GES desires to provide the opportunity for students to pursue excellence in the form of academic achievement and moral character based on Christian ethics while being nurtured in a Christ-centered environment.

Job Description for Secondary Speech and Communication Teacher

Job Summary:

The teacher will do his/her best to pursue excellence in providing opportunities for students to achieve academically while modeling moral behavior, founded on a relationship with Jesus Christ.

Teachers should have:

- a bachelor's degree in secondary English education
- a valid teaching license, with English language specialty (preferred).
- knowledge of best practices in elementary education and language acquisition.
- experience working with older children in a classroom setting.
- ability and willingness to work with and establish rapport with people of various cultures and backgrounds.
- faith in Jesus Christ and the desire to continue to grow in relationship with Him.
- English as a first language.
- the desire and commitment to support the vision and mission of GES by collaborating with GES Administration, other teachers, staff, parents, students, and the community.

To pursue excellence with academics, teachers will:

- prepare lesson plans in advance for all instruction periods which are aligned with provided school-wide standards and pacing guides.
- plan and teach content at an appropriate level for English language learners.
- deliver instruction, allow time for guided and independent student practice, and conduct formal and informal assessments during instruction periods.
- provide frequent feedback to students and parents through returned work and grades.
- collaborate with co-teachers and other staff to plan lesson content and assessments.
- support the learning of all students by working with school staff to plan and implement support modifications and accommodations when necessary.
- administer language proficiency tests to determine placement in or progression from EI program.
- create a positive learning environment and maintain an organized and inviting classroom.
- remain a lifelong learner by observing other teachers, reflecting on classroom practices and pursuing academic advancement.

To pursue excellence with moral character, based on Christian ethics, teachers will:

- attend and participate in a Bible-believing church.
- regularly teach devotions and chapel lessons based on God's Word.
- build and nurture personal relationships with students and others in the GES community.
- practice biblical standards in interpersonal relationships and conflict resolution.
- support the school by serving in and participating in extracurricular activities.
