The human face is the masterpiece of God. The eyes reveal the soul, the mouth the flesh, the chin stands for purpose, the nose means will; but over and behind all is that fleeting something we call "expression."

HIGH SCHOOL

ELMHURST, ILLINOIS

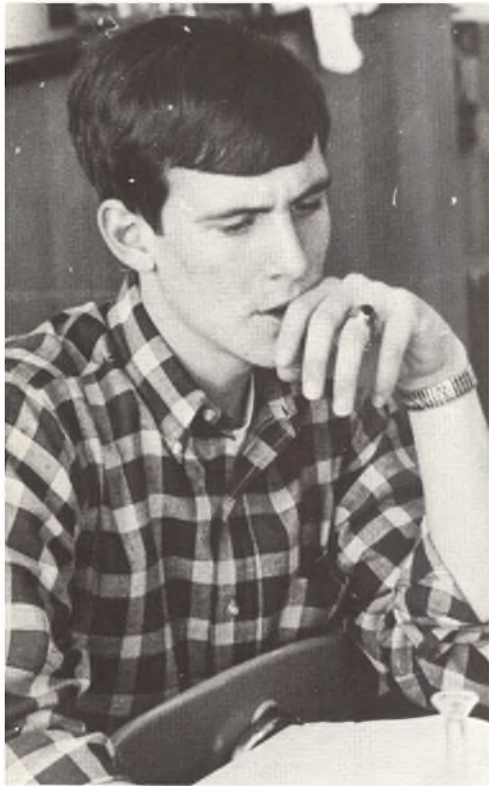

From the time we are born we express ourselves. As we mature and grow a little more sophisticated, our ways of expressing ourselves also change. By the time we reach high school, our expressions have become more meaningful. At Timothy, we learn to express ourselves while developing our talents and minds; through this development we can learn to better express our Christianity. This year the Saga staff has attempted to capture the expressions of Timothy students.

Board Plans Present and Future

Board meetings begin with Mr. Rosendahl reading the minutes.

Every month a group of eighteen men meet to discuss, evaluate, and attempt to solve the problems facing our schools. These men each served a term of three years and were divided into the transportation, finance, building, and promotion committees. Mr. Kieft, school board president, met with the executive board the week before each meeting to set up the order of business. The decisions made at these meetings affected many areas of the student's life—from our daily bus route to the newly formed student lounge. But the school was affected, too. The board controlled finances, school policies and academics, and selected the faculty. They continued to revise the school system to keep it up to date and to insure a Christian atmosphere in our school.

Administration Operates Effectively

Although principals in larger schools are sometimes thought of as necessary evils, the students of our small school were able to see the administration as individual personalities. Even in the midst of busy schedules our deans of girls and boys—Miss Kingma and Mr. Hoving—always found time to counsel students. They were ready and willing to discuss any problems a student might have concerning classes, teachers, and future plans. After two years of being with Timothy, Mr. Den Besten, has become well acquainted with the faculty and student body. He was often seen conversing with students between classes or at break about English tests, cars, or sports events. The administration's personal concern for students helped us to successfully complete the year.

Mr. Harkema explains that though Latin is a dead language there are still some practical advantages.

Languages Emphasize Understanding

In its third year of use, the language lab has played an integral part in teaching and learning the German language. This facility particularly aided Mr. Mepfans in his attempts to stress grammar and conversational ability. But the German course consisted of more than just sitting under earphones; the students also translated Goethe, Kant, and other writers and learned something of German history.

Learning to use and understand a language is especially difficult if that language is dead. Unlike German students, there are no "old Roman war movies" on which Latin linguists were able to practice what they had learned in class. Yet the course, taught by Mr. Harkema, was far from dead. First and second level Latin provided the basics of the age-old language and at the same time gave the students mythology and well-known Latin writings for translation. Upper level Latin, which combined students from the two upper classes, studied some of the major works of history, including the Aeneid and the Bible.

Isolation and an occasional word from Mr. Mepfans over his microphone manages to keep the German linguists interested in the tapes.

Social Studies Increases Insight

The purpose of our social studies courses is to give each student an insight into past history, its effects on the present, and its possibilities for the future. Freshmen examined the distant past through the present in their world history course. The next stage in the maturing of the student in the social sciences was an extensive study of the history of the United States. Modern history is a practical elective course on present day Europe. Required of students in their final year, social problems and American government were one semester courses that gave the student a better understanding of the laws and customs of his country. Class discussions, small panels, lectures, and films aided the seniors in analyzing the many problems of today's world, such as new interpretations of the Constitution, increased crime rates, and the growing "generation gap" between parents and children.

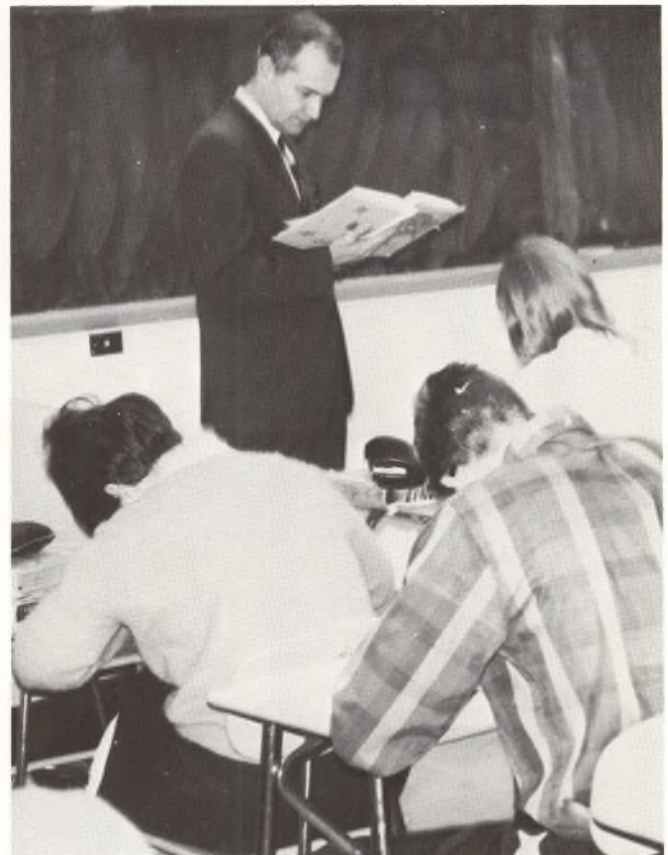

Contemplating what living during the time of the Middle Ages would be like, Jane Hoff listens closely in world history class.

While on the debate panel in social problems, John Voss and Phil Morren argue the case for motorcycle gangs.

Reminding the juniors of his surprise quizzes, Mr. Nawyn gives the next day's assignment.

