” Jan Richardson, The Next Step in Guided Reading, Scholastic 2009.

Explanation of X within the Scope and Sequence:

Reading instruction is a continuum. As such, it is necessary to adjust and scaffold instruction on most skills, strategies and concepts according to what is grade and ability appropriate for the students. The X means that the skill or strategy is taught in the grade listed. In some cases, this should be mastered based on grade appropriate expectations. In other cases, the skill or strategy will be taught again the following year, in a more sophisticated manner.

At times, skills or strategies can be more easily measured. There is often a clear marker for mastery. For example, naming the 26 letters of the alphabet can be taught and monitored with a clearly defined marker of mastery. Most phonics and decoding skills can be measured specifically. In these areas, the final X indicates mastery.

When the X continues to higher-grade levels, this is an indication that the skill or strategy will deepen in complexity or understanding. A good example of this would be metacognitive comprehension strategies.

Explanation of XE, XM, XL:

- XE: will be found sometimes on the last X in a row. In this case, the skill has been taught in previous years. The beginning of the grade with XE should be used to review and firm the skill or strategy. Mastery is expected early in this school year (September, October, November).
- XM: This skill should be introduced for the first time in the middle of the school year (December, January, February).
- XL: This skill should be introduced by spring of that school year (March, April, May).

Explanation of the Shaded Boxes:

Most comprehension strategies are taught in every grade with the exception of pre-k. However, some strategies are given special emphasis to ensure students develop a solid understanding of the strategy. Un-shaded boxes require that the strategy be modeled, practiced and reinforced. Shaded boxes indicate years where instruction of the specific skill or strategy should be more heavily emphasized.

Wausau School District
PK-8 Literacy Power Standards
BUILDING A COMMON LANGUAGE
STRENGTHENING INSTRUCTIONAL PRACTICE

Phonological Awareness

Phonological awareness is an understanding of the sounds and structure of spoken language. Phonemic awareness is the ability to hear, identify, and manipulate individual sounds (phonemes) in spoken words. Phonemic awareness is a subcategory of phonological awareness (Cohen & Cheyney, 2005). Being able to distinguish the sounds in our environment, including the specific letter sounds of the spoken language, help us to understand and navigate our environment and learn to read.

Phonics/Word Study/Spelling

Phonics instruction teaches students the relationships between the letters (graphemes) of written language and the individual sounds (phonemes) of spoken language. Phonics is a necessary component of both reading and spelling instruction (Cohen & Cheyney, 2005). Understanding the relationships between letters and sounds helps us to communicate ideas through reading and writing. Word study helps us to understand consistencies within the written language system which allows us to master the recognition, spelling, and meaning of words (Bear, Invernizzi, Templeton & Johnston, 2004).

Fluency

Fluency is the ability to interpret and read text with appropriate rate, accuracy, and expression. Fluency helps us to maintain comprehension and understand the interconnectedness of spoken and written language.

Vocabulary

Vocabulary refers to the words we must know in order to be able to communicate effectively. It includes oral vocabulary (the words we use in listening and speaking) and reading vocabulary (the words we recognize or use in print). Vocabulary helps us make sense of the words we see in print (i.e. if the word is part of our oral vocabulary, we are more likely to recognize it in the text when we read). Vocabulary also helps us to comprehend. We cannot understand what we are reading without knowing what most of the words mean (National Institute for Literacy, 2003).

Comprehension

Comprehension is making meaning and creating understanding. "Comprehension is the goal of reading. When good readers comprehend text, they are involved in an active, ongoing process that involves tapping into their own experiences and their knowledge of vocabulary and language structures. Good readers continually add information, modify, adjust, question, and make connections as they read. They employ a conscious set of strategies to think their way through the text" (Bensen & Cummins, 2005).

