Maybe He Just Likes You Barbara Dee

- ▶ After an unwanted hug from a classmate during recess, Mila suddenly finds herself the recipient of weird requests from the boys on the basketball team. One is also her fellow bandmate. What is going on?
- ▶ Mila complains, but some of her friends say she is overreacting. They say the boys are just flirting. Mila tries telling them to stop, but the unwanted attention and requests continue.
- ▶ Mila gains some self-confidence from a karate class. Then she responds to another advance by protecting herself, and now she must explain to a teacher what has been going on. Can Mila speak up for herself and be heard?

Just Mercy: A True Story of the Fight for Justice (Adapted for YA)
by Bryan Stevenson

- ▶ Bryan Stevenson is a lawyer who started the Equal Justice Initiative.
- ▶ His book was adapted for younger readers. This is the second book on the summer reading list for students going into 7th and 8th grades next year.
- ▶ The book has been made into an excellent movie.

Bryan Stevenson, Attorney and Author

Attorney Bryan Stevenson founded and is the director of the Equal Justice Initiative, a human rights organization in Alabama.

Mr. Stevenson and EJI staff have represented hundreds of people. EJI has won dozens of cases. They have won cases that ban excessive imprisonment and unfair sentencing, have exonerated 135 wrongfully condemned people on Death Row, and have exonerated hundreds of wrongly convicted people.

A 2012 case EJI brought to the Supreme Court has successfully banned mandatory life sentences for children 17 or younger.

- Stevenson's memoir tells the story of how EJI came about.
- It focuses on the powerful story of Walter MacMillan, who was wrongly accused of murder and sentenced to Death Row.
- Stevenson talks about that case as an example of an unjust system that exists not only in Alabama but around the country.
