1. Describe the classroom conditions that best facilitate student learning and the strategies you would use to assure maximum learning for all students.

Classroom conditions that would facilitate the best student learning is to have a student centered room. Where the student is comfortable to interact with their peers and with the teacher. There are different posters and student work on the walls of the class. To ensure maximum learning for the students their would be the use of flexible grouping and differentiated instruction in the class.

2. In what ways are you qualified to address the issue of diversity as a part of your instructional program?

Different ways I am qualified is providing students with information that is culturally relevant to them as students/young adults as well as to the society that they live in. Having the students to bring to me ideas that would also help them in the classroom and to become an active member in their own learning. Also, by using differentiated instruction would allow me to address the diversity in the different learning styles of the students in the classroom.

3. From your point of view, how important is technology in education? What technology-related skills would you integrate into your curriculum?

Technology is very import in education since most of the students today have been living with technology all of their lives. Technology allows for teachers to create virtual field trips for their students to see different parts of the country and the world. Technology allows for the teacher to have the students produce projects using various techniques found on the internet. Technology would be integrated into my curriculum by using the aforementioned scenarios. I would have students go on virtual field trips, use the technology to create many different types of projects and also use the Google Classroom platform for daily work and assignments in the class.
