Some Fast Facts...Not Sleeping is Unhealthy

- More than half of licensed teens (56%) admit to having driven when feeling too tired to drive their best, and nearly one in 10 teens report that they have completely fallen asleep at the wheel. (SADD and Liberty Mutual Study, 2016)
- Insufficient sleep in teens is associated with obesity, migraines, and immune system disruption and with health risk behaviors including smoking, drinking, stimulant abuse, physical fighting, physical inactivity, depression, and suicidal tendencies
- In the 1950 and 1960s, most schools started between 8:30-9:00 (National Center for Health Research)
- When schools have delayed the start of the school day, communities have seen reduced tardiness, sleeping in class, and car crash rates, as well as improved attendance, graduation rates, and standardized test scores. (<https://www.startschoollater.net/>)
- Research shows that teens who obtain less than 8 hours of sleep each night experience 68% more sports injuries than students who obtain more sleep. Sleep deprivation is known to impair hand-eye coordination and peripheral vision. Because tissue repair and glycogen storage occurs during sleep it is also not a surprise that chronic sleep deprivation is associated with decreased growth, slower healing, and less endurance – particularly among athletes. Studies on swimmers, football players, tennis players, and basketball players at Duke University showed improvements in speed and accuracy after obtaining more sleep each night.
