Conley is Assistant Principal of the Year

At Henry E. Lackey High School, Vice Principal Richard Conley is known as a leader who goes above and beyond to help students achieve success and involve parents in their child's education. He is a strong supporter of parental involvement, and encourages students to participate in school-related activities in order to take advantage of beneficial opportunities.

Conley focuses on the best interests for students and is willing to take the time to assist staff members in need. For these reasons and more, Conley was recently named the 2010-11 Maryland Assistant Principal of the Year by the Maryland Association of Secondary School Principals (MASSP).

The award honors outstanding school leaders who have succeeded in providing high-quality learning opportunities for students, and for making exemplary contributions to education.

Recipients are also selected for modeling personal excellence and professional growth, collaborative leadership, improving curriculum, instruction and assessment, and

Charles County Public Schools fights the flu

Charles County Public Schools and the Charles County Department of Health are partnering to keep students and staff healthy during flu season. Throughout the next two months, employees and students will be offered a number of opportunities to receive seasonal flu shots. Employees should check with their school or center nurse to see when flu shots will be given at each location.

The 2010-2011 flu vaccine will protect against 2009 H1N1 and two other influenza viruses. The Centers for Disease Control strongly recommends that everyone six months of age and older gets immunized against influenza.

Influenza is a contagious viral infection and anyone can get it. Coughing and sneezing can spread the illness from person to person, and also by direct contact with infected people or objects they contaminate. School nurses list washing hands frequently, keeping hands away from the mouth, nose and eyes, and coughing into a tissue or sleeve as top flu prevention measures.

Public schools in Charles County use appropriate measures to limit the spread of infection. Some of the daily cleaning done by building service workers includes disinfecting bathrooms and other areas with hospital-approved cleaners.

The Charles County Health Department, which is located on Crain Highway in White Plains, offers flu clinics. Call the health department at 301-609-6900 for an appointment or clinic times.

Nominate your principal

Charles County Public Schools (CCPS) is accepting nominations for its 2011 Principal of the Year and the Washington Post Distinguished Educational Leadership Award. The annual award honors exemplary principals.

Teachers, students, former students, parents, administrators, or community members may submit nominations. Nominees must have a minimum of five year's experience as a principal and three of those years must have been with Charles County Public Schools. Principals may not nominate themselves.

Nomination materials must include a minimum of four statements of support, one of which must be submitted by a professional educator; a brief career summary; and a description of contributions in each of the nomination criteria categories.

The nomination criteria for principals are manage effectively; demonstrate and encourage creativity; foster cooperation between the school and the community; maintain dialogue with students, parents, faculty and staff; encourage team spirit; demonstrate leadership and exemplify commitment; continue to play an active role in the classroom; and maintain their position as principal throughout the 2011-12 school year.

Nominees must also serve in schools that have made Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) for the past two school years.

Nominations are due Friday, Jan. 14. Materials should be sent to Charles County Public Schools, Attention: Human Resources Division, Jesse L. Starkey Administration Building, P.O. Box 2770, La Plata, MD., 20646.

Award recipients will be announced later this school year.

Happy 263rd birthday Dr. Gustavus Brown

Dr. Gustavus Brown Elementary School students, teachers and staff recently celebrated Dr. Gustavus Brown's 263rd birthday, with a parade, hats and signs.

Dr. Brown was born October 17, 1747, and each year the school honors its namesake with a birthday bash. Students paraded around the parking lot while chanting, "R-E-S-P-E-C-T, Dr. Brown's the place to be!" The parade gave the students a chance to show off the hats, signs and cards they made to tell Dr. Brown's story, including his profession, birthday and the time period in which he lived. The students worked on their projects during social studies and art classes and in their spare time at home. Science teacher, Jack Belle, was lifted in a Cherry Picker to take an aerial picture of the students, which is a tradition at Dr. Brown. Staff worked Dr. Brown's birthday into classroom lessons, Principal Marvin Jones said. "We asked our teachers to do a mini-lesson familiarizing our students with who Dr. Brown was, the fact that he lived in our county and what he's most well known for," Jones said.

Joseph McMahan, a first-grade teacher at Dr. Gustavus Brown, helps student, Selah Calacan, put on her birthday hat.

Dr. Gustavus Brown was a physician and friend of President George Washington. Brown was asked to assist in the president's medical treatment the night Washington died.

