

Boy Scouts Improve Edison Campus

Two former Edison students were honored for completing Boy Scout Eagle Scout projects at Edison Elementary School this week. Brendan Mills restored a map of the United States painted on the school's blacktop. Carl Howell created an outdoor classroom to enhance the teaching and learning that happens at Edison.

Such projects give boy scouts opportunities to learn to lead others while also helping the community.

"Both of these young men have exemplified the traits of cheerful service and unrelenting pursuit of getting these projects completed," Principal Robert Slauson said in his remarks. "In spite of red tape, obstacles, and challenges, they managed to complete these wonderful projects. We are better off as a school because of it!"

"We are grateful that these students have returned to give back to their elementary school," said Superintendent Sean McPhetridge. "And we thank them for their perseverance and contributions to others."

Robert Slauson (left) stands with Carl Howell, Brendon Mills, and Superintendent McPhetridge at the November 29 gathering.