Phonological/Phonemic Awareness
Definition of Phonemic Awareness	Phonemic awareness is the ability to hear, identify, and manipulate (work with) individual sounds (phonemes) in spoken words. It is a subcategory of phonological awareness. Spoken words consist of individual sounds or phonemes. Words can be segmented (pulled apart) into sounds, blended (put back together), and manipulated (added, deleted, and substituted).
Why Students Need Phonemic Awareness	Phonemic awareness is critical to reading and directly leads to word reading, comprehension, and spelling. Students need to learn how to use their phonemic awareness to blend sounds to read words and to segment words into sounds to spell them.
How We Can Teach Phonological/Phonemic Awareness	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Begin with the whole and move to the part (Words—Syllables—Onsets/Rimes—Phonemes). • Include, rhyme, alliteration, and intonation. • Isolate, identify, and categorize phonemes. • Blend and segment phonemes. • Add, delete, and substitute phonemes. • Begin with auditory phonemic awareness activities and link sounds to letters as soon as possible. • Use letters to manipulate phonemes and help students apply their knowledge of phonemic awareness when reading and writing. • Instruction in phonemic awareness should comprise no more than 18-20 hours of a total reading program (ongoing—6 min./day until mastered).
Suggestions for Students Who Struggle with Phonological/Phonemic Awareness	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Model the correct pronunciation and mouth position and encourage students to “feel it in their mouth.” • Use picture segmenting and blending. • Use Elkonin boxes to help children hear sounds in words. • Teach sounds along with letters as soon as possible to help students see how phonemic awareness relates to their reading and writing. • If students do not know letter names, teach them along with phonemic awareness. • Use the Starlit kit for a sequence of instructional lessons used to intervene with students. • Have students’ hearing checked.
What Phonological/Phonemic Awareness Instruction Looks Like Throughout the Day	Phonological/phonemic awareness can be taught in large group activities with songs, chants, nursery rhymes, and name games. Phonological/phonemic awareness can be taught in Word Study through picture sorting. Phonological/phonemic awareness can be practiced in centers. Students can sort. Laminated pictures cut into the number of pieces equal to the sounds in each word can be used. Alphabet toys can be sorted. Snap cubes and Elkonin boxes can be used to teach hearing sounds in words. Transition times can be used to teach phonological/phonemic awareness. For example: Line up if your name starts with /m/. Have a poem of the week that students listen to every day and make substitutions for sounds in words or rhyming words. For example: Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall. Replacing the underlined letters with the /b/ sound would be Bumpty Bumpty bat on a ball.

Phonics
Definition of Phonics	Phonics is the relationship between the letters (graphemes) of written language and the individual sounds (phonemes) of spoken language.
Why Students Need Phonics	Phonics instruction improves word reading skills and text comprehension, especially for kindergartners, first graders, and older struggling readers. An instructional model that includes phonics should have a research base that includes how students learn as well as what they learn. The phonics component should be both integrated and interactive.
How We Can Teach Phonics	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Teach accurate and rapid identification of the letters of the alphabet. • Teach the alphabetic principle (an understanding that the sounds (phonemes) in spoken language are represented in a sequential order by letters (graphemes) in written language. • Teach phonics elements (e.g., letter sound correspondence, spelling patterns, and meaningful word parts). • Provide instruction that is systematic and explicit. • Include practice in reading texts. • Give substantial practice applying phonics as students read and write. • Monitor students' progress to inform instruction.
Suggestions for Students Who Struggle with Phonics	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Give students the opportunity to play with and manipulate letters (alphabet blocks, tiles, plastic letters). • Activities involving objects, pictures, and the manual alphabet (sign language) strengthen sound/symbol associations • Color highlighting of word parts can be helpful. • When introducing vowels it is important to include both long and short vowel sounds. • Use games to help children automatize sound symbol connections. • Use the vowel pattern chart. It is highly visual. • Move from familiar words to unfamiliar words. • Have a word wall system that is consistent from grade to grade (color coding and placement). • Do a quick daily review based on students' needs (Franklin Quik Lit). • Have students "be" the letter and make words. • Have students locate and frame specific pattern words in a Big Book. • Use songs and gestures.
What Phonics Instruction Looks Like Throughout the Day	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Phonics can be taught in large group activities with songs, chants, nursery rhymes and name games. • Phonics can be taught during Shared Reading, Guided Reading, the Daily Message, or Interactive Writing. • Phonics can be taught in Word Study through pictures and sorting. • Phonics can be practiced at centers using pictures, alphabet tiles, alphabet blocks, plastic letters, letter stamps, and playdough letters. • Transition times can be used to teach phonics, i.e., "Tell your thinking partner how to change cat to bat before you get in line." • Phonics is practiced when children are encoding (translating sounds into letters) and is directly related to decoding (changing letters into sounds). Writing and reading are reciprocal processes. • Students are using personal and class word walls.
How We Can Assess/Progress Monitor Phonics	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Wisconsin Reading First Academy Binder, Assessment and Evaluation of Data 8-3, 8-4 ✓ Wisconsin Reading First Academy Binder, Phonics, Vowel Patterns Using Pseudowords: Informal Assessment, p. 4-37 ✓ Informal observational data from large/small group work ✓ Mapping of Instruction to Achieve Instructional Priorities: Phonics ✓ Beginning and Advanced Phonics Assessments ✓ Fountas and Pinnell materials, Focus on Phonics by Wendy Cheyney and Judith Cohen ✓ DIBELS

