A picture - what does it mean?

The artist when he paints is portraying something he feels.

Since the observer interprets a painting through his own feelings and experiences, the picture may not mean the same to him as to the artist.

*A picture of the year 1968-69 might include the Olympics in Mexico City . . .

Faculty and Academics

*As a canvas is the foundation of a painting, so the acquisition of knowledge and the instruction which we receive become the basis of our future.
The quality and the strength of our canvas will determine the lasting value of our picture.*

Board Upholds Excellence at Timothy

Timothy's school board is composed of eighteen interested, hardworking individuals, who meet at least once a month in order to operate our school. The board members are elected by the supporters of the school to serve three-year terms. In order to operate more effectively the school board organizes its members into various committees.

These include the executive, finance, promotion, transportation, and building and grounds committees. They raise the money to run the school, try to recruit more students, and form school policies, making sure that the "Christian" in our school's name is maintained.

Administration Tackles Problems

The administration must have really felt the need for Christ's supporting strength when they looked at the work ahead of them in this school year. They thought they had to replace five teachers until the Army took Mr. Waltersdorf in August, making it six. But the administration found five new teachers and shouldered some additional classes themselves. Among other accomplishments, Mr. Den Besten started a reevaluation of all the areas of study at Timothy in order to bring to it a broader and deeper Christian Education. Besides Miss Kingma's duties as assistant principal, which meant, among other things, making up the schedule and registering the students, she and Mr. Hoving did a great deal of counseling. Each student had at least one interview with either Miss Kingma or Mr. Hoving to talk about problems in their education or personal lives. They especially helped the seniors by counseling them about their futures after high school.

Language Buffs Struggle with Grammar

At Christmastime, the Latin students walked through the halls singing Latin hymns.

The third year German students found it sometimes difficult but interesting trying to make up skits in German for their next day's assignment. These skits were created from different themes given by Mr. Mepyans. The second level German students listened to German on records; this helped them in their translation and study of grammar. The language lab was used by the first level German students, as their main goal was speaking and pronouncing the German basics correctly.

Due to lack of third year Latin students, the upper levels of Latin were not offered this year. The second year Latin students, once again taught by Mr. Harkema, reviewed the basics of grammar and then went into readings of ancient history by Cicero and part of Ovid's Metamorphosis. The first level of Latin students learned the basic structure of grammar along with correct pronunciation of the language.

Social Studies Explore Trends

Starting with the world history and U.S. history courses, the social studies department followed a trend towards discussion and away from the memorization of facts so despised by the students. Social studies offered the most variety to seniors. The elective courses to choose from were psychology, the most theorized course, economics, a study of today's world economy, and modern history, a course on present day Europe and Asia. The required social problems class covered subjects like crime, delinquency, and marriage. American government, another required course, gave the seniors a thorough look at the way our government operates; because of the election year, this study was extremely relevant. Tapes and films brought diversity and additional explanation to all the courses.

During a U.S. history discussion, the juniors argue whether or not our revolt from the British was right.

In a panel discussion, one social problems class argue the pro and con of bussing.

Christian Guidelines Given in Bible

The senior Bible class is left with many a thought-provoking question.

Each student at Timothy is required to take four semesters of Bible, usually one a year, each directing its attention to a different aspect of spiritual or Biblical learning. Previously freshmen had studied the Old Testament. However, due to changes to be put into effect next year, courses of New Testament Bible study were taught to both the freshmen and sophomores. The general emphasis of these classes was the life of Christ and the early growth of Christianity. Freshmen who took Bible first semester concentrated on studying the book of Acts. In the second semester classes, the emphasis changed and they took up the study of Luke. The third year of Bible concerns itself with the life of the Church throughout history its changing influence and divisions, its champions, and its preservation. The final course that is required is the doctrine class, where the seniors examine their own beliefs and their relationships to the Church. The course tried to answer such thought provoking and important questions as "Who is God?", "Who am I?", and "What do I really believe?"

John Hamstra seems intent on recording accurate data to measure the refraction of light.

Labs Challenge Science Students

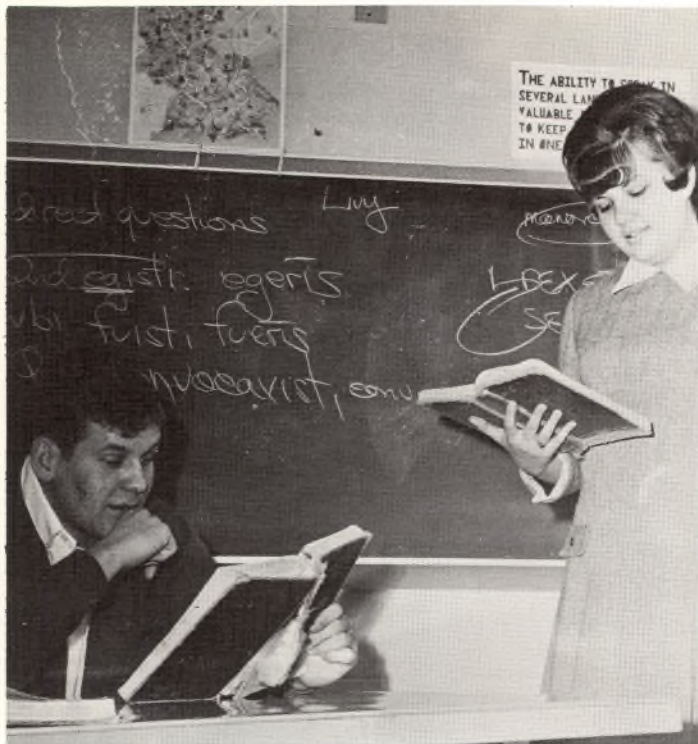

As a result of an expanded biology department, Timothy had five science courses in its curriculum this year instead of the usual four. The freshmen and sophomores who were not likely to enter the field of biology took a programmed general biology course. The interested student took a more complete and detailed course which included two periods of lab work a week. Physical science and chemistry were the elective courses offered to students who had already taken biology. Biology, chemistry and a good knowledge of math were the prerequisites for those students who took physics. The science department used courses prepared in cooperation with the National Science Foundation. These are challenging programs, demanding much individual investigation on the part of the students.

Students Survey Literature

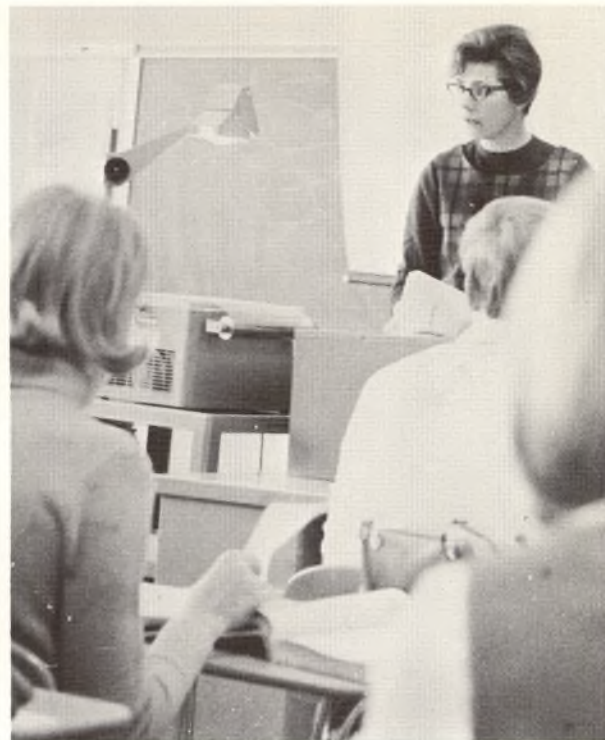

Different types of literature kept the freshmen busy in their English classes as they studied many authors from different countries. The course was designed to give them a broad understanding of the short story, poem, novel and the play. During the first semester, the sophomores studied the correct application and structure of grammar; their second semester was devoted to the study of early American authors, who wrote about the struggles in establishing a new nation. The juniors spent the first semester in the study of Twentieth Century American authors. In their second semester the juniors chose between a world literature course and speech. Speech students underwent such experiences as charades, drama, debate, and frightening impromptu speeches. The world lit class studied early writings dealing with Roman and Greek history and satire, and modern literature written by well-known authors. English lit gave the seniors a chance to delve into all types of literature as they studied British writings from ancient Beowulf to contemporary Pygmalion.