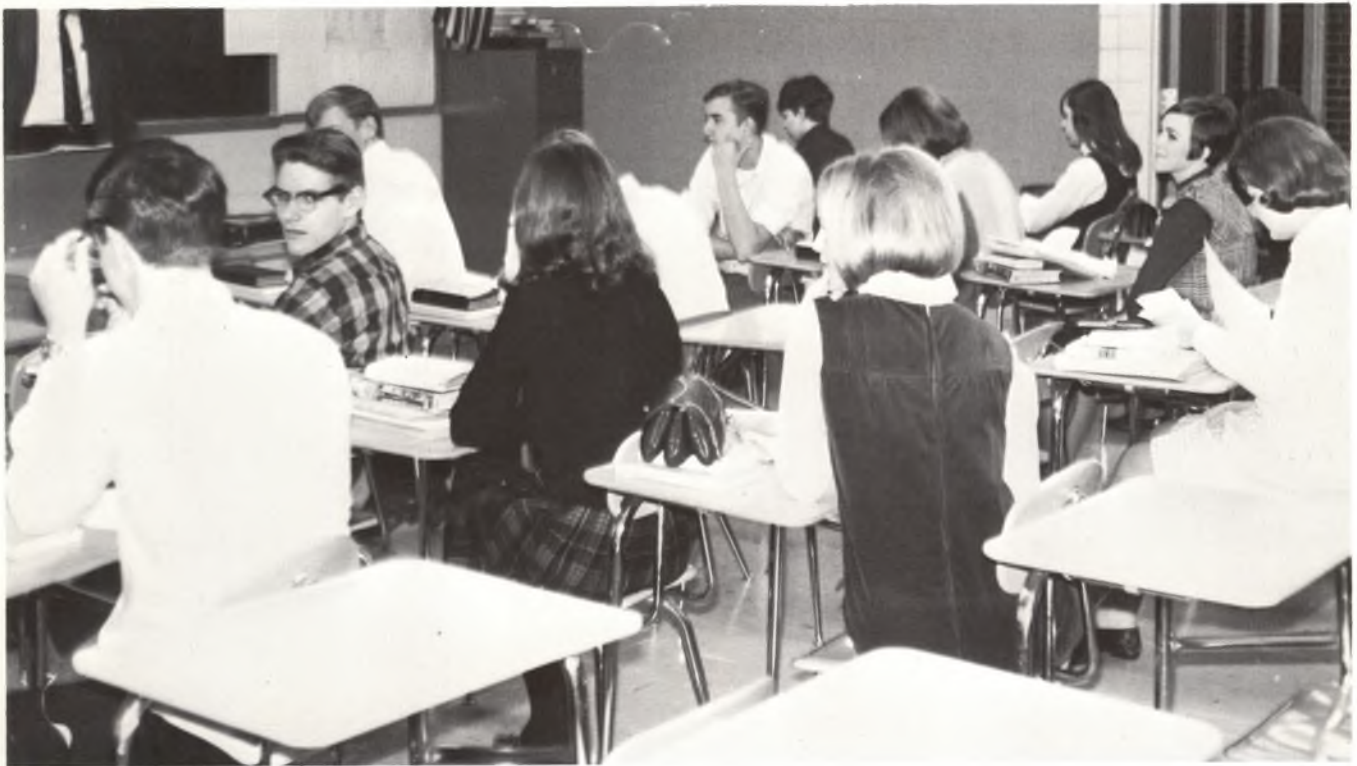

Bible Promotes Spiritual Growth

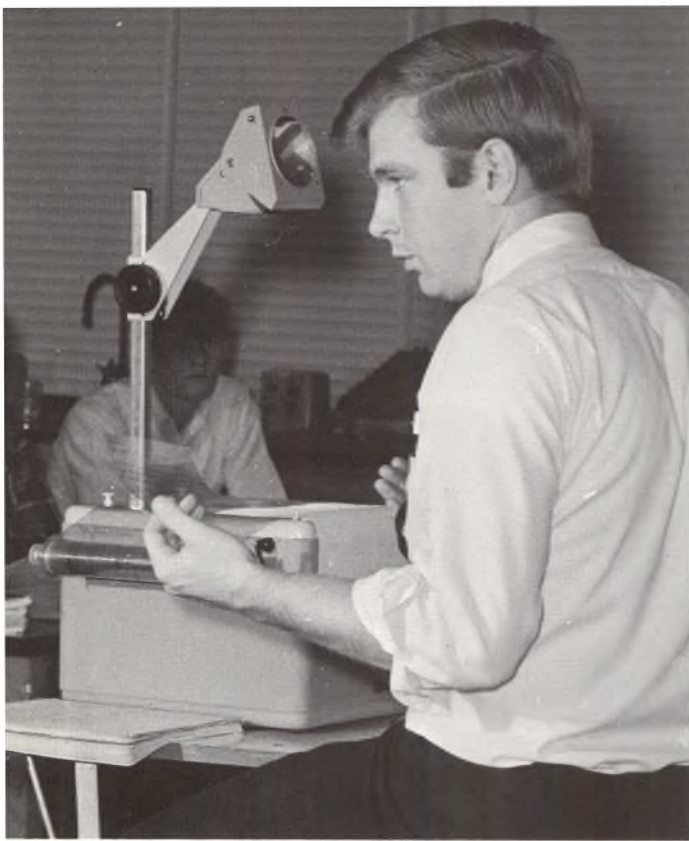

Because of its fundamental importance in our future lives, Bible is a required one-semester course in each of our four years of high school. In Bible I, the books of the Old Testament were taken individually and students were shown how they fit together and point toward the New Testament and Christ. The New Testament was studied in Bible II. Here, special emphasis fell on two main sections: the Gospels as they present Christ and the Book of Acts showing the spread of the Church. Church History, a careful study of the church and its existence through the post-Biblical era, dealt with the early church, the Roman Catholic Church, the Reformation, and the numerous sects after the Reformation. Special emphasis was placed on the Reformation itself and its effects. Finally, Bible IV presented to seniors a systematic examination of the doctrines of the Christian faith, helping them to better understand their own beliefs.

Mr. Duff waits for an answer to his question: "What does it mean to exist?"

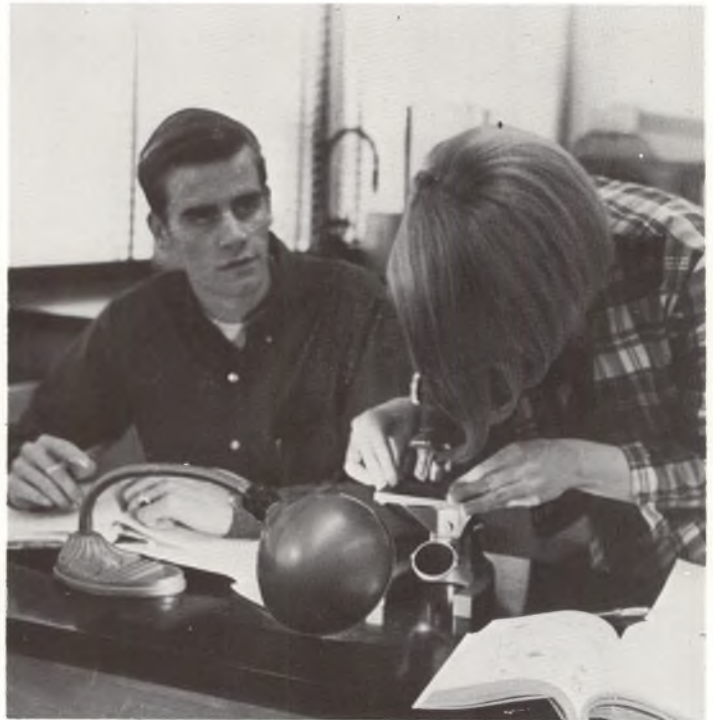

The faces of the sophomores after receiving their test grades clearly express how they feel about Bible tests.

Using the overhead projector to give notes is easier for Mr. Bilthuis and his students.

Ed De Boer records data as he waits his turn at viewing the bacteria under the microscope.

Interested Students Examine Vital

Science majors start their four years of study with biology. Using the BSCS biology course of the National Science Foundation, students are taught by Mr. Alsum "to develop an understanding of the diversity of life and of the interrelations of all organisms, and to gain a better appreciation of the beauty and grandeur of God's manifestations." Lab dissections and discussions enabled students to understand the biological basis of problems in medicine, conservation, and agriculture. "Through a knowledge and appreciation of the scientific method," says Mr. Bilthuis, teacher of physical science and chemistry, "students develop a model of God's creation." This model deals mainly with the basic properties of atoms and molecules that determine the behavior of physical objects. "In physics," according to Mr. Milkamp, "students are taught how to explain the behavior of the universe through experimental and mathematical methods." Models are built and students try to answer such questions as "What is light?" or "What causes gravity?"

Having someone read her the directions, makes it much easier for Carol Zeilstra to do the chemistry lab.

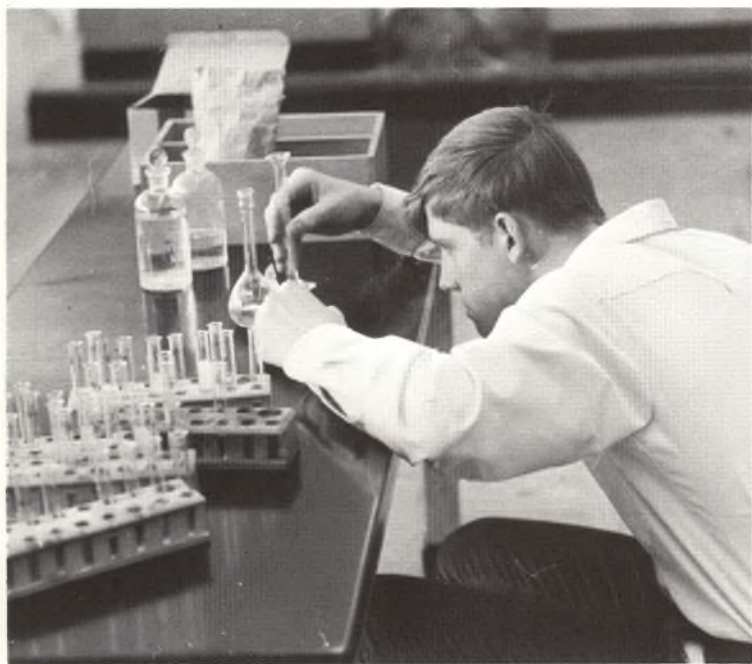

Working with amino acids doesn't seem to particularly please some of the biology students.