Fluency
Definition of Fluency	Fluency is the ability to read accurately, quickly, expressively, with good phrasing, and with comprehension. Fluency occurs at 4 levels of processing – letter, word, phrase/sentence and text. There are 6 dimensions of fluency – rate, phrasing, intonation, pausing, stress and integration.
Why Students Need Fluency	Studies show a strong correlation between reading fluency and reading comprehension. Fluency is the bridge from decoding to comprehension.
How We Can Teach Fluency	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Model with Read Alouds while being explicit about what fluent readers do • Explicit teaching of the dimensions of fluency • Provide opportunities for repeated oral reading with specific feedback for improvement • Choral Reading • Echo Reading • Readers' Theater • Tape Assisted Reading • Radio Reading • Automatic reading of sight words and high frequency words • Prosody Cards
Suggestions for Students Who Struggle with Fluency	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Be certain that text level is appropriate • Short, frequent, extra practice with the teacher or aide using independent level text • Sight word and high frequency flashcards • Fluency phrase cards • Phrase progression reading • Chunked texts • Teach students to self-regulate • Progress monitor at least every 2 weeks • Students chart their progress to build confidence
What Fluency Instruction Looks Like Throughout the Day	During your Read Aloud you ask students to listen for your fluent reading and talk about what it sounds like. When working with guided groups you listen to a student read and give feedback on fluency. It's giving feedback that leads to improved fluency. Have a poem of the week that students reread each day at the start/end of the day and during transition times. Work with your music teacher to connect fluency in singing with fluency in reading. Address fluency goals with students in reading conferences. Use some word study time to practice high frequency words. Have students practice Readers' Theater scripts during independent work time.
How We Can Assess/Progress Monitor Fluency	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Running Records including a fluency rubric ✓ Taped readings of students ✓ One minute timed readings with instructional level text ✓ One minute timed readings with grade level text and norms ✓ Informal data from guided reading and reading conferences ✓ Student self-assessments
Management and Troubleshooting	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • You will want to develop and use a record keeping system that will help guide your planning and instruction based on identified needs. Once you have identified the students' needs you can think about forming temporary, alternative guided groups based on fluency needs. Kids at different reading levels may have the same fluency needs. • Be sure to use familiar or independent level material if students are working independently. You can use instructional level if they are working with a teacher, but never use material that is too difficult. • After you have done your assessments and know the needs of each student, form temporary groups based on needs. Identify the area of focus, instructional plan, who delivers it, the resources needed and measure of effectiveness.