Listening to a reading by Mr. Schuurman, the American lit class relaxes from the routine of class work.

After perfecting their theorems, the sophomores write them on the blackboard.

Miss Kingma contends that the answer in the back of the algebra book is correct.

Upperclassmen Rated on Math Ability

For the students, math, more than most other subjects, has been a constant building process. Eight years of arithmetic was used as a spring-board for the more abstract concepts used in the math courses. Freshmen studied algebraic expressions, equalities, and inequalities in algebra. A study of geometry taught sophomores about points, lines and polygons and their relationships in a plane and space. A second year of algebra, the first math elective, went into a more advanced study of the properties of the real number system, and introduced trigonometry. The seniors who took the advanced math course covered such things as progressions, probability, trigonometry, and calculus; they used the book Elementary Mathematical Analysis for their second semester study. Timothy participated for the first time in the annual test given by the Mathematical Association of America. Given to interested upperclassmen, it rated them nationally on their math ability.

Juniors check to see if their assigned problems are correct.

Business Courses Undergo Changes

Due to the lack of a commercial teacher and the limited number of students involved, the business courses at Timothy underwent several changes for this year. Teachers who were not too familiar with typing, taught typing. The major change was the fact that shorthand had to be dropped for a year. However, typing faired much better, acquiring the status of a major subject. Each class had two labs a week in which to do assignments, besides meeting the usual five times a week. Personal typing offered a general knowledge of typing to college prep students. Using adding machines and learning how to keep accounts helped prepare bookkeeping students for jobs in the office or for their own businesses.

Rich Smits learns the value of an adding machine in bookkeeping.

Trying to build up their speed and accuracy, the typing students take one of many five-minute speed tests.

Students Develop Practical Skills

HOME ECONOMICS

Cutting, pinning, and stitching were the basics of sewing learned in one phase of home economics. In another phase, the girls were taught cooking skills, which sometimes even brought good results. The more advanced student also tried to develop a talent in gourmet cooking. A field trip to Colby's furniture store taught the girls that developing good taste is important in interior decorating. They were also given demonstrations by speakers such as a representative from the Northern Illinois Gas Company. All these experiences, plus a short course in family planning, provided girls taking home ec with a good background for managing efficient homes.

Muriel Schutt hems a sleeve on her home ec project.

Dwight Bonnes does a spiffy job on his lettering in mech draw.

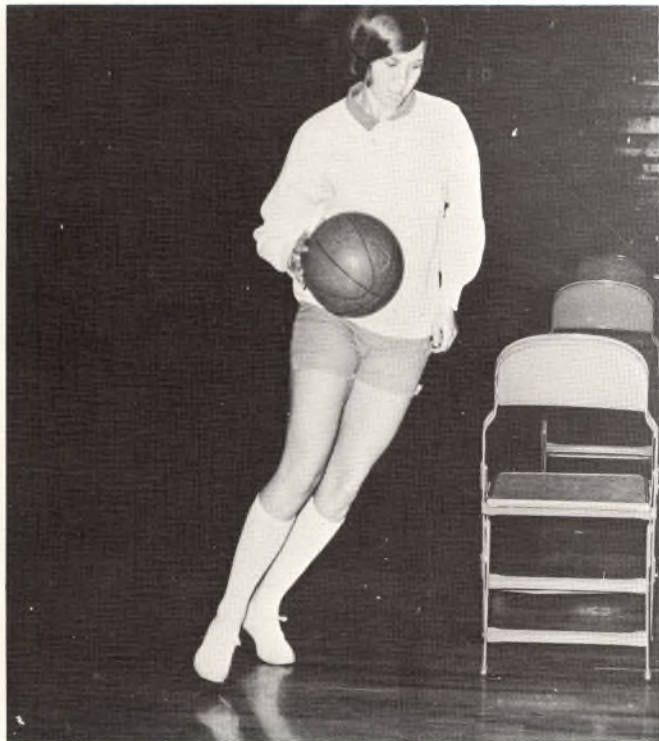

While learning the basics of mech draw, the students also learn to work independently.

MECHANICAL DRAWING

The purpose of mechanical drawing was to teach various aspects of this art, such as lettering, and reading and making blueprints. The course was geared to the student who plans to go on into engineering, architecture, or drafting. Timothy usually offers a three-level course in mechanical drawing; however a beginning course was not offered this year because of the shortage of teachers. The more advanced students met with the lower level classes but they worked more on their own. The climax of the year for the advanced students was building a small model house.

Phys Ed Stresses Variety in Sports

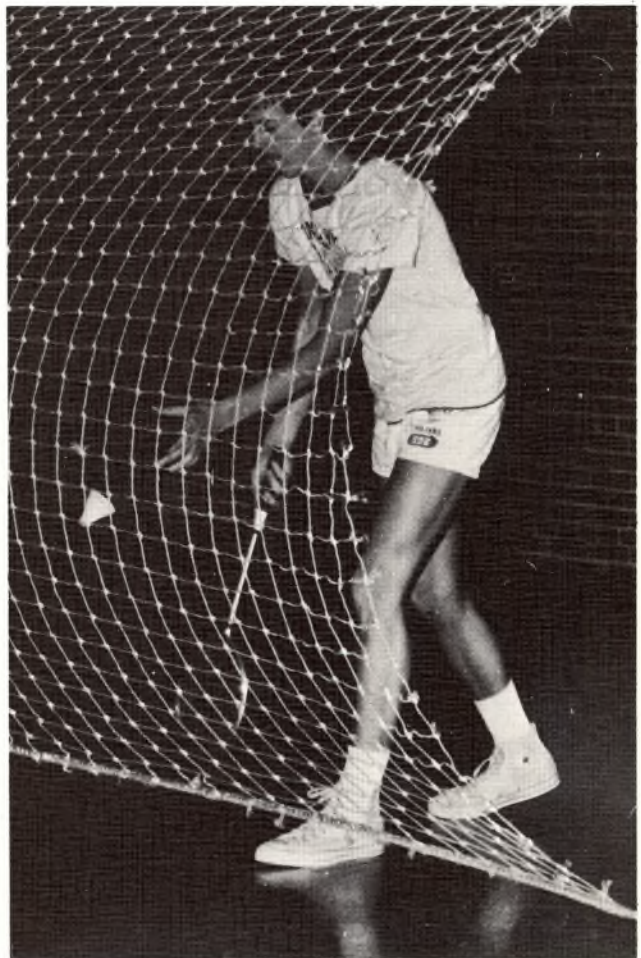

Linda Workman dribbles deftly through a prepared obstacle course.

