

MIDDLE LEARNING IMMERSION

Immersion is an exciting chance for Middle Learning students and teachers to pause regular classes for one week and immerse themselves in experiential education. Students dive into topics that take them off campus and into their surrounding community.

Immersion offerings change each year depending on the topics offered and what is going on globally. Immersion may lead students to the surrounding Georgia trails, to the community in search of local art, or to the kitchen on campus to learn about international cuisine and cooking.

Tapping into their passions, teachers form partnerships across disciplines to create relevant and immersive learning experiences in valuable courses students just can't get in a typical classroom setting. The result is an unforgettable experience. Elliott Galloway encouraged us all to "play the game of learning," and Immersion offers Middle Learning students a wonderful playground.