This is the third year Dr. Brown's students have held a birthday celebration.

good instruction is taking place due to the professionalism that is administered on a daily basis by Mr. Conley and his colleagues," Principal James Short said.

Conley is an integral part of the school's Advanced Placement (AP) and student advising/counseling committees in which staff developed the idea to hold student and parent information nights. He was also instrumental in developing Charger Time – a one-hour lunch initiative – which gives students' access to academic and extracurricular options and teachers additional time to meet with department and staff members.

Conley credits the cohesive relationship among staff at Lackey and support from the school system and school community for his award. "I am extremely honored to be recognized as the Maryland Assistant Principal of the Year. This award is a reflection of the commitment that the Lackey High School community and Charles County Public Schools have demonstrated toward increasing academic achievement and providing a quality education for students," he said.

As Maryland's Assistant Principal of the Year, Conley is eligible for the national award. Finalists will be announced in January 2011 and the winner will be selected in February.

Conley was honored by the MASSP Oct. 20 during their fall conference, and will be recognized by the Board of Education on Nov. 9.

Conley began his career with Charles County Public Schools in 2003 as a Spanish teacher at Westlake High School, and was named a vice principal at Lackey in 2008. He has a bachelor's degree in foreign language education and government and politics from the University of Maryland College Park, and earned his Master of Science in administration in 2008 from McDaniel College.

North Point High School junior Alexander Colaciello drives the Lookin Out Safety Bug through the course in the parking lot on Oct. 26. The event was sponsored by Strachan Insurance Company and facilitated by the Pennsylvania Driving Under the Influence (DUI) Association. The event was held as part of the school system's "We Care" teen driving campaign.

Students get the safety bug during simulated driving exercise

North Point and La Plata high school students continued to show "We Care" about safe driving this week during a hands-on exercise that is continuation of a Charles County Public Schools (CCPS) and Charles County Sheriff's Office three-year safety campaign.

As part of CCPS and the Sheriff's Office "We Care" teen driving initiative, the Lookin Out Safety Bug driving event was offered to students this week at La Plata and North Point. The Safety Bug is a Volkswagen Beetle that has been customized to demonstrate the loss of control a person would experience if they drove a vehicle while under the influence of drugs or alcohol. The event is designed to give teen drivers a firsthand learning experience and to promote safe driving.

More than 95 North Point students, as well as several staff members, drove the Bug through the course on Tuesday, which was set up in the bus parking lot. Orange cones were used to mark the course, and students were divided into groups of three to navigate the course. Students with driver's licenses and parental permission were able to drive the Bug, and two backseat riders were wearing goggles that simulated the experience of riding in a car while impaired. A trained mentor from the Pennsylvania Driving Under the Influence (DUI) Association, who provided the Bug to the schools, rode in the passenger seat and controlled the settings on the car.

With North Point's homecoming game and dance coming up this weekend, Sgt. Carl Rye, supervising school resource officer for Charles County Public Schools, said this was great timing for students to participate in this event. "Students go through the course twice. The first time is to get them familiar with the course; the second time the mentor manipulates the controls in order to throw the driver off balance and to test their reactive timing. Hopefully these kids walk away with a positive experience and safety in mind," Rye said.

About 150 students participated in the event at La Plata on Wednesday. This is the first time the Lookin Out Safety Bug event was offered to CCPS students. Glenn Strachan and Gina McElhaney, agents with Strachan Insurance Agency, contacted Rye earlier this school year to offer the event to students in Charles County high schools. "This experience provides young drivers with a hands-on experience to learn about the effects of driving under the influence. We hope students walk away from this and talk to their friends about the importance of responsible driving," McElhaney said.

Strachan Insurance Agency covered the cost of the event at both schools, which averaged about $1,100 per school. Rye said plans are underway to extend the event to other high schools later this school year. The school system and Sheriff's Office partnered three years ago to launch the "We Care" campaign.

This is one of numerous "We Care" student-oriented events that Charles County Public Schools has organized with the Sheriff's Office to emphasize the importance of teen driving. On the first day of school this year, Superintendent of Schools James E. Richmond, along with Sheriff Rex Coffey and school resource officers, greeted students as they arrived at Westlake High School and passed out flyers to remind them of safe driving rules.
