

Cal Q. Leight

At his college reunion, the coach met a classmate he hadn't seen for years. "How goes it, Waldo," he asked.

"Not good at all," sighed Waldo. "My wife ran away with the mailman, my son is a juvenile delinquent, my bank failed and my house burned down.

"I'm sorry to hear that," said the coach. "What business are you in now?" "Same old line," Waldo answered, "Selling good luck charms."

MY GOOD luck charm is all polished up for another season of creating sensations with my forecasts. All set?