Vocabulary
Definition of Vocabulary	Vocabulary is words, in single units or in phrases that carry meaning. Individuals have expressive vocabularies (speaking) and receptive vocabularies (listening).
Why Students Need Vocabulary	There is a strong correlation between vocabulary and academic success. Students who read and have a wide range of experiences generally have larger working vocabularies. It is then critical that we close the gap for our struggling students. Even beyond school students encounter content and context specific vocabulary. They will need to continue to expand their understanding of words and how they work throughout their lives.
How We Can Teach Vocabulary	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Have a color-coded word wall and do frequent activities with it • Plan which words you will teach using district lists and words which are important in your class - distinguish among Tier 1, 2, 3 and content words • Use context, put the meaning of new word in everyday language • Connect new to old knowledge • Have students create a sketch to reinforce their understanding of a word • Use a word of the day or week school wide • Post multiple words with same meaning such as bathroom, lavatory, washroom • Make synonym and antonym resource cards or lists • Alpha Boxes • Work with word gradients or clusters such as warm to scorching and all degrees between • Word maps • Classifying activities – sorting, list/label/group • Word games and activities like Scrabble, Boggle, Word Ladders, Making Big Words • Use graphic organizers – feature analysis, semantic maps, Venns, Marzano's form, Frayer model, etc. • Teach kids how to use word parts to help them know new words • Create a sense of word wonder in your room by having students identify new, unusual and interesting words they can post in the classroom to share
Suggestions for Students Who Struggle with Vocabulary	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Repeated exposures to a new word is necessary • Increase the volume of reading to, with and by the student • Do more classifying/categorizing activities • Build off of what the student already knows – help make the connections • Use differentiated graphic organizers • Connect a visual with new words – Google images for the student • Read thematic alphabet books
What Vocabulary Instruction Looks Like Throughout the Day	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Increase the amount of text and text talk with interactive read alouds • Be intentional in conversation using the vocabulary of the content area • Use vocabulary binders throughout the day • Word sorts by meaning/concept • Encourage students to use new words in their writing (word choice) • Expect students to use the vocabulary of the subject in discussion and writing • Add to the word wall and work with content words during content instruction • Frequent review of words • Post vocabulary words and related words in clusters around the school (bathroom-restroom-lavatory)
How We Can Assess/Progress Monitor Vocabulary	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Student's correct use of the word in discussion or writing ✓ Vocabulary quizzes as part of content assessment ✓ Word sorts ✓ Cloze activities
Management and Troubleshooting	Use some kind of organizer for new words like a binder or folder. Decide as a building or grade level what format you will use. Color-code the binder sheets to match the word wall system. After you have done your assessments and know the needs of each student, form temporary groups based on needs. Identify the area of focus, instructional plan, who delivers it, the resources needed and measure of effectiveness.

Comprehension
Definition of Comprehension	Comprehension is the goal of reading. Comprehension is the process of simultaneously extracting and constructing meaning through interaction with a text. The goal is for students to be able to think within the text, beyond the text and about the text. The major strategies proficient readers use are metacognition (monitoring comprehension), using your schema (background knowledge and connections), visualizing, inferring, determining importance, asking questions, summarizing and synthesizing.
Why Students Need Comprehension	Throughout their lives – at school, work and leisure - students will encounter text they need to be able to read and understand. They will need to react to or respond to the text in some way.
How We Can Teach Comprehension	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Model strategies with interactive read alouds and name the strategies • Model and teach strategies for before, during and after reading • Try to introduce a strategy in a concrete way, be explicit in your teaching • Teach students the language they need to talk and write about their reading • Create anchor charts with students and post to make thinking visible • Teach story and text structure/elements as a way to build schema about genre and to guide retelling in a sequential order • Frequent practice - whole group, small group, then individually – providing higher support at the beginning with frames and prompts • Have readers set a purpose for their reading • Develop vocabulary – preteach essential vocabulary • Use graphic organizers • Use non-text sensory experiences like artwork or music to practice strategies • Teach students to use sticky notes to show strategies • Have students respond to text in a variety of ways – orally, sketching, written • Create anticipation guides • Use objects to activate or build background knowledge
Suggestions for Students Who Struggle with Comprehension	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Be sure that the text level is appropriate – use the benchmark assessment • Reteach the strategy connecting it to what the student already knows • Use short text especially at the beginning • Try wordless picture books so the focus is on the strategy • Meet with the student more frequently • Use differentiated graphic organizers including framed responses • Continue to provide scaffolding • Consult with your reading teachers • Use more visuals
What Comprehension Instruction Looks Like Throughout the Day	Modeling with read alouds during the day Mini-lessons for the whole class Meet with guided groups by strategy needs Independent conferences Strategy instruction during social studies Identify and discuss how writers, researchers and mathematicians use the strategy Create anticipation guides for content reading
How We Can Assess/Progress Monitor Comprehension	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Benchmark Kit Assessment ✓ Writing, talking or sketching about reading strategies and text with focused questions, framed responses and free writing ✓ Reading conferences ✓ Graphic organizers
Management and Troubleshooting	When introducing new strategies it can be helpful to use familiar or independent level material because the focus is on the strategy and how it is used. Try posting the strategies and how they are used for everyone to refer to throughout the day. After you have done your assessments and know the needs of each student, form temporary groups based on needs. Identify the area of focus, instructional plan, who delivers it, the resources needed and measure of effectiveness.