Mike Euwema sets up the ripple tank in order to study refraction of waves.

Areas of Science

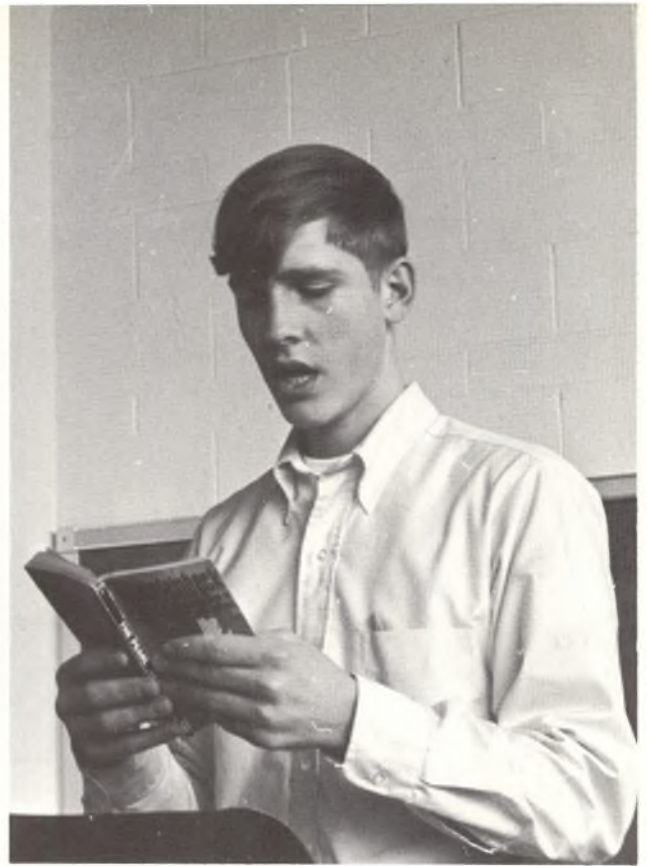

One intent chemistry student, Wayne Medema, finds the accuracy needed in his experiment a challenge.

Speech class helps Wayne Medema achieve expressive reading.

Varied Aspects of English Covered

In the English department this year there was evidence of change—change in ideas brought by new teachers and in the curriculum. The freshman English course provided a variety of subjects, authors, and periods; included in this study of different forms of literature was short stories, novels, poetry, and drama by authors from various countries. Grammar was a one-semester course for the sophomores in which they considered the structure and proper use of the English language. The sophomores then looked at the works of early American authors. Modern American literature had the juniors compare twentieth century literature with that produced in past periods. In their second semester, juniors were given a choice of early world literature which this year compared ancient writers with more recent authors, modern world literature which studied political satire for part of the course, or speech. English literature, taken by seniors, applied broad ideas as seen in drama, novels, and poetry to the understanding of present situations. As a new elective, a six-week course was introduced, giving seniors an opportunity to review grammar before graduation and college.

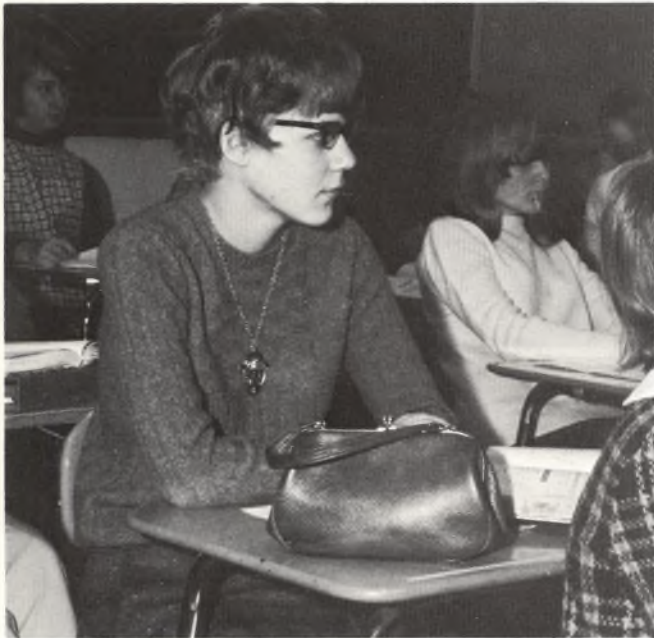

Hamlet becomes real to the seniors as they try to act it out.

Math Complexities Become Clear

Because geometry is not always easy to understand, Mr. Greenfield pauses to think of a different way to explain an intricate theorem.

Sandy Vander Bent learns that paying close attention in class is an important step in trying to understand algebra.

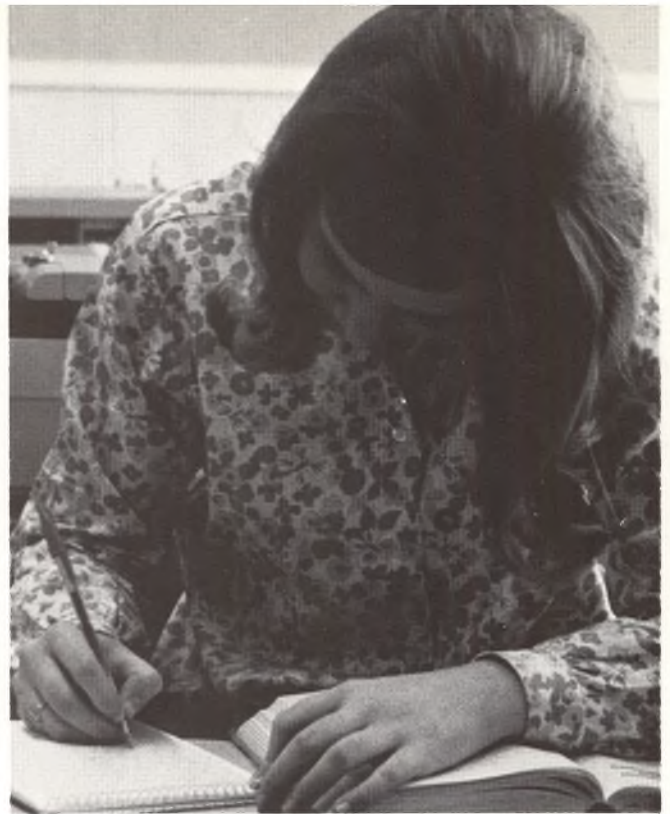

Once again this year, math and all of its complexities were tackled by a set of competent teachers and another set of slightly bewildered students; much of that bewilderment, however, was cleared up by the end of the year under the teachers' guidance. Because of its importance in our later lives, two years of math was required of all students; two more years were offered to those who were interested in this field. All freshmen were required to take Algebra I and II; this course introduced and then explained the modern functions of algebra. This study of math was continued by the sophomores in Geometry I and II, plane and solid geometry. Third year students were introduced to trigonometry as they gained a more complete picture of algebra. Finally, advanced math was offered to those seniors possessing an active interest in the mathematics field; even complex numbers and calculus were presented to this ambitious group of mathematicians.

Senior math requires much attention and concentration.

Business Courses Stress Accuracy

Dictation, perfect paragraphs, and transcriptions may have been a bit tedious to those girls taking the commercial course, but the feeling of achievement was good compensation. Typing up the manuscripts, letters, and other business forms really helped improve accuracy and speed. Shorthand became a greater race of skill, with a very practical goal—greater opportunity in the business world. Training in the use of various duplicating machines and an introduction into filing by Mrs. Stryker gave the year-long courses variety. Mr. Hoving made sure that not only the girls, but the boys, too, maintained neatness and accuracy in his bookkeeping classes.

Trying to build up her speed, Dee Slinkman drills on routine shorthand characters.

Filling out civil service applications is the best possible experience for applying for jobs.

Dr. Rude instructs Rich Smith in inking his drawing.

Marlene Lindemulder's problem of putting in zippers is solved by Mrs. Hoffman.

Practical Arts Develop Skill

Mrs. Hoffman reminds the girls to strive for grain perfection.

MECHANICAL DRAWING

To future draftsmen or engineers mechanical drawing was a necessary course to take. First year students were taught the fundamentals of using tools properly as well as drawing neatly and accurately. By drawing simple figures and developing skill in lettering, they were then ready to move to more complicated three dimensional figures. The advanced students gained experience through designing their own plans, and carrying out these plans by constructing a miniature house frame.

HOME ECONOMICS

Cutting, pinning, and stitching fabrics were the essentials of one phase of our home economics course. These basics made such tasks as inserting zippers and sewing in linings and interfacings quite simple. The delicious aroma of foods filled the halls during second semester as the girls studied cooking, from baking to frying. Full year students also learned about interior decorating and went on field trips to building projects and model homes. With this background in home ec the girls have a start toward managing a home efficiently and economically.

