Belmont Hill's Endowment earnings underwrite financial aid and support faculty, programs, building maintenance, and other school activities, and provide financial stability for the future. Funds established for long-term investment are of two types: (1) permanently restricted endowment funds established by donors who specify that the principal must be retained intact in perpetuity, and (2) funds functioning as endowment, which give the trustees of the School some flexibility with regard to use of the funds. Donors may state a preferred use, but permit the trustees of future generations the flexibility to respond to changing circumstances.

New department faculty chairs may be established and named with gifts of $2,500,000 or more; faculty chairs may be named with gifts of $1,500,000 or more; scholarships may be established with contributions of $500,000 or more; and named funds may be established with contributions of $250,000 or more. Contributions with permanent endowment or funds functioning as endowment of any amount are greatly appreciated and are added to existing funds.