Key Comprehension Strategies

Metacognition/Self-monitoring

Good readers recognize when comprehension is breaking down. They don't just continue on. They start using the "fix-up" strategies they have learned and directly think about their use of strategies. Readers need to be aware of the thought processes they use as they read.

Schema/Background Knowledge/Making Connections

Readers bring their own unique background knowledge to the text. By activating prior knowledge readers better understand and learn more when they can connect the new reading to something they already know. Each reader is continually refining his/her schema by adding new information about texts or topics. Proficient readers can tell us how the connection helps them understand the text they are reading.

Asking Questions

Proficient readers are creating "movies in their minds" as they are reading. They are picturing the setting, characters, and action. These mental images often connect to emotions. Readers change these images as new information is revealed in the text or as they discuss ideas with others. Readers can learn that not having a visual in mind is a sign that comprehension is breaking down.

Visualizing

Proficient readers are creating "movies in their minds" as they are reading. They are picturing the setting, characters, and actions. These mental images often connect to emotions. Readers change these images as new information is revealed in the text or as they discuss ideas with others. Readers can learn that not having a visual in mind is a sign that comprehension is breaking down.

Inferring

Proficient readers know that they can take what they already know, find and use clues in the text, and think ahead. They know that writers don't directly state everything the reader should know. These readers think about what is implied in the text and the illustrations when they are making judgments about a character, event, plot, or theme.

Determining Importance

Effective readers can identify key ideas as they read. They can separate the less important information as being support for the big idea. These readers know how to use text structures and text features to enhance their comprehension. This leads to being able to summarize the text.

Summarizing/Synthesizing

Readers put the essence of the text into their own words when they summarize. Good readers are doing this as they read. When readers synthesize they are developing new ideas. They take what they find in a text and evaluate it against what they know or think. They integrate that new understanding to be continually updating their background knowledge.

COMMON CORE STATE STANDARDS

for

English Language Arts & Literacy in History/Social Studies,

Science, and Technical Subjects

<http://www.corestandards.org/the-standards/english-language-arts-standards>

Mission Statement

The Common Core State Standards provide a consistent, clear understanding of what students are expected to learn, so teachers and parents know what they need to do to help them. The standards are designed to be robust and relevant to the real world, reflecting the knowledge and skills that our young people need for success in college and careers. With American students fully prepared for the future, our communities will be best positioned to compete successfully in the global economy.

Coding and Scoring Errors At-A-Glance

(Coding system developed by Marie Clay as part of the running record system in An Observation Survey of Early Literacy Achievement, Revised Second Edition, 2006, Heinemann)

Behavior	What Reader Does	How to Code	Example	How to Score
Accurate Reading	Reads words correctly	Do not mark or place check (✓) above word	no mark or ✓ Kate's		No error
Substitution	Reads a word incorrectly	Write the substituted word above the word	her Kate's	Substitution, not corrected	1 error
Multiple Substitutions	Makes several attempts at a word	Write each substitution in sequence above the word	little /some/him his	Multiple substitutions, not covered	1 error for each incorrect word in text
			touch/teeth/SC tooth	Multiple substitutions, self-corrected (SC)	No error; 1 SC
			to/touch/teeth tooth	Multiple misreadings of the same word, not corrected	1 error for each incorrect word in text
			Kathy/Kelly Kate	Multiple misreadings of names and proper nouns	1 error first time missed; no errors after that
			It's Do not It is Don't	Misreading contractions (reads contraction as two words or two words as a contraction)	1 error each time
Self-correction	Corrects a previous error	Write the error over the word, followed by SC	teeth/SC tooth		No error; 1SC
Insertion	Adds a word that is not in the text	Write in the inserted word using a caret	loose ^		1 error per word inserted
Omission	Gives no response to a word	Place a dash (-) above the word	— very	Skiping a word Skiping a line	1 error per word 1 error per word
Repetition	Reads same word again	Write R after the word	R		No error
Repeated Repetitions	Reads the same word more than once	Write R for first repetition, then write a number for additional repetitions	R₂ R₃		No error
Rereading	Returns to the beginning of sentence or phrase to read again	Write an R with an arrow back to the place where rereading began			No error

(Coding system developed by Marie Clay as part of the running record system in