Keeping control of the soccer ball is difficult with so many girls always trying to get it away.

This year physical education underwent a number of changes; these were aimed at building a more comprehensive program for developing physical skills. When this new program has been completed, the freshmen and sophomores will concentrate on team play and working with others while the juniors and seniors take on sports where the emphasis is slanted more towards the individual. Another aspect of the program was the step toward achievement of equality between learning a sport and development in it. A variety of sports was offered in relation to this, such as badminton, gymnastics, creative exercise, and track and field events. Physical education was taken more seriously and looked at as a subject to learn about.

By working on his serves, Tom Keift hopes to win later phys ed badminton games.

The Fine Arts Encourage Independence

LIBRARY

Timothy's library is a place where the students go to read or study. The student could make use of its many reference books, novels, magazines, and newspapers during study halls. Again this year a federal grant was given to the library; this was used to build up the library's materials on careers. A career information center was set up to help interest and inform the students.

Finding the library useful, Dennis Keizer checks some resources for an assignment.

Students often crowd the library for either leisurely reading or hard work.

Art Latta unleashes his feelings by working on his psychedelic poster.

MUSIC

The purpose of the music classes was to teach the students to appreciate good music. With the help of a new book, Mr. Landman taught the students about the music and composers of the different musical periods. The students' big project was to write a paper on a musical composition, giving their impressions of it.

Work and Expression

ART

Art classes met one period a week during study halls. The art program was designed to make students familiar with various art media. Two of the basic projects undertaken were a design done in tempera with the emphasis on several color families and a psychedelic poster done in florescent water color. The projects enabled the students to become acquainted with the media and to realize the possibilities and limitations of each, and at the same time allowed them to express themselves creatively within the framework of the problem assigned. The program aided beginners and advanced students alike to produce some original and creative pieces.

All eyes are on Mr. Landman as he directs the chorus at a fine arts assembly.

Student Council Tries New Ideas

Student Council led the student body through a year of activities and improvements. The council revised the constitution in regard to the qualifications for president, making his election come more directly from the student body. Another improvement worked on was the landscaping project; through collecting donations, Student Council directly helped to beautify the school grounds. Throughout the year many committees were set up, such as the dance committee; the purpose of the committee was merely to investigate the feeling of the community on this subject. Throughout the year Student Council provided numerous activities for the enjoyment of the students. Starting the year off, there was the annual all-school party for freshman initiation, and later the Christmas party, a movie during counter courting week, election of the homecoming queen and homecoming itself. and in May the Student Council presidential campaign parties.

SAGA Captures Timothy's Year

Since last year's Saga did so well that they received an All-American rating, this year's staff had quite a job to keep up with that precedent.

The staff started out the year enthusiastically, prepared to work hard and put out a yearbook with quality. But when work piled up, deadlines flew by, and enthusiasm lagged, the editors and sponsors had to offer some criticism as well as encouragement to get the staffs to meet the goal of a spring book. Much preparation had to go into making the Saga. Both the editor and assistant editor began their work during the summer. The workshop they attended at Kent State University gave them some of the ideas and technical experience necessary for editing a yearbook. With long hours put in after school, the last pages were finally finished and sent in; then the staff could sit back in satisfaction with what they had done.

TRUMPET Polls Student Opinions

Miss Miedema - Sponsor, G. Veldman - Editor, L. Witte - Assistant Editor, M. Stob - Sports Editor.

The Trumpet this year tried to fulfill its purpose of being the voice of the students. At least one noon hour every month students were seen sitting in their homerooms pouring over an issue of their school paper. Each issue contained the news around school, editorials and letters, special features and sports news. Editor Ginny Veldman and Co-editor Lin Witte put out a special issue the first week of school. Another special preceded their mock presidential election. Christmastime brought an issue devoted completely to poems about peace, hope, and love. The paper carried a new feature this year called "The view from the sidelines." This column contained interesting reports and comments on Timothy's sports and answered questions on the sports program. The monthly issues proved that the editors and the typing, writing, photography and business staffs along with Miss Miedema, their sponsor, put many long but well-spent hours into putting the Trumpet together.

Trip Gives Incentive to Band

Ron Mensink makes the usual pre-concert adjustments on John Van Stedum's uniform.

The band schedule held a lot of excitement and challenges during the year. With the graduation of many excellent band members, the year was approached quite skeptically by many. Before the challenge of the year was really faced, there was a concert at Rest Haven. Fortunately, this uncovered the problems before any more of the year went by. A turning point for many band members was the fall concert, staged with the choir. Music became an enjoyment and something which could be made to sound beautiful. March 28 marked the peak of the year when it spotlighted the band in Grandville, Michigan. For the first time in four years, the band was allowed to take a trip and the concert given there was the best of the year. As a result of the annual candy sales, the band was able to purchase an acoustical shell to reflect sound. This can be used during performances when a microphone would be out of place. A spring concert, the band festival and marching on Memorial Day rounded out a full year for the band.

Choir Works on Tone and Quality

For fifty-eight students in our school, fifth hour was an opportunity to relax and express emotions by singing. The purpose of choir, under Mr. Landman's direction, was to learn the mechanics of singing and musicianship itself, to learn the musical value of numbers and also to present concerts. Practices every day began with breathing exercises and "bumming"; then came routine hard work on songs. The daily practicing was preparation for the fall and spring concerts and for the hymnsings at which the choir performed. Although most of the numbers they sang were sacred, the spring concert included secular music. The addition of an acoustical sound shell for our stage helped the choir project to the audience in the gym. Being a member of choir meant not only personal satisfaction but also an opportunity to use one's talents to praise God.

A harmonious blend of voices calls for concentrated participation on the part of director and students alike.

Scholastic Achievement Finds Rewards

Becoming a member of the Honor Society was a goal for many of Timothy's students. To be a member, a student must maintain a "B" average; he may drop down to a "B-" for no more than one semester. For a senior to be in Honor Society is quite an accomplishment; these are the students with the highest scholastic averages of their class. Senior members are rewarded at graduation with the privilege of wearing a gold tassel and at the Awards Banquet are given a certificate of merit. Many members were also engaged in extracurricular activities; their leadership in various organizations shows they contributed much to a successful school year.

Lit Club Discusses Books and Films

At its organizational meeting in the beginning of the year, the Lit Club members and their sponsors, Mr. Harkema and Miss Miedema, formulated their purpose: "To conduct serious discussion on literature, cinema, or drama within a Christian framework." To the students involved in Lit Club the meetings meant sitting around in somebody's den, listening and commenting on some aspect of a book such as John Knowles' A Separate Peace. The books chosen for discussion this year were recommended in Books and the Teenage Reader, by G. Robert Carlsen from his selection of "Significant Modern Literature." However, as stated in its purpose, Lit Club did not limit itself to books. For their field trip they saw "Romeo and Juliet" and stopped for a tour of the Art Institute; they later viewed "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter."

