Tyler Brown was always an inquisitive student, but she was most interested and curious in The East Harlem School kitchen. Whether it was visiting the farmers market with Chef Jonah and her classmates to learn about local farming or baking bread in science class to learn about the chemical reactions of yeast, Tyler thrived in the kitchen.

Tyler credits Chef Jonah with sparking her passion for baking. Her favorite dessert was his famous chocolate peanut butter cupcakes. As a young student, she asked him for his recipe and made them at home. She remembers how much fun she had and how Chef Jonah encouraged her to experiment more in the kitchen. Chef Jonah remembers Tyler proudly bringing in red velvet cupcakes that she made herself, along with one of her first business cards! He proudly gave her his stamp of approval.

After graduating from Essex Street Academy, Tyler attended Johnson and Wales University. She majored in Culinary Nutrition and minored in Environmental Sustainability. After graduating magna cum laude, Tyler was immediately hired to be the head chef at Camp Fowler in Lake Pleasant, New York. When she is not busy managing her kitchen there, Tyler plans for the opening of her online baking business.

Tyler also recently reflected on the EHS Vow, which she remembers and repeats to this day. Being aware of all she thinks, says, and does, as the vow encourages, helps her carry herself with pride. She recognizes that the way she carries herself not only represents her, but her family as well as the people who got her to where she is today.
