INHERENT RISKS

Students and families should be aware that there are inherent risks associated with outdoor wilderness and international trips. Our goal is to assess and manage those risks where possible by creating a culture of safety with our staff and students through education, training and information dissemination. We will go over a number of trip associated risks with students both before and during the trip, but these lists may not be all inclusive. We ask that students and families be aware of potential risks associated with their trip choice prior to signing up for these trips and to continue through the trips entirety.