Library Maintains Efficiency

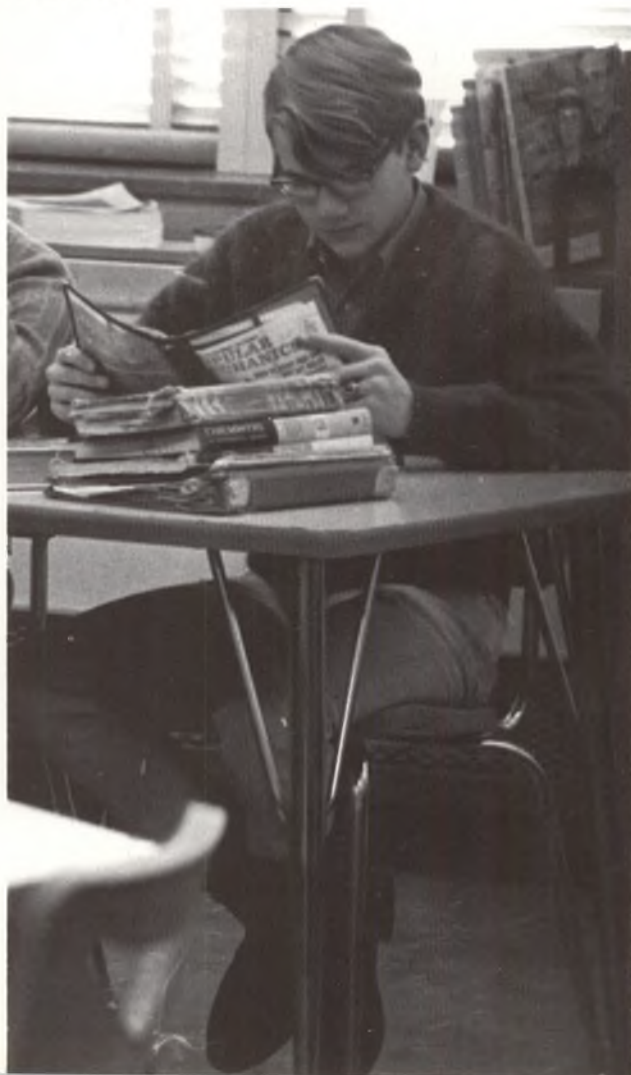

Rachel Post and Jim Lanega do their homework for music appreciation.

Timothy's library attained a different look this year. With the opening of the student group study lounge, the library was no longer filled with quite so many restless upperclassmen. Instead, it was once again the place for research that it was intended to be. More than fifty books, gotten through the federal government Elementary and Secondary Education Act, enlarged the social studies fields, particularly in American history and government. Federal money was also granted to purchase a new set of the Encyclopedia Britannica.

The library also contained equipment enabling the freshmen to do homework for their music appreciation course. In their study of harmony, musical terms and forms, and specific composers, the library proved helpful through books and records. Having a listening area available helped to fulfill a major goal of the course which, according to Mr. Landman, is "to get the students to concentrate on listening to the music rather than letting the music exist in the background as do many other modern day sounds."

The library provided a moment of leisure for Rick Vandenburg during a busy school day.

Working on a senior term paper, Butch Boer and Jime Overzet make use of the reference material in our library.

Wrestling was new this year, so Mr. Prins checks out some of the fine points.

Trojans Display Physical Fitness

One, two, one, two—this sound was often heard coming from the boy' half of the gymnasium during their phys ed classes. They had started off the year with football and soccer until the weather forced them inside. Some of the varsity and sophomore basketball members gained more experience by acting as referees for the gym classes' basketball games. With the addition of new mats, our boys began learning basic wrestling techniques from Mr. Prins and Mr. Greenfield, with hopes for a wrestling team next year. Following that, the boys returned outside to finish the school year with track events and baseball.

Although some people might not regard girls physical education as the most important course in our school, almost everyone will agree that it is the most popular. Under the supervision of Mrs. Slager, the girls began their classes with a series of exercises aimed at physical fitness. The fall and winter months were spent playing vigorous games of field hockey, speedball, and basketball. In the spring they moved on to volleyball, tumbling, and softball. The girls had been given a national physical fitness test in the fall, and were once again tested at the end of the year to see how much they had improved in coordination and skill.

Girls found that tumbling can be a little hard on the stomach.

As trembling freshmen, we entered a new school building. Our first reaction was complete fear; our next, humility, as we were forced to "pot" for seniors at the All School Party. We gradually became accustomed to school life: listening to chapel services over the intercom; spending, it seemed, half our day on buses; holding crowded pep rallies in the hallway and cheering that night at our home games in Cicero Stadium; and best of all—meeting new people and making more friends.

By sponsoring barbeques we learned the need for more organization to prevent confusion. To the chagrin of the seniors, the student body

*The final step! How long we had waited for this. Finally we were the ones who could look triumphantly at the year of leadership had begun. There were many exciting things to look forward to:

our class play, senior trip, the Junior-Senior Banquet,

But at times the fun had to wait. We had many decisions to make:
Go on to college? which one?
study what? Got to work? where?
doing what? This flood of questions had to be faced.*

We expected our final year of high school to be a big change—and it was! Joining the Illinois High School Association seemed to affect almost every phase of our school life: out-of-state trips for most organizations were banned, girls' basketball had to be confined to intramurals, and at homecoming we watched a league game instead of the traditional game with the alumni. There were many changes in our senior year, but we did keep the same principal—our class had had three principals in our first three years.

After four years of joining together as a class, meeting new friends, and learning much in human relations, we were painfully aware of our coming division after graduation. We knew that we would miss congregating in the hall, playing sneaky tricks on friends, cheering together as we tried to get the spirit jug for our class at pep rallies and our many group activities. It seemed to be a dismal end; the exciting world we had been building for four years was about to crumble. But although graduation brought an end to high school days, it brought us to a beginning of a whole new exciting world.

Juniors

The junior year can best be called a year of new experiences. This class enjoyed the activity surrounding class rings, barbeques, and their class play. As upperclassmen the juniors were given more responsibilities. They took advantage of their money-making privileges by sponsoring the first car wash a class has given in several years. Nearing the end of high school education, the juniors have begun making decisions concerning their future after graduating from Timothy.

The lively sophomore class, well known for their enthusiasm in extracurricular activities, could be heard yelling above the crowd at basketball games and cheering especially for their team. Surprisingly, the sophomore boys were the originators of the most popular cheer of the year. Not only did this class show spirit after school, but they also put enthusiasm into their schoolwork.

Freshmen

The beginning of the school year brought with it a new group of confused but cocky faces. However the seniors cheerfully took it upon themselves at the All-School Party to instruct the freshies in the importance of meekness and humility. Nevertheless they soon became well adjusted to high school life and learned to accept the new challenges and responsibilities presented to them. A very important phase of their education was just beginning.

Student Life

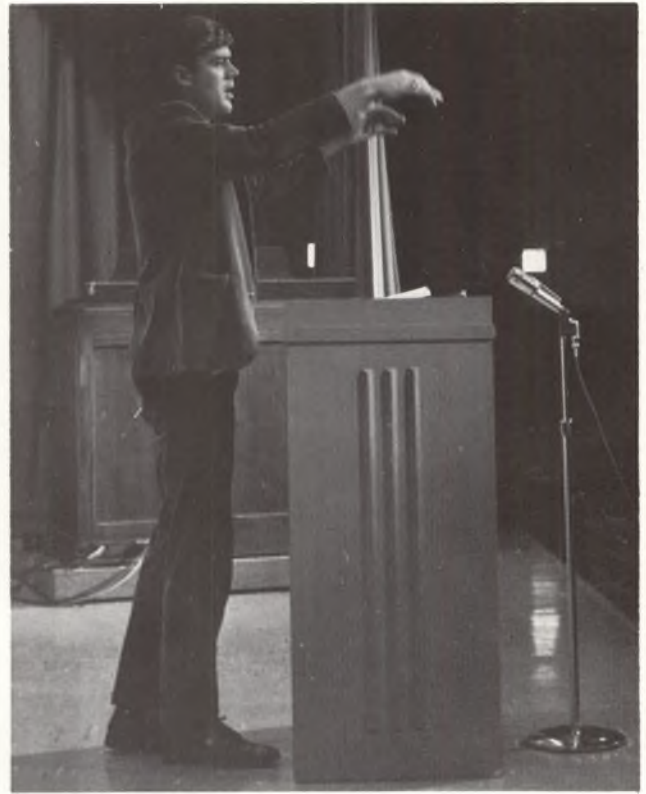

... 'Tis what I know but can't express.

