Location, and Population

Malaysia is located in Southeast Asia, lying just north of the Equator. The borders of Malaysia include land and ocean borders with Brunei, Indonesia and Thailand and shared ocean boundaries with Philippines, Singapore and Vietnam.

Malaysia's population has had a steady increase from 8.156 million in 1960 to 31.95 million as of 2019. The population is made up of multi racial and multi cultural citizens. In Malaysia around 91.8 percent are Malaysian citizens and 8.2 percent are non-citizens.

Culture

According to a census taken in 2010, 61.3% of Malaysia's population (17,375,794 people) are Muslim. The other 38.7% of the population is made up of mainly Christian, Indian, and Chinese culture.

Malaysia's most popular food is called Durian. It has a creamy texture but is mostly known for its smell. Most people in Malaysia enjoy eating durian but others can't stand the smell.