DEBATE CLUB

The Debate Club was newly formed this year. The members faced debates from the other P.S.L. schools with strength, their main topic for debate being "The Selective Service." FUTURE NURSES CLUB

There were many interested girls in the Future Nurses Club, but it was not as active as in past years. Many of these girls made up for it though, by doing volunteer work in nursing homes and hospitals. Through this experience they will be better able to decide whether they would like to make nursing their career.

Field Trips Enhance Camera Club

Camera Club met once a month under the direction of Mr. Alsum and Mr. Mepyans. Field trips to Brookfield Zoo, the Loop, and Swift and Company were the most important ways in which the students were able to use photographic techniques which they had learned in the club. Contests were also held in which first, second and third prizes were awarded to the individual members who took the best pictures. Members gained valuable experience since they were allowed to work in the darkroom, learning how to develop their own pictures.

Pep Club Pushes Red and White

Working hard to promote school spirit, the Pep Club spent many hours after school making posters and signs which were hung in the halls to inform us of each weekend's action and preparing the "T" through which the players made their entrance at each home game. They also made a huge scroll on which our school song was written so everyone could sing. The club raised money by selling rah-rahs, derbies, and pennants in our school colors. During the I.H.S.A. tournament, they sponsored "derby nights" at which everyone wore their hats, and the stands became a mass of red heads. Through Pep Club's promotion the student body united to form a tremendous cheering section and urge our team to victory.

Miss Kingma observes some Pep Club members as they make posters announcing upcoming games.

Pom-Pom Girls Enliven Half Times

Half time entertainment at all Timothy's home games was provided by the fourteen Pom-Pom girls, as they performed original routines to popular instrumental music. They practiced under Miss Tamelings' guidance during lunch hours and after school, trying to think of new and different ideas and to coordinate their movements perfectly. They also participated along with the cheerleaders while the pep band played the school song, making a tremendous sight of red and white. Even though the girls would occasionally fall out of step, their entertainment sparked our school spirit.

While the crowd watches, the pom-pom girls swing into a circle formation.

Pep Band Ignites Spirit

One of the organizations that contributed toward promoting school spirit this year was the pep band. Under the direction of Mr. Landman and student director, Tom Voss, it played between games and during halftime at the home basketball games. The repertoire included "The Star Spangled Banner," the school song and band cheers besides popular songs for the listeners' entertainment. The pep band also played at most of the pep rallies and at the spontaneous victory celebration after the basketball team won the regional championship. The band met regularly twice a week to practice for their performances. In this time the band worked out some new numbers in addition to the old standbys of years past.

Class Competition Sparks Up G.A.A.

By promoting sports events and parties the Girls Athletic Association was successful in including most of the girls in their program. G.A.A., sponsored by Miss Tameling, held intramurals every Wednesday afternoon. These were based on class competition in sports such as field hockey, volleyball, basketball and tennis, giving the girls an opportunity to develop their physical talents and use them in a competitive sport. At their Halloween costume party, the girls had fun square dancing, bobbing for apples and singing. They also sponsored a girl-ask-boy hayride. At the end of the year picnic, the all sports trophy was awarded to the class that had done best in intramurals.

Lettermen Profit From Initiative

Refreshments at half time helps satiate the crowd's hunger.

At the beginning of the school year, the Lettermen's Club was threatened with non-existence because of the lack of a sponsor. But Mr. Veenstra agreed to take over and they continued to be an active organization. Selling refreshments at home basketball games was one of the main activities of the club. However, they also sponsored a senior-faculty basketball game and a donkey basketball game. This proved to be entertaining not only because the players were on donkeys, but also because the players were school board and faculty members. Lettermen's continued to be the club with the most money even after completing the payments on the whirlpool. They continued to save their money for the future purchase of athletic equipment.

"Get tough. . .be aggressive. . .get low. . .fake. . .move. . .stay with your man." If someone were watching any of the early varsity practices, these were a few of the things he would have heard. He could also feel an air of uncertainty because the team had reached a critical stage; everyone could remember the fine record of the previous year and it was a hope that this year's team could do as well. From the start the team held back until jolted by two defeats in the league and one in the Walther Tournament. After this there was not a team in the league that could hold them down. The team was well balanced and when one player was off on his shot, other players could be depended on to bring the team to victory. Coordinated by Coach Greenfield, Timothy floored one of the best offensive and defensive teams the league has seen. In spite of their two early losses, the varsity earned a first place tie with Luther North and Chicago Christian by completely dominating the second round of play.

Tourneys Sparkl

Trojan basketball games usually draw a lot of fans but nothing attracts them like tournaments, and nothing makes them as excited, or as angry, or as happy. Since Timothy joined the I.H.S.A., the P.S.L. tourney has been held at the start of the season; it was an exciting start for Timothy, as the Trojans took first place over Luther North in overtime. The Walther Tournament was a disappointment to the team and the fans. The Trojans lost by one point in the semi-finals to Elmwood Park but were to avenge this loss in the District, when top-seeded Timothy took the title. Then, full of hope, it was on to the regional, ready to face any team — even top seeded St. Pat. For the first time the Trojans became regional champs and proved to any skeptic that T.C. had some of the finest players around. The sectional can be looked back upon with all sorts of emotions, but most of all with pride. T.C. was never so proud of its team as on the night they played Lyons Township — and lost.

Frosh-Soph Team Makes Good Effort

Coach Milkamp and his team managed to nail down only seventh place this year, going 2-12 in league play. The big men on this year's frosh-soph squad found that they had to work against men six inches taller than themselves. In spite of the rebounding disadvantage and trouble in perfecting their shots, they worked hard to get the most out of their basketball ability and had some close games. The team also worked very hard on defense, causing turn overs which made other teams look bad. Although there was often discouragement on the players' faces after a frustrated effort on offense, they tried all the more on defense in order to keep the games within reach.

The frosh-sophs show spirit by fighting for every jump ball.

Cheerleaders Give

Last fall a board of teachers chose twelve talented girls to lead the crowd in cheers at our basketball games. The frosh-soph squad, led by captain Patty Lou Van Dyke, did a good job of promoting school spirit at their games. The veteran varsity squad, with the help of their captain Ruth Boersema and mascot Debbie Slager, led the fans in supporting the varsity basketball team. With the aid of these girls, the crowd did much in urging the team to success. All the girls put in many hours of practice to do their best at the games. For the varsity squad this included a cheerleading clinic at Normal, Illinois. In addition to cheering at the games the cheerleaders led the students in pep rallies before the major games in order to give the team a boost and urge the students to turn out for the games.

Freshmen Take First Place in League

The freshman basketball team and their coach Mr. Mephyans, accompanied by their band of loyal fans, did us proud this season with a league record of 10-2, taking first place in the P.S.L. and third place in the C.C.H.S. tournament. The team had the handicap of a lack of height, but this fact didn't keep them down. Through hard work and fine coaching, and because each player held the team together in his own position, the freshman team left an impressive mark in T.C.'s record book.

Cross Country Team Gains Experience

From last place four years ago the Cross Country team has steadily improved. The men considered it unbelievable to run 20 separate 220 yard dashes and probably would have laughed at the thought without the motivating influence of Coach Greenfield; he worked and pushed the team to its 4-3 record. But this year the team still suffered from the "psche-out." In the IHSA District meet the team could compare itself with larger schools. With 150 boys to compete against, competition was always there two inches in front of each boy. Randy Veltkamp finished tenth and received a district medal. The whole team was made up of men working on winning, and the work showed itself in the form of a third place trophy in the P.S.L. finals.