—Beilby Porteus

One group to present special music was the choir.

Mr. Woltersdorff tries again to stir up enthusiasm in our chapel singing.

We Express Our Faith

As each student entered the gymnasium for chapel, he became aware of the quiet, peaceful atmosphere. However, the dimmed lights and organ prelude added more than just a church-like setting; they united us three times a week as Christian young people. Many students were able to participate in our chapel exercises by means of special music, speaking, or responsive readings. Through arrangements made by the Student Council Chapel Committee, we heard interesting messages from students, faculty, and guest speakers. In our chapel services, we were presented with questions concerning our future, our personal devotions, and our faithfulness to God. We also were made more aware of the many problems we face as Christian young people and our responsibilities toward our fellow man. Each student was brought closer to God through these messages and our chapel services became a very meaningful part of our high school life.

Fine Arts Urges Creativity

The Fine Arts Committee worked hard to achieve a successful Festival and their efforts proved worthwhile. Throughout the year, students displayed art and photography in the showcases. Each month the committee presented a recital in which talented students were able to perform in front of an audience. Three new categories were also added: free form, dramatic interpretation, and photographic slides. When Fine Arts Day arrived, we began with a chapel in which Dr. Clowney from Westminster Seminary in Philadelphia spoke to us. After chapel we heard a woodwind quintet from the University of Illinois and saw the movie "Music Box." Awards in each of the categories were presented at the evening program and some of the winners performed their entries at that time. Fine Arts Committee gave the students an opportunity to express their talents in the creative and interpretive arts and to receive constructive criticism to help them develop those talents more fully.

A dramatic interpretation was given by Donna Nederhood at a recital.

Queen Joyce Welcomes Alumni at

Although Walther was hard competition, George Huisman shows the determination that led to victory.

On January 26, Timothy's Homecoming brought new and exciting experiences for everyone. Because of the Illinois High School Association rules, the traditional game with the alumni could not be played; instead the Trojans played Walther Lutheran in a close game which resulted in another victory for Timothy. Throughout homecoming day various clubs and classes set up their displays, each hoping to win the ten-dollar prize awarded by the Student Council. The theme "Fantasy in White" was aptly carried out by the winners: the freshman class for their one-horse open sleigh and the Lit Club with their contrast of black on white.

The highlight of the festivities was the presentation of the queen and her court. Three anxious seniors, Joyce DeVries, Carol Hoffman, and Sue Keizer, and two excited juniors, Jan Hoving and Gail Schuil, were escorted to the center of the gym floor. Last year's queen, Penny Groot, crowned an exuberant Joyce DeVries as the new queen. Joyce with her court was escorted to her throne where she reigned over the rest of the game. After a light informal supper served to the alumni and all the participating groups, entertainment was provided by several musical groups: the contemporary choir, the stage band, and a light jazz combo.

Hamstra ups the score with one of his "Hambock" free throws.

Waltham Game

Homecoming program was sparked by the appearance of the Contemporary Choir.

Our nervous new queen, is helped with her slipping crown.

"You mistake me, my dear. I have a high respect for your nerves; they are my old friends."

"Don't give up hope, Miss Elizabeth."

Putting on makeup wasn't half as hard as taking it off.

Seniors Revive

Pride and Prejudice

Excitement and tension mounted as the opening night of the play loomed ahead. The experienced seniors developed what is known as "play fatigue," but they relieved their tensions and anxieties by playing with hula-hoops and fighting for a seat on the sofa kept back stage.

On the evenings of November 2 and 3, the excitement of the previous weeks came to a peak as the theatrical version of Jane Austin's famous novel Pride and Prejudice came to life under the direction of Mr. Wolterstorff. The romantic comedy was set in England at the turn of the fashionable nineteenth century. Its primary concern was the Bennet family and their various problems, chief of which was Mrs. Bennet. Any eligible male who entered the house was immediately a target for the scheming woman whose goal was to find husbands for her five daughters—with or without their consent.

The work of the props and costume committees resulted in authentic room furnishings, and dress and hair styles of that period, making the whole setting realistic. The frustrating rehearsals and long hours of after school practice, the stagefright and frantic searching for play books behind the scenes were well worth the effort: the seniors were rewarded with a splendid performance.

Juniors Relive Elizabeth Barrett

The Barretts of Whimple Street

Juniors grow weary while trying to remember their movements and lines.

But how is it all to end? What have we to look forward to?

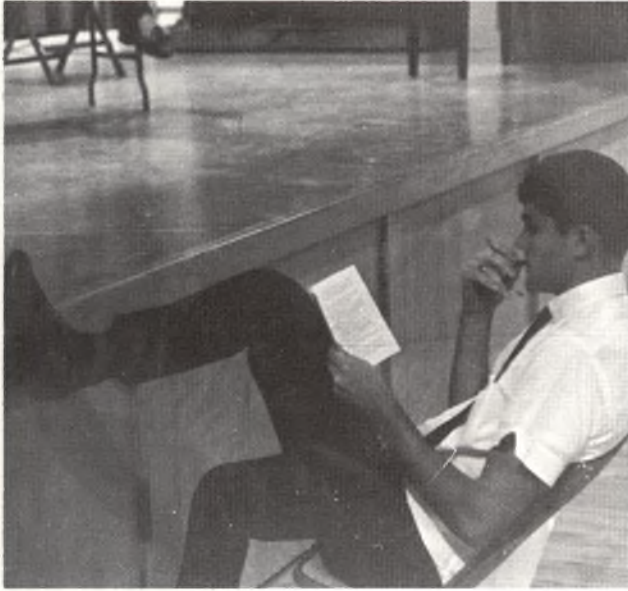

One of the biggest events in the lives of many juniors was the presentation of their class play "The Barretts of Whimple Street." Taking a portion out of the life of the renowned invalid poetess Elizabeth Barrett, the play emphasized her relationship with the members of her family and with Robert Browning. Mr. Barrett, Elizabeth's selfish and domineering father, managed to practically ruin his children's chances of happiness by turning friends and suitors away from the house. The main conflict arose as Elizabeth weighed her father's contempt for Robert against her own love for him. The realistic portrayal of her life ended in a romantic tone — she eloped with Robert. Yet for the juniors there was more than just on-stage excitement. The play cast and committees experienced the pressure of getting appropriate costumes, sets, and props, although this was somewhat relieved when the performance date was postponed. They understood the necessity of perfect memorization and felt that certain sickly sensation before the curtain rose. But most important, the juniors learned to express themselves, and that was a valuable experience.

Varsity Team Sparks Enthusiasm in

The 1967-68 varsity basketball team was one of the best teams in our school's history. The final seasonal record was twenty-six wins and two losses, with the team going undefeated during league play. They began the year by losing to Luther North in the P.S.L. Tournament but went on triumphantly to snatch twenty-six consecutive victories, two of them in league play against Luther North. Our season ended in its only other loss—against York in the state regional. During the Christmas holidays, the Trojans won the championship of Walther's annual invitational tournament. At the end of the season Timothy had its first chance to enter the state tournament. They approached the Elmwood Park District with high goals and these goals were attained when they took the championship. They then moved on to the York regional where they triumphed over St. Mel with a last minute victory. Our team finally met defeat in the regional game against York. It was Mr. Greenfield's vigorous training and his contagious incentive to win that spurred the Trojan warriors on to their great triumphs. To celebrate the successful season the entire school was given a day off as a "glory day" at the close of the season.

Enthusiasm Is Shown by Exuberant

One way of witnessing a basketball game was to observe the different expressions of anxiety, despair, and enthusiasm on the cheerleaders' faces. As they got more involved with the game they stirred up excitement throughout the crowd. A new addition to the varsity squad this year was Debbie Slager, their mascot; she often amused the crowd with her sparkling antics. Mrs. Slager proved to be very helpful in offering suggestions for improvement. In October she took the varsity squad to the Illinois State University in Normal, Illinois, to participate in a cheerleading clinic; there they obtained many new cheers and ideas for promoting school spirit and enthusiasm. A big asset to the Frosh-Soph squad was their new uniforms. Besides cheering at each game, the cheerleaders also had the responsibility of presenting the flags at each home game and planning pep rallies for important games. Each week their practices were spent in learning new cheers and practicing flips and walk-overs. The cheerleaders did well their important task of acting as official representatives of our school.

