

Dear Parents of Rising 7th Graders,

Greetings! My name is Maggie Brownsworth. I am thrilled to be your student's English teacher next year. As a school, we are focusing on high-interest literature for summer reading.

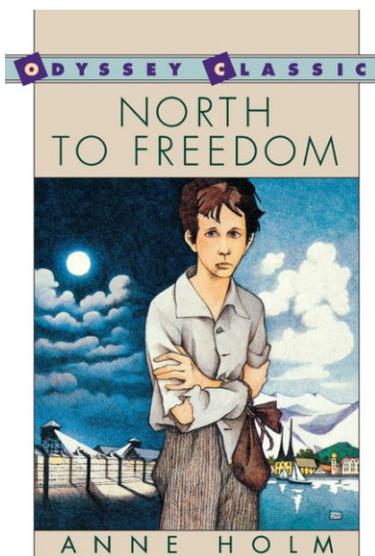

With this focus in mind, I've picked five book options that have a historical fiction focus. Students should pick one and complete the attached assignment.

Option #1: Dead End in Norvelt
by Jack Gantos

Option #2: Amos Fortune: free man
by Elizabeth Yates

Option #3: North to Freedom
by Anne Holm

Option #4: Lizzie Bright and the Buckminster Boy
by Gary Schmidt

Option #6: The Lions of Little Rock
by Kristin Levine

Each of these books can be purchased at a local bookstore or on Amazon.

An important literary study skill is to engage with the text by summarizing it. To prepare for the start of the school year, your student should come to our first English class with:

1. chapter summaries for their book. Students, you may write paragraph-long chapter summaries, or you may jot down summary notes in bullet-point form. You should pay particular attention to how the main character(s) develop/change throughout the book. (Please follow the format that is modeled on the following page.)
2. the signed parent form, which indicates that the student has, in fact, read the book.

Important Note: This assignment is due on the first day of school and will serve as a homework grade.

I am looking forward to a wonderful school year. I hope your student thoroughly enjoys his/her chosen book, and that these assignments promote both a culture of life-long learning and an appreciation of quality storytelling. Have a great summer!

All the best,

Maggie Brownsworth