Track Combines Varied Talents

From the very start of the season everyone on the track team had as a goal being first. Even when they found out how out of shape they were, they never lost the winning drive. A balanced training program gave the team the strength they needed to reach their goals in both track events and field events. Many and varied talents are needed for a team victory. Sprint speed is needed, strength in the shot put is needed, coordination for the pole vault, timing in the hurdles and endurance in the distance running. This year the team had these talents and combined them for a successful season. The completion of the track gave the team added incentive to do their best.

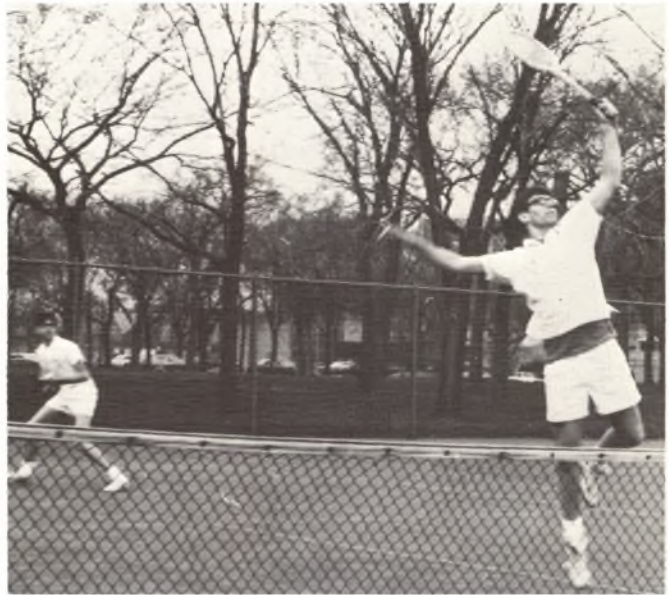

After trying the high jump, Bob Keizer decided to return to his favorite competition, the shot put.

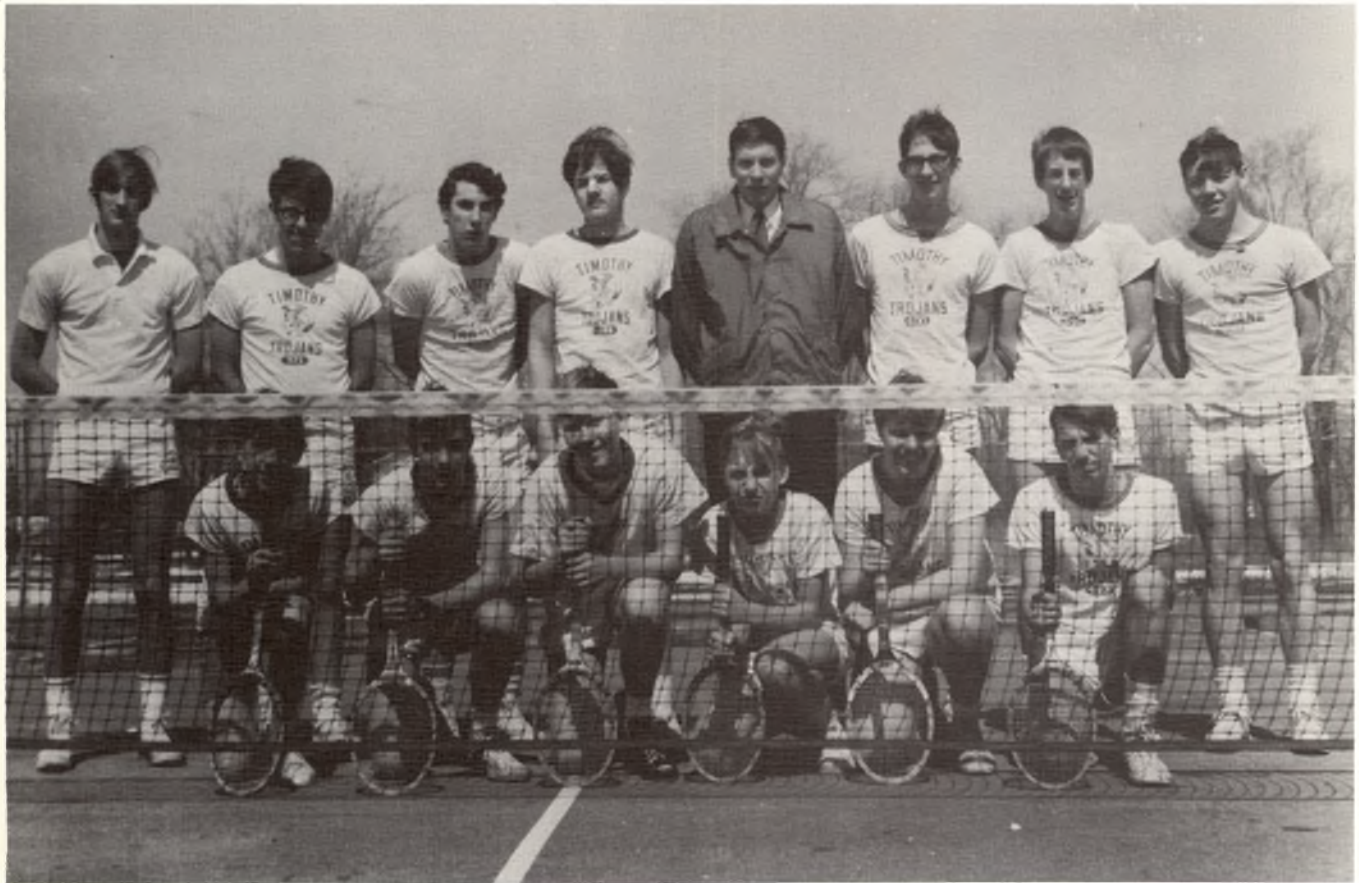

Expanded Tennis Team Faces Opponents

Coach Mepyans this spring trained one of the most successful tennis teams in our history. The expanded team, patterned after other I.H.S.A. teams, was composed of three doubles and two singles whereas last year's had two doubles and three singles. This, plus the loss of only one senior from last year, gave the team a slight edge. Coupled with these advantages were two others. The team had more confidence because they were not the underdogs, and also, the freshman class brought depth and strong intrasquad competition, giving the team better preparation for the matches. For the tennis team, the long building process started to pay off.

Golf Tees Off with Young Team

Last year Timothy's golf team had the best season in its history, finishing fourth place overall in the Private School League. This year they hoped to top that record or at least to do as well, but they had a problem attaining this goal since two-thirds of the team were underclassmen and didn't have as much team experience as last year's. During practices, Mr. Milkamp helped the team members work on individual skills. The home golf matches were held at White Pines Country Club in Bensonville. All together there were seven league matches against different schools, and the highlight of the year was the P.S.L. tournament which ended the golf season.

Experienced Baseball Team Returns

Gary Klein works at batting practice to get ready for that first game.

Spring baseball practices started late this year because of our long basketball season, but Coach Slager got the team ready for the first game in less than two weeks. The first practices had the players relearning the basics but after that it wasn't long before they started playing as a working unit. This year's team was basically the same as last year's with almost all of the lettermen returning. Although they had a lot of experience, they had a problem with pitching; several boys tried their arms, each hoping to develop into an effective pitcher. But even with an unsteady start, experience and a strong desire to repeat last year's performance as P.S.L. Champs gave them reason to have an optimistic outlook for the season.