Develops Skill

In all the excitement over the varsity basketball team this year, the frosh-soph team somehow got lost in the shuffle. The I.H.S.A. tournament did not include frosh-soph teams so they didn't get much publicity, but they still worked hard all season, practicing for many long, hard hours after school. The skill they developed from their rigorous training paid off in a winning team; the frosh-soph team finished the season with a 10-8 overall record, and a 7-7 record in the P.S.L. In their opening game, the defenders of the league title were outscored by Walther, although they never gave up. They made a big comeback, though, in crushing Foreman. The first half of the season was rather slow, but the last part of the season improved when we got "revenge" against some of the teams that beat us during the first half of the season. Coach Milkamp was happy with the improvement of all the players and expressed his belief that many of them will be ready for varsity ball next year.

Freshmen Exhibit Future Potential

Found in a normal Huisman position, Bob tries to get a jump ball.

The freshman team began rather slowly this year, but gathered speed through much hard work and a tremendous desire to win. Coach Mepyans was pleased with the freshmen when they defeated all but one of the teams in the second round of games. Their over-all record was 9 wins-6 losses. Although the team finished the P.S.L. season in third place, they did manage to give first place Walther its only loss in the Trojans' best-played game of the season. One of the most exciting games was played with Roseland in the Trojans' only overtime game.

Runners Rally School Pride

The final stretch proved to be the test of endurance for Dick Hoving, team captain.

With the return of many of last year's lettermen, the Trojan harriers began the season favorably, finishing with a 3-4 record. The runners were given more incentive to win by a large poster in the hall which gave the results and places of their latest track meet. Our lead runner, Randy Veltkamp, ran an undefeated league season with a best time of 9:30. Being in the Illinois High School Association, our team gained experience in running in the district meet against some of the best competition in the state. The Trojans came in fifth place in the P.S.L. tournament—the last and most important meet of the year. Although the cross country team didn't do quite as well as had been hoped, Mr. Greenfield, their coach, felt that the effort and time spent this year will bring results in the '68 season.

Intramural Sports Prove Successful

Boys' and girls' intramurals were anticipated by most of the students because it allowed them to develop and use their abilities in competitive sports. The games were supervised by Mr. Hoving and Mrs. Slager. Teams were formulated, captains determined, and special days were set aside for either girls' or boys' intramurals. Touch football for the boys and field hockey for the girls kicked off the fall season and provided rousing action for the participants and on-lookers. Basketball and volleyball for both boys and girls composed the winter agenda. These two sports were by far the most popular and competitive of all the seasonal athletics. Spring brought a growing interest in tennis, baseball, and bowling and ended a year of desirable development in intramural sports.

Tumbling on the mats helped pass the time until the second game.

Freethrows helped to keep Glenn Boonstra's team in first place.

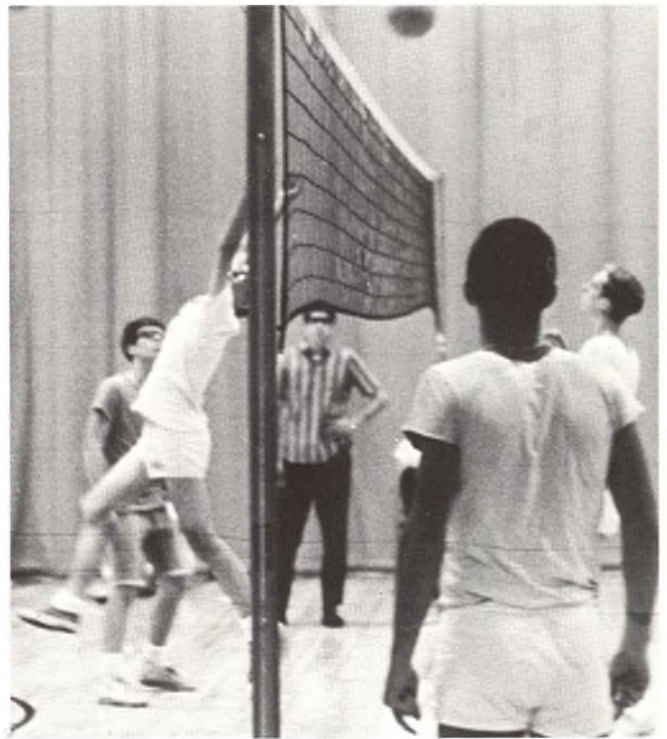

Fifty-seven; twenty-four; ninety-eight; bike!

Because there is no longer a girls' interscholastic team, there was a large turnout for the basketball intramurals.

It's surprising sometimes how the ball manages to get over the net.

Some boys will bend over backwards to help their team.

Council Completes Year of Action

Members of Student Council may have had their fun, but they also received their share of work. They organized chapel services, provided extra-curricular activities, and served as a mediator between the student body, the faculty, and the administration. A special committee composed of Student Council representatives and faculty advisors had the difficult job of setting up three chapel services a week and finding interesting speakers. In the area of activities the Council really emphasized Work Day, which was a tremendous success; $2,200 was raised to sponsor all-school parties, Homecoming, the Awards Banquet, bonfires, and scholarships. The main link between the student body and the administration was the Senate, which was composed of the council's officers, the principal, and the deans. Senate dealt with some of the disciplinary and general problems affecting the school and the students. For the representatives, this year did involve much action, yet the results were very satisfying.

Honor Society Members Recognized

Of all the scholastic honors a student may strive for, being a member of the Honor Society is probably one of the most coveted goals. For the Honor Society is synonymous with scholastic excellence. It is open only to members of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes who maintain at least a "B" average for each semester. If a member's average drops to a "B-" for more than one semester, he permanently loses his membership. So by the time a class reaches its senior year, only the students who have the highest scholastic average remain in the society. All seniors who graduate as members of the Honor Society are awarded a gold tassel on their graduation caps and are recognized at the Awards Banquet by being given a certificate of merit. Most of the members are also active participants in other extra-curricular activities and in this way have contributed much to our school.

Band Practice Earns Rewards

Waking up in the morning is hard for most students, but for the band members it was not a problem. At 8:00 they began to warm up on their instruments and to practice pieces for their next concert. Along with a new director came new experiences for the band. Mr. Landman introduced a system of points and demerits; each of the band members was given points for practicing, performing in ensembles, and attending concerts. Demerits were given for such things as forgetting or losing music. Any member who had one thousand points at the end of the year received a band letter. A new stereo tape recorder was used to record rehearsals and band concerts. In the future it may be used by students to record their auditions when applying for music scholarships. The band entered the I.H.S.A. Festival for the first time, earning two "superior" and two "excellent" ratings for its performance at Ottawa. They ended the year by again marching in the Memorial Day Parade in Elmhurst.

In the dimmed gymnasium the choir creates the mood of Christmas

Choir Encounters Active Year

For some students, seventh hour was just another class to sit through. For certain ones, it meant a chance to relax and let their emotions emerge by singing in our school choir. Each day, the choir began with warm-up exercises before practicing songs. They sang at various churches throughout the year—either during the service or at special hymnsings. At their fall concert, the choir performed the "Gallia," a large work by Gounod; Mrs. Robert Hoekstra was the guest soprano soloist. On March 16, the choir members went to Ottawa, Illinois, to participate in the state contest. There they performed before a panel of judges and were given a rating along with constructive criticisms. On Palm Sunday they sang Vivaldi's "Gloria," with a few student soloists. In the spring, Timothy's choir presented one of their most difficult pieces, "Songs from Drum Taps" by Howard Hanson. The year required much routine hard work of the choir, pianists, and Mr. Wolterstorff, but every performance compensated for the weeks of practice.

TRUMPET Heralds Timothy News

Some readers may have wondered why our school paper is called the Trumpet. During this past year the newspaper staff has given us one definition: they know how to attract attention — and the more the better. Co-editors John Evenhouse and Virginia Veldman tried to deal with controversial subjects such as report cards and the purchase of trees. Using last year's paper as a guide, the Trumpet improved many of its features, added a small-talk column, and took more opinion polls. A growing student interest in the editorials and news items was shown as the number of letters to the editor increased. Considering the monthly deadlines, the staffs did a remarkable job of presenting school events, activities, and opinions on time. The difficult and sometimes tedious work of Miss Miedema and the writing, typing, photography, and business staffs was reflected in every finished copy of the newspaper.

SAGA Documents Another Year

One could always find some of the staff working in the "pub" room.

Each year a small group of students with high hopes decide they will publish the best annual in our school's history. This Saga staff was no different. But after one month of day-dreaming the deadline suddenly darkened their future. At that time the editor, Beth Strodman and Miss Bean, the annual's advisor, did enough pushing to ensure a faster flow of work by the staffs. The photographers seemed to be everywhere, taking pictures from new angles—from sitting on top of a refrigerator to lying on a floor. This year the staff was well-prepared with ideas from the summer workshop at the University of Minnesota. The editor, layout editor, and photographers spent a week there gaining experience and collecting ideas to take home to the staff. Every day after school, several of the staff members could be found working in the publications room, often interrupted by passers-by poking their heads in the door to offer encouragement. As the final deadline approached, the staff began to stay late to get everything ready and soon became well-known at Burger King. We finally sent off the final pages with a feeling of relief and pride.

