

COR UNUM WEEK

The first Cor Unum Week at Convent & Stuart Hall culminated with keynote speaker Chris Riley speaking to students, faculty and parents and leading workshops about his book, After the Mass-Age. Mr. Riley is a strategic thinker, educator, presenter and writer who has been part of creating some of the most successful brands in the world. He has led the strategic planning process at Wieden+Kennedy and Apple, and his clients include Shiseido, Nikon, Uniqlo and Facebook. Leaning on this experience, Mr. Riley's global seminars and workshops ask the important questions of how to create productive dialogue today among a wide range of perspectives and how to communicate and create trust in a fragmented world. The answer, according to Mr. Riley, is "learning from." He says: When we learn from cultures and not about them, we participate in deep listening and genuine collaborations that benefit the many rather than enriching the few.

16

As global citizens, we are called to recognize our shared and equal humanity as well as our differentiated experiences and histories.

— President Ann Marie Krejcarek

LEFT TO RIGHT: High school students interview Chris Riley after his presentation during Cor Unum Week. Author Rowan Ricardo Phillips and Warriors General Manager Bob Myers with school leaders after a high school assembly. Bill Jennings with author Joseph Cassara at the Key West Literary Seminar.