Team Rivalry in Intramurals Make

Bob Keizer hits the ball over the net into the waiting fingertips of his opponents.

Sponsored by G.A.A., girls intramurals met every Wednesday under the supervision of Miss Tamelng. Some of the sports which the girls included in their program were soccer, volleyball, basketball, baseball and tennis. Since the sports were based on class competition, a lot depended on whether there were girls enthusiastic enough to come out and support their class. At the end of the year, an All-Sports Trophy of the Year was awarded to the class which excelled in the most sports. There is no inter-scholastic sports competition for girls, so the majority of girls made the most of the opportunity by participating in intramurals.

Around Christmas time, G.A.A. and the boys' intramural program sponsored a coed-volleyball tourney. Each captain was required to have at least four girls on his team. Practically the whole school came out to be in this; even a faculty team was organized. Every team played at least twice and finally Bob Keizer's team emerged victorious.

The boys' intramural program, led by Mr. Hoving, met every Friday. The sports that they played were football, volleyball, basketball, badminton and tennis. Each of the teams was made up of boys from all four classes. Boys' intramurals were well participated in. There was a rivalry between teams that almost equaled the rivalry between interscholastic sports.

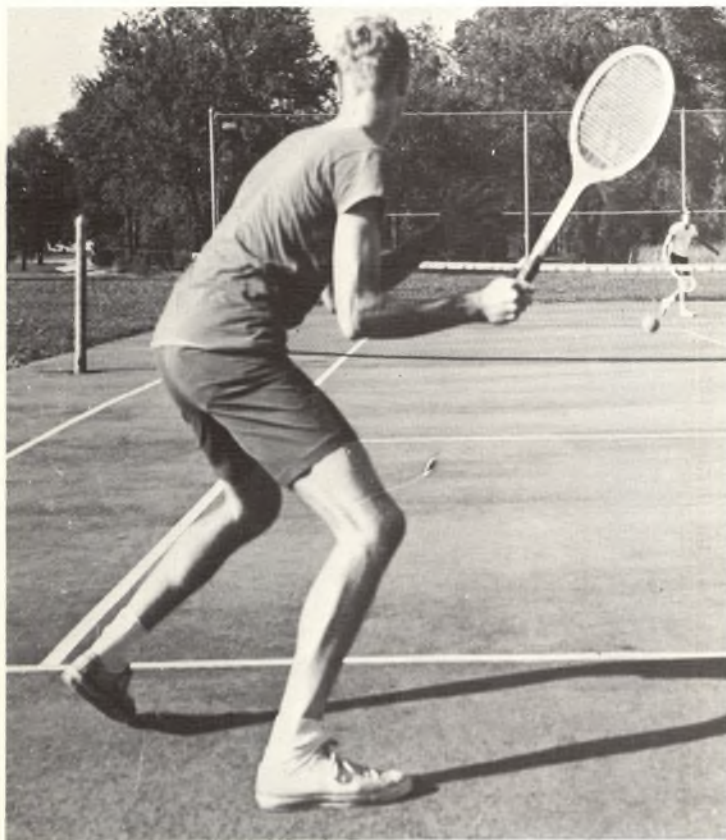

Setting for a play, the boys prepare to gain a first down.

"Bumping" the volleyball, Joyce Folkerts makes a vain effort to keep the freshman team from losing another game.

Student Life

we added color to our picture. By doing different things we began to apply and blend our colors to find new and exciting ones.*

Mr. Harkema points out that we must think the music as well as play and sing it.

Chapel Reflects Spiritual Life

Chapel. One student might associate this word with "Monday-Wednesday-Friday" or a bore or routine. But another student, the student that gave his spiritual life a chance to grow this year, perhaps discovered a new truth and found a few answers. The mood that chapel tried to create was a quiet one, a time to be attentive and reflective. One thing that the Chapel Committee wanted was student participation. Through performing special music, leading the singing, or presenting a thought or meditation, T. C. students became involved. The style of a chapel depended on those who were leading. It ranged from a lecture to something like the morning of the great unsing, but the purpose of chapel remained the same.

Mr. Landman tries to get a loud response as he leads the singing.

During the "Unsing" in chapel, Venessa Bryant sings two verses of a hymn.

During a Fine Arts recital, Elaine Jelinek and Debbie Mulder play a flute duet and get experience for the festival.

F A F Uncovers Creativity

A group of eight students met every Wednesday afternoon throughout the year in order to discuss plans for the annual Fine Arts Festival. The committee sponsored recitals which gave students an opportunity for expression in creative and interpretive arts and for performing in front of an audience. The Fine Arts Festival was held for a week instead of just one day. The week consisted of competition and critical sessions, Monday through Thursday; these were intended to give students a chance to meet and talk with the judge and get an evaluation of their work. On Friday, the whole day was devoted to Fine Arts through an art demonstration, experimental films, a play and lectures. That evening, after the first place winners performed, Christian author Rudy Wiebe lectured and the Wheaton Men's Glee Club gave a concert of sacred and secular music. Because of the active committee, students were greatly encouraged to appreciate and express themselves through the arts.

Victory and New Queen Greet Alumni

Spectators who filled Timothy's gym on January 11, had gathered to witness two important events - the crowning of the queen and the Trojan battle against the Illiana Vikings. The game was exciting, giving fans for both causes surges of ecstasy and disappointment. Then at half-time, the gym was darkened and Student Council President Bob Huiner introduced the court. Finally, reigning Queen Joyce DeVries gave up her crown to the 1969 Queen, Gail Schuil. After an indistinguishable but entirely understandable acceptance speech, the whole court was escorted to their seats on the stage. The second half of the game provided agonizing tension for spectators, kept the court straining to remain dignified and wound up in a tie. Happily, in tribute to Homecoming night, the Trojan team won the overtime victory 78 to 77. Each class had worked hard in preparation for this once-a-year occurrence, transforming the school into a place worthy of a queen, her court, and the visiting alumni. Following the game, alumni and students of T.C. joined for refreshments as they congratulated the court, discussed the night's activities, and talked over old times.