Clubs Accentuate Versatility

Commercial Club, whose goal is to assist upper class- men in planning their future in the commercial area, met once a month. Meetings were usually highlighted by a speaker from either a business college, secretarial school, or some area of business. These speakers gave the girls an idea of the available jobs and courses which were open to them. The club also helped sponsor a commercial field trip to various business offices, giving business students a look at their fields of interest.

Math Club was discontinued two years ago but is now in action again. The basic area of study this past year was computers, but a few members branched out into the areas of optical illusions and data processing. Although the club has only approximately fifteen members, don't let its small size deceive you; they entered a display in homecoming, had a Christmas party, and really progressed in their various fields of study.

Students Look to the Future

Although the Future Teachers' Club was a slow starter in the year, they caught up quite quickly. Membership was open to anyone interested in the educational field. Sponsored by Dr. Rude, the club hosted a successful "pot-luck dinner" with the Future Teachers Clubs of York and Immaculate Conception high schools. Throughout the second semester, members were shown films concerning college and teaching careers.

One of the largest clubs in our school was the Future Nurses Club. Girls who joined this club received information to help them decide whether or not nursing was the vocation they wished to go into. The lectures by nurses and other professionals and the showing of films aided them in making their career choice. Some of the girls got an even better picture of nursing by working in nursing homes and hospitals.

Students Donate Spare Study Periods

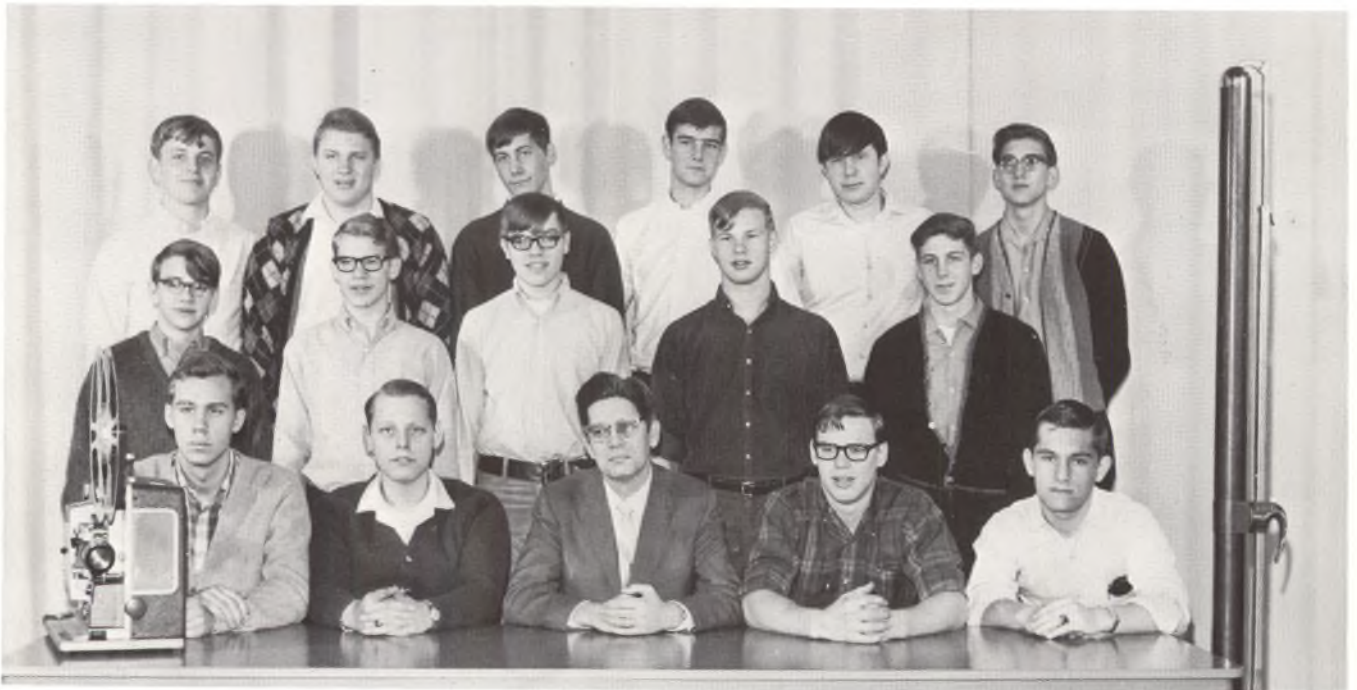

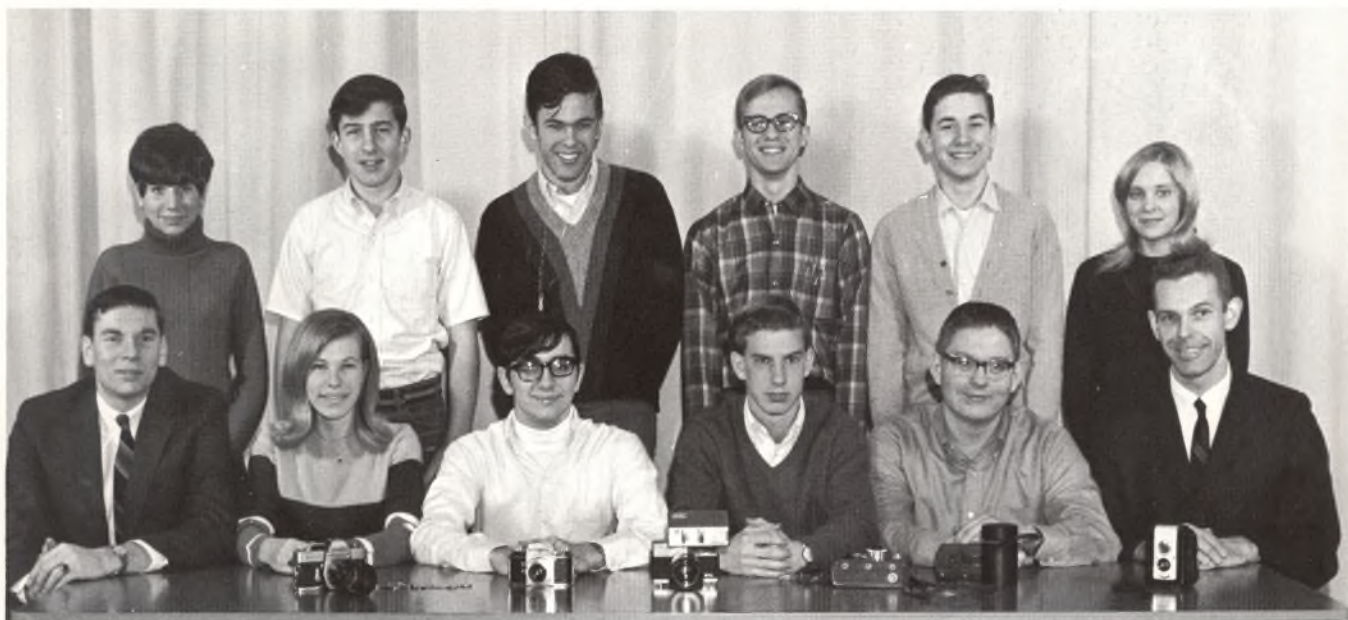

In dire emergencies, such as when an almost forgotten film needed to be shown, the projectionists always came to the rescue. Members of the club were given their assignments by Chuck Stoub, their president, after he received the schedule from their sponsor, Dr. Rude. They then showed the films and set up other audio-visual equipment during their study halls. Having experienced projectionists train the newer members in handling the equipment, gave them the skill and efficiency they required.

Perhaps one of the most overlooked groups of people in our school during this year were the library aides who assisted Miss Bean with the library work and helped the students in finding and checking out books, shelving them, and locating magazines. These girls relieved some of the drudgery involved in maintaining a beautiful and well-organized library.

Talents Employed in School Clubs

LIT CLUB

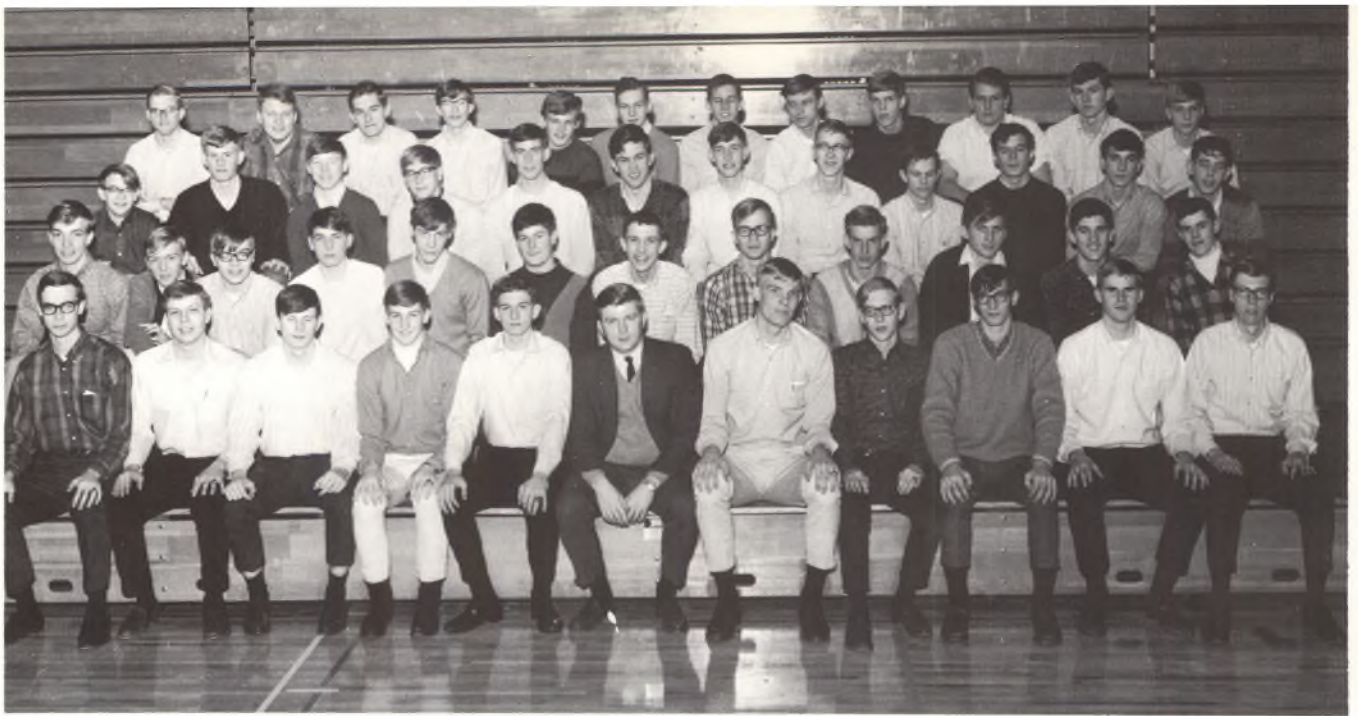

Inspiring interest in books and looking beneath superficial meanings were the main purposes of the Lit Club. Under the direction of Mr. Harkema, the club studied, discussed, and attempted to explain various books, including The Red Pony and The Crucible. The members individually read the chosen books and then met in different members' homes to discuss them. The highlight of the year was when the club went to see the movie Elvira Madigan and discussed it as a form of literature.

CAMERA CLUB

Since its re-organization two years ago, Camera Club has added more members and more action. As always the highlights of the year were the field trips. A visit to the Loop in Chicago gave the members valuable experience in photographic techniques. Another trip to view an exhibition at Tri-City Savings provided members with a study of unusual photographic effects. Camera Club also allowed members to use the dark room, enabling them to learn about photography first hand, using modern equipment.

Lettermen Work To Aid Athletics

The activities of the Lettermen's Club began early in the school year. In November they sponsored the annual senior-faculty game; the "hippie" seniors beat the "red-skinned" faculty by a score of 71 to 54. The activities of the members were many and varied. Due to the enormous crowds at all the basketball games, the boys took turns directing people to a parking space in the parking lot. Between games and at halftime, some of them would dust off the floor to remove anything that might interfere with the game. The lettermen also took charge of keeping spectators off the playing floor at halftime. Their popcorn machine, purchased last year, got a big workout in the biggest money-making project—selling refreshments throughout the basketball games. This year it was a lot easier on the boys because they took over room 68 instead of trying to conduct business in the hall. The lettermen made two big purchases with their profits. First, they bought a whirl-pool bath for all the athletes to use in case of injury or muscle strain. They also added a new look to the varsity basketball team and all the coaches and managers with the purchase of red blazers.

Lettermen's biggest job was selling refreshments at all home games.

GAA Initiates All Girls' Sports

Debbie Stob learns about farmers and chickens and eggs as she falls victim to a stunt at the costume party.

The Girls Athletic Association concentrated on promoting sports, parties, and fun for its members. Intramural games were sponsored and directed by the GAA; these games gave the girls an opportunity to develop and use their athletic abilities in competitive sports. Basketball, volleyball, field hockey, bowling, and tennis were played after school under the direction of Mrs. Slager, the sponsor. By participating in intramurals, the girls acquired points for playing, for being captains, and for being referees. These points were totaled up at the end of the year and awards were given to the girls with the most points. Several parties were planned throughout the year. For Halloween there was a costume party, at which the members learned the "Hora," an old traditional Israeli folk dance. The skiing party which was to be held over Christmas vacation was cancelled by a snow shortage. In the spring there was a splash party and then the awards picnic which ended an exciting and active season.

Pep Organizations Animate Games

Under the direction of Mr. Landman, the pep band has led the school in a more exuberant type of cheering during pep rallies and games. They accomplished this through songs such as the "Fight Song" which made the spectators feel the importance of backing the team. Pep band managed to improve school spirit and at the same time provided variety in entertainment.

One of the highlights of the home basketball games was the musical routines performed by the pom pom girls. Under Mrs. Slager's guidance they spent hours after school working together and coordinating their movements. Although the squad had occasional embarrassing problems with the record player skipping and girls falling out of step, they met the situations with poise.

Pep Club Fulfills Name

Sitting together at pep rallies and making pep signs were all essential duties of Pep Club members. Every week the girls were busy designing posters to announce coming games and meets and preparing the "T" for each home basketball game. The "T" gave the boys extra incentive to win as they make their grand entrance into the gym. The huge pennant display hanging in the gym was originally an entry in Homecoming competition, but remained on the wall as a token of school spirit. The club raised money by selling rah-rahs, pins, and pennants in school colors. Since we were the host of the P.S.L. Tournament, the Pep Club also made the posters and signs for use at Concordia College.

Although this is the end of another year, another Saga, and the expressions of 1968, we can still look forward to future expressions. Through our work this year with expressions of people as our theme, the staff has become a little more aware of the importance of the way in which we express ourselves.

We would like to thank all those who worked with us this year. Our advisors, Miss Bean and Mr. Alsum, deserve special thanks for keeping us going when it got rough. We would also like to thank Don Kowalski, of Edmund Studio for his part in the yearbook and Mr. Mitchell of Walsworth Publishing Co. for his suggestions and encouragement.

Baseball Men Win PSL Championship

With determination, John Dykstra slides for a safe call.

This was a big year for our baseball team in many ways. Mr. Bilthuis was aided by Mr. Slager in coaching; this meant that the players were given more individual attention during practice. Another factor which contributed to the team's success was their determination, even when they were behind or when some of the better players were injured. This determination, along with experienced playing, and good pitching and hitting, earned them the Private School League Championship for 1968. The highlight of the baseball season was Timothy's victory over Willowbrook, which was our first state tournament victory.

Track Team Sets New Records

This was a year of building for our track team, since the whole squad is returning next season with the exception of one senior. The varsity team finished the PSL Tournament in sixth place, but the promising frosh-soph team won first place in their tournament with an excellent showing. Several school records were broken by Randy Veldkamp in running and Hank Voss in pole vaulting. Mr. Greenfield, who was aided by Dick Hoving in coaching this season, is expecting a great future for our track team in the next few years.

Timothy has never really had a successful golf season; and although this year's team did not bring home any trophies or awards, they had the best golf record in our school's history. Mr. Milkamp helped his team get into shape and worked on their form through several practice matches with various schools. In these matches the team beat three teams and tied a fourth. The major golfing event of the year was the P.S.L. Tournament of May 20, which ended in a disappointing seventh place for Timothy. However, at the end of the season, the team stood in fourth place in the Private School League.

In addition to playing in the Private School League matches and the tournament, the tennis team for the first time participated in the Illinois State High School Tournament. Although the team failed to be victorious at any meets this season, they made a strong showing and displayed fine spirit. The erratic spring weather and eligibility problems of some of the players hampered the team at the start; however the players showed a marked improvement in the later stages of the season. With only one member graduating, Mr. Mepyans and his team are looking forward to a better record next year.
