

The West Virginia Department of Education, in partnership with Marshall University's June Harless Center, is happy to administer Dolly Parton's Imagination Library in counties throughout the state of West Virginia. Children ages birth to five who live in a participating county will receive great books at the child's age level, sent to their home, FREE OF CHARGE.

The Goals of the Imagination Library are to:

- provide one free book per month for a child to keep;
- encourage reading in the home; and
- promote reading for children starting at birth.

Parents in participating counties can sign up to join at the county library or online by selecting their county on the home page. This program is TOTALLY FREE. High-quality books will be delivered to registered children each month until their fifth birthday. Parents may sign their child up at any age as long as they are under five years old. For more details, and to see if you live in a participating county, please visit our website, or give us a call:
