

A Virtual Roundtable Discussion for District Leaders

The Southern California Professional Development Federation invites you to a free roundtable discussion on leading for engaging and equitable learning communities in middle and high schools. Join with other district leaders to discuss current realities, envision together, and troubleshoot issues and concerns for both online and in-person schooling.

Topics to be addressed may include:

- Working with issues of inequity, and building more equity-centered classes
- Supporting academic engagement and social and emotional learning and development in remote and hybrid environments
- Fostering and sustaining positive personal relationships
- Ramping up learning tasks for rigor and meaning
- Integrating robust formative assessment
- Targeting academic support and creatively providing academic interventions for individuals and groups
- Developing guidelines for remote learning

Engaging Schools Senior Consultant Carol Miller Lieber and Executive Director Larry Dieringer will co-facilitate and serve as thought partners. Engaging Schools is a national nonprofit that collaborates with educators to create engaging and equitable classrooms and schools that support academic, social, and emotional learning and development.

Where: The location of your choice via Zoom!

When: January 21, 2021 from 12:00 to 1:15 pm PT

Register: <http://sdcoe.k12oms.org/1020-197394>

The group size will be limited to 14, so please register early to ensure a spot. This roundtable is sponsored by the Southern California Professional Development Federation and there is no fee.

For more information, please contact Brenda Hall at brhall@sdcoe.net

