If a student is confined at home due to COVID-19 but is well enough to participate in lessons remotely, he should contact each of his teachers for the day using the Class Team. He should inform his teacher regarding his progress and seek clarification and direction for participating in lessons. More detailed information outlined on the following page.

Teaching and Learning Term 1 2022

What is your son's responsibility as a student?

BGS uses three platforms to deliver curriculum and allow students to progress in their learning:

1. Teams (used for day-to-day lesson instructions and check-ins)
2. One Note (used for class notes, resources and readings)
3. Canvas (used mainly for whole cohort outlines of units and assessment)

Your son must open these applications every day to check for updates and directions.

His class Team for each subject should be the first application he checks.

If your son is absent from school, it is advisable – when he is able – to check-in via Teams Chat with his teachers to let them know his progress and seek clarification as required.

How will lessons be delivered?

The format of lessons will vary depending on the subject, assessment, curriculum sequence, essential learning experiences and progress of the class through the unit. Teachers will make judgements about the most appropriate lesson format and delivery based on these factors.

Students learning from home might be directed to any of the following learning modes depending on the context of a particular lesson:

- Working on exercises or quizzes in OneNote or Canvas
- Drafting an essay for feedback or researching for an assignment
- Reviewing class notes and summaries that have been posted on Teams
- Participating in discussions and activities via Teams Chat
- Following a PowerPoint lecture via the class team
- Recording a performance or work on a project for a practical subject
- Engaging in an online Teams lesson, such as when a teacher is having to teach remotely

There are many ways of participating in learning that our teachers will employ to enable your son to continue to make progress.

If your son is well enough to participate in lessons from home, it is important that he advises his class teachers via Teams chat.

Teachers may invite students to attend a Teams video call to allow participation from home.
