

”Attending The New School pretty much my entire life has granted me a sense of preparation for college that not many people would expect. The small yet diverse class sizes have granted me with the ability to be friends with people I would normally never talk to. In recent years, I have become close with students ranging the entire high school, and that has made me more comfortable in my ability to make friends outside of my comfort zone. The New School has also prepared me for the academic rigor in college, and I feel confident in my ability to excel in whatever environment I end up in.”
