2. Organize

Mr. Hennessey called for nominations for the position of Committee Chair. It was clarified that community Committee Members have equal voting privileges, but cannot be elected to the position of Committee Chair.

Mrs. Leclerc nominated Mr. Malone for the position of Committee Chair. Mr. Malone seconded the motion. On a vote of 2 to 3, the motion failed. Mrs. Leclerc and Mr. Malone voted for the motion. Mrs. Battah, Ms. Parker, and Mrs. Pregent voted against the motion.

On a motion by Mrs. Battah, seconded by Ms. Parker, the Committee voted 3 to 1 to elect Mrs. Pregent as Chair of the Curriculum Committee. Mrs. Battah, Ms. Parker, and Mrs. Pregent voted for the motion. Mrs. Leclerc voted against the motion. Mr. Malone abstained.

Mrs. Pregent facilitated the remainder of the meeting.

On a motion by Mrs. Battah, seconded by Mrs. Leclerc, the Committee unanimously voted to elect Mr. Malone as Vice-chair of the Curriculum Committee.

3. Additions and/or Deletions to the Agenda

In response to a query regarding a previous discussion related to 'blind surveys', it was noted that a staff-wide survey falls under the purview of the Board.

Mr. Howard queried regarding an update on Student Performance data.

DRAFT

Mr. Toborg requested that members of the public have on-line access to information regarding curriculum, including the syllabi and information regarding what books and instructional materials are being used (for all grades). Mr. Hennessey advised that he believes this request would be best addressed at the building level.

5. Approval of Minutes -

5.1 August 4, 2022 Curriculum Committee Meeting Minutes

On a motion by Mrs. Leclerc, seconded by Ms. Parker, the Committee unanimously voted to approve as amended, the minutes of the August 4, 2022 BUUSD Curriculum Committee Meeting.

6. New Business

6.1 Great Schools Partnership, Extensive Summary of Support FY23 (Consultant Jean Haeger)

A document titled 'BUUSD Great Schools Partnership Support 2022 – 23' was distributed.

Ms. Haeger provided an overview of the document, advising of the three areas of development slated for the 2022-2023 academic year, including Goals, Curriculum Development (and cohesion), Administrative and Instructional Leadership, and Supporting Structures for Professional Learning Facilitation. Ms. Haeger proceeded to provide more detailed information on the three defined areas of work and advised of some of the feedback provided by participants in previous work groups/professional development sessions. Ms. Haeger read some of the end-of-year survey responses and advised of participation data from various surveys.

Ms. Haeger and Ms. Fredericks answered questions from the Committee, including queries relating to ongoing supports for staff, the number of facilitators, expansion of the program to the high school, and alignment with the Strategic Plan.

6.2 Feedback from Facilitator Training

A document titled 'BUUSD Facilitator Training August 16, 2022 – Feedback Survey Responses' was distributed.

Ms. Fredericks provided an overview of the data received from the most recent training, noting that there was a 100% response rate (13 responses), and that participants reported that training was a good experience and felt it was time well spent. Ms. Fredericks provided information relating to the definition of 'equity' to meet the needs of all students and assure that all students meet proficiency. It was noted that Curriculum Leaders meet twice a month, PLG Facilitators once a month and all meetings close with some form of feedback gathering.

6.3 New Math Program

Ms. Fredericks advised regarding a link to 'Illustrative Mathematics', and advised that this Program will replace the Engaged New York Math and Connected Math Programs (for K – 8). Middle and Elementary staff are 'on-board' with implementation of the new program. This program does have a high school component which can be explored at a later time. The program is more teacher-friendly and is more interactive for students. Ms. Fredericks advised that there are 'entry points' for all students (low floor / high ceiling – engagement for students of all abilities). The program offers consistent formative assessments (exit questions) as well as unit assessments. The Program also includes 'parent and family extensions' to help parents assist their students. ESSER funds were used to purchase this program. Ms. Fredericks answered questions from Committee Members, advising that 'parent nights' will be reintroduced this year, the program is highly rated, teachers have had training on this program, and that additional training opportunities will be available throughout the year. Ms. Fredericks advised regarding how the Program was selected. In response to a query, Ms. Fredericks advised that she will be in contact with the high school Math Department Head for confirmation that this program will be adequate to prepare students for their move to the high school.

6.4 Commencement Speech From District Kick-off

Ms. Fredericks read the Commencement Speech from the District Kick-off meeting, which was held in the SHS Auditorium to approximately 600 employees. A copy of the speech will be submitted to Mrs. Gilbert for posting as an addendum.

THREE REASONS TRACKING KIDS IS WRONG (AND HOW TO Start Making a Change)

Worksheets & Printables

Tools & Templates

As I sent my kids off to school the other day, I noticed that my daughter was hanging back. "What's wrong?" I asked.

"Today we have a big test," she said, "and if I don't do a good job, I'll be in the low class next year."

It took a moment for me to respond to her anxiety, and I tried to be reassuring. However, deep down, I knew I was placating my daughter and that anything I said would be less powerful than what she learned from friends and teachers. Over the past several years, I've struggled as a parent when my own children have experiences in school that I question as an educator. In this case, I do not know where my children get the terminology of "low, middle, high" when they refer to the courses in which they are placed each year. Whether these words come from fellow students or from teachers, they reinforce all kinds of ideas that are both inaccurate and potentially damaging to a child's academic identity. Furthermore, when we track students into different groups based upon perceived ability, we are reinforcing a set of beliefs that is destructive to children. Below are three important reasons that we should, once and for all, walk away from tracking, as well as some questions to ask ourselves as we walk away from this outdated practice.

Tracking Holds Kids Back

Do we think that hanging out with people who are theoretically just like us is a desirable social model? And if the answer is no, is it a desirable academic model? Quite often, students are placed into classes with students who are considered to be of like ability, usually based on assessment data. That practice is flawed for so many reasons, not the least of which is an overreliance on testing results which are not always accurate. Beyond that, if we combine groups that are perceived as the same, not only do we unfairly stereotype scores of students both academically and socially; we also miss a huge opportunity to elevate students by maximizing their collective differences. I do not learn nearly as much from those who have the same skills or perspective that I have; instead, I tend to have more meaningful growth when I interact with people who challenge my own way of thinking. Students need that same benefit.

Think about how much progress they will be able to achieve when we reinforce the important reality that we make one another stronger because of our differences, and not in spite of them.

Tracking Supports Fixed Mindset

As we know, moving from a set point can be a difficult accomplishment. While schools sometimes argue that tracked placements are not permanent, students often lack the adult advocates to help them change their situation. Coupling that with a gradual decline in self-belief, students tend to remain in the same tracked groups from the early grades all the way through high school. We spent a lot of time telling students that they can change, that intelligence is not a fixed point, that we believe in their ability to constantly grow. Why, then, does it make sense to place them into a leveled learning environment that sends the opposite message, either implicitly or otherwise? If we really believe in a growth mindset, we cannot support tracking both ideologically and practically. It does not make sense to place students into a situation that labels their academic identity and expect that they will remain there without any consequence to their sense of self. Instead of just talking about having a growth mindset, our actions should support what we say we value.

Tracking Promotes Inequity

A couple of years ago, I had the privilege of teaching a brilliant writer. He came into my class as a happy accident; one day, I was grading student test papers with a group of colleagues and I came across his. At the time, he was enrolled in so-called “regular” English, but his writing was absolutely masterful. When I asked him why he was not in a more advanced English class, he said, “I’ve just been put in regular English since the third grade. I wanted to switch out, but they told me I’m in the right place.” I didn’t know who exactly “they” were, but I did have a feeling that “their” decision was influenced