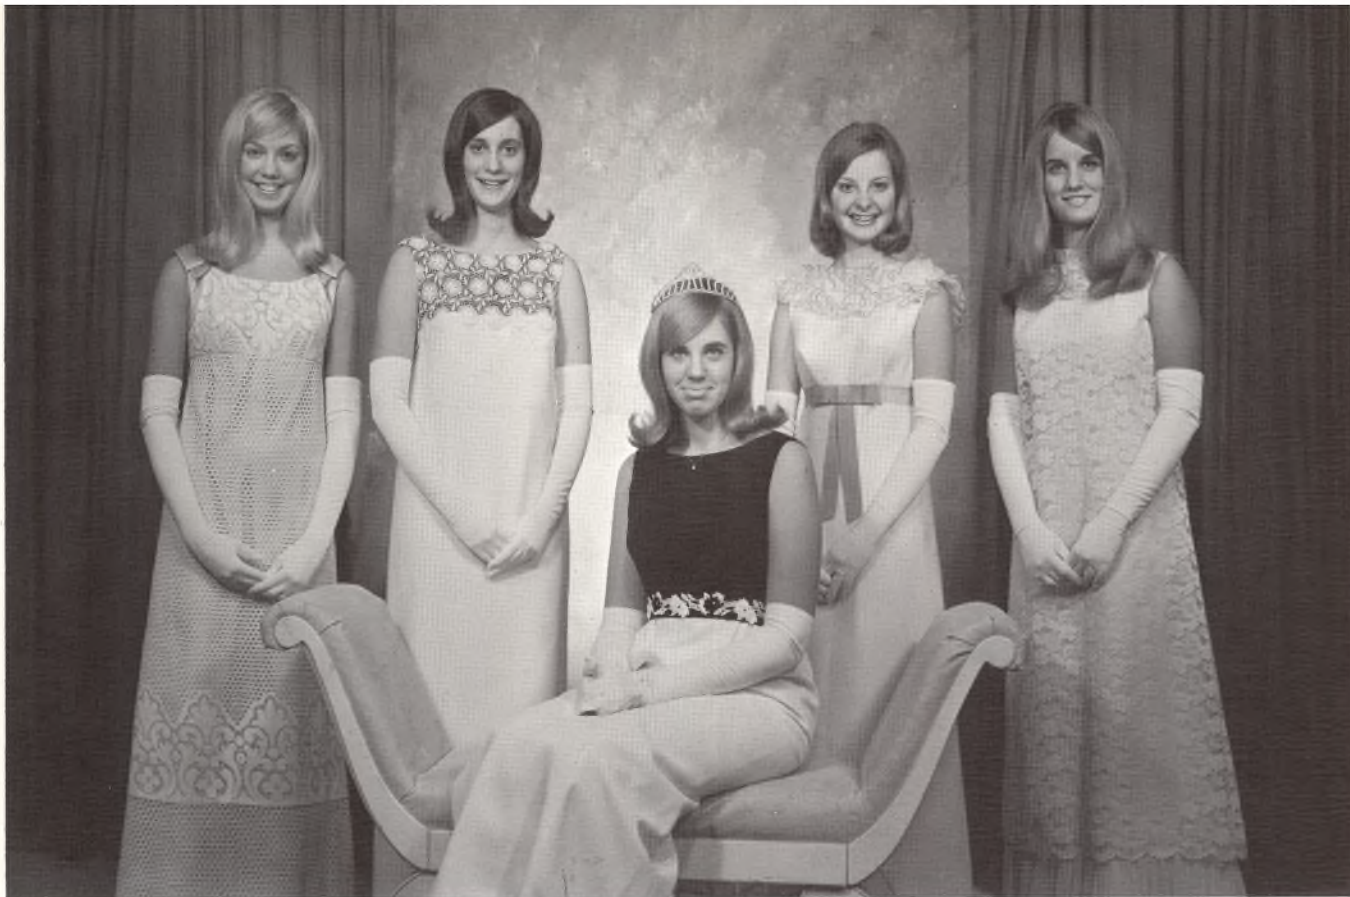

The court stands anxiously in the hall awaiting the homecoming ceremonies.

Huckleberry Finn

"Huck Finn" was presented with a style Tom Sawyer would have been proud of on the evenings of October 24 and 25, as the seniors brought Mark Twain's classic to their audience. The play was a change from the more serious plays that have been performed in the past few years, being openly humorous, and employing the device of light slapstick. The play takes episodes from the novel, including Huck and Tom's elaborate plan of freeing the freed slave, Jim. The audience found the acting experienced. The actors had perfected their wails of grief and shock in rehearsal and made these scenes the most enjoyable of the play.

The news of a box office smash was brought back to the cast on Friday night and made an already tense backstage frantic. With a director three times as nervous as the cast, a props manager and student director giving final O.K.'s, and moral support from Huck's entire family backstage, the cast gave an excellent performance.

"For the past two years we have lived in fear. Now we can live in hope."

Mr. Schuurman watches for wrong moves and his assistant, Lucy Kooyenga, is ready to prompt forgotten lines.

Preparing for a matinee performance for the eighth graders, the juniors try to accustom themselves to full costume at dress rehearsal.

Junior Drama

Diary of Anne Frank

"The Diary of Anne Frank," was presented by the junior class this spring. This dramatic play is the story of two Jewish families hiding from the Nazis during World War II and the romance that developed as a result of this situation. The play had a cast of ten talented juniors and although the cast deserved much credit, the success of the play was due in a large part to the director, Mr. Schuurman, the student director and the various committees. In order to make the play more realistic, the committees had to put in a lot of time and hard work. The costume committee had to search far and wide to find dresses, hats and suits from the 40's era. The sets and props committee went to work and built a great two-story setting. Sound effects and lighting did much to create the right atmosphere. The combined efforts of all the people involved resulted in a very outstanding production and a feeling of satisfaction for the cast.

"Peter, did you ever kiss a girl?"

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself." "All right. All right. I'm a dunce. I'm a hopeless case."

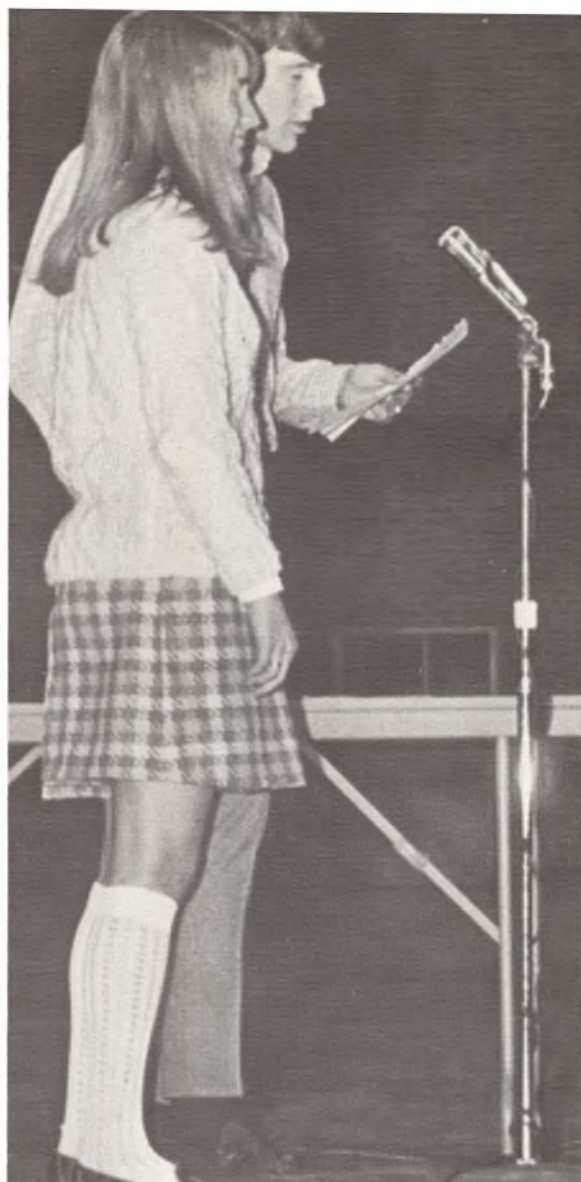

Students Assemble to Let Go an

*Special activities presented throughout the year let the students really enjoy themselves. They afforded an opportunity to gasp at karate experts. . .
welcome home their regional champs. . .
sing with Mr. King. . .
listen to recitals. . .
judge the homecoming queen candidates. . .
scream at pep rallies. . .
and laugh at teachers.*

Have Fun

Students Fill Days with Action

Free time activities show how students spend a part of their day. They relax with the newspaper. . .

wear themselves out running. . .

enjoy pizza and Pepsi for lunch. . .

grab a snack in room 68. . .

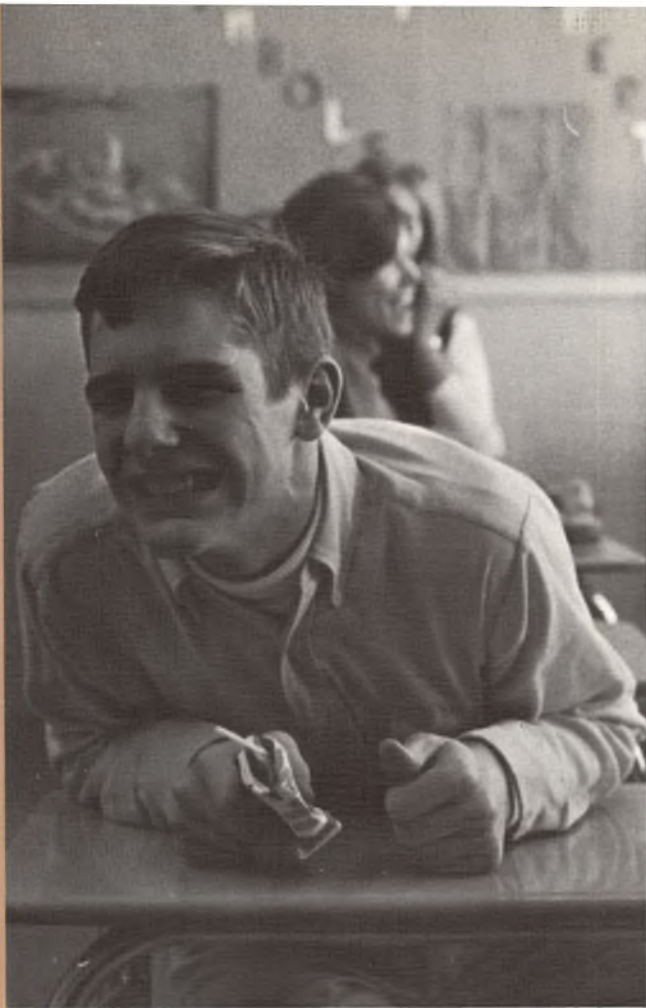

rehearse for that world premiere. . .

or quench a thirst between classes.

Students

*There is a unifying idea which holds our painting together.
Each student is an individual, but together they present one picture.
As the year progressed, the different forms began to fit together—they were no longer fragments but a completed composition.*

Freshmen

Unabashed by their lowly position, the freshmen took spirited part in school activities.

The number of freshmen made it seem like they were invading the school.

*Humiliating as it was,
the tasks they were put through at the All-School Party*

only served to bring out their gregarious natures.

Sophomores

*Being sophomores is one step higher

Freshman Year Sees the Completion of Gym

As freshmen we tumbled into a completely new environment. And part of being a freshman meant spending the first few days carrying around class schedules and looking for room numbers, chasing teachers down the hall for library passes, being humbled by proud seniors, and taking exams.

There were inspiring pep rallies despite our dark and cold, half-finished gym.

And there was even a band trip to Purdue to see the world's largest drum.

The traditional breaktime finds Fred Iwema and Bob Huiner grabbing a snack from their lockers.

Blizzard Gives Us Break after Sophomore Exams

We entered our sophomore year with assurance, maybe too much, and we fell into the pattern of being "wise fools." We did have our little trials struggling through transformational grammar and trying to master geometry. By taking achievement tests we learned where we stood in relation to other sophomores throughout the nation.

We were encouraged to prepare for the future by attending seminars on Career Day.

Winter was accentuated by the few extra days off provided by the Blizzard of '67.

I H S A Tourneys Highlight Junior Year

Responding to our added responsibility as juniors, we sponsored a car wash, several barbeques, and a play, "The Barretts of Whimpole Street." However we were a little frivolous in the spending of our money. The elaborate Polynesian Island we presented at the junior-senior banquet presented us with a sizeable class debt. The climax of the year had to be the I H S A basketball tournament. The close victory over St. Mel left everyone in hysterics. And the tense York game left us with lots of pride for our team.

Members of our class, acting as marshals, precede the Class of '68 in their graduation recessional.

"Huck Finn" Gets Seniors Out of Debt

At last-seniors! At last we had the enjoyment of seeing the freshman "pot" before us.

Our able-bodied boys got to whip the sagging teachers in basketball.

We had a standing-room-only crowd at our production of "Huck Finn."

Senior year was the zenith of our high school career.

We experienced the things only the elite seniors can experience - a class trip, the junior-senior banquet, ditch day, and graduation.

Graduation - Friday, the Thirteenth of June!

And as our senior year came to an end,

we were forced to face the future and to answer questions about it.

Being together as a class for four years, making friends, and accomplishing things together, had made us unified.

Now we were forced to think of what we were going to do as individuals.

Graduation left us elated but sad, and left us with a challenge.

Senior girls have a feast on hot dogs and Pepsi at the all-school party.

Doing Together Results in Unity

*Our picture was not presented by the senior class alone or by a small group of students. Although it was the seniors' responsibility to act as leaders and guide the rest of the student body, our completed picture is the result of the faculty and student body doing things as a whole — working, talking, planning, studying and having fun.
Together we were learning to be artists, with God as the master planner.*

Quality Marks Outstanding Seniors

John Zeilstra

*Because he consistently gave evidence of his Christian character, attained a high scholastic standing, proved himself a diligent worker in Student Council—especially on the chapel committee, was a faithful member of the band,
wrote conscientiously for the SAGA, was enthusiastic in sports — as a participant in cross country and track, and as a supporter in the pep band, the faculty committee chose John as Outstanding Boy of 1969.*

Virginia Veldman

*Because she reflected her Christianity through her exuberant outlook on life, maintained a high scholastic record, was an enthusiastic supporter of all school activities, showed leadership as editor of the TRUMPET, was faithful in her participation in band and choir,
was a loyal supporter of athletics—
as pom pom captain and in G.A.A., the faculty committee chose Ginny as Outstanding Girl of 1969.*

Our picture is now complete. However, this painting did not take just one year to finish. It is the final unveiling of four years of effort.

It evolved through the maturing of the students, guidance from the faculty, and blessing from God. This picture, which we painted together, prepared each of us for our own individual pictures which we must create.

Advertisements

In order to exhibit our picture we needed a frame.

Thanks to our advertisers and patrons,

we were provided with the necessary materials.

*We are through with grease pencils, crop sticks and layout sheets.
We have created SAGA 1969. We have completed a yearbook—
a picture—and we are putting our materials away.
These pages are significant not only to the yearbook staff, but to the entire student body and faculty—we all contributed our part and this has helped to unite us.*

The staff sincerely thanks Miss Bean and Mr. Alsum, our patient and ever-present advisors, Don Kowalski of Edmund Photography, and Mr. Mitchell of the Walsworth Publishing Company who kept us smiling, for their help in presenting this painting.
