What is a refurbished computer?

Refurbished computers are business computers that were bought new and used for a couple of years by large corporations. Business computers are higher quality than consumer computers you can buy in a retail store. With better components, they provide better performance and reliability. Their rugged construction enables them to withstand multiple users and extended daily use.

A Microsoft Registered Refurbisher has erased all data, sanitized and loaded each machine with new Microsoft software and put it through rigorous testing. Every computer comes with a replacement warranty. If we determine there is a hardware failure or a computer broke in shipping, we will replace it at no cost including paying for shipping (both to ship back the broken computer and ship replacement).

The iFoster refurbished computers are Class A refurbished computers. This means they should look no more than slightly used and work perfectly. Each computer has been tested and checked thoroughly (your computer's individual Technical Quality Control sign-off sheet is included with your computer). These computers are the same ones the iFoster Team uses daily to update and revamp our website, write emails and newsletters, create our programs and take on the road to meetings and conferences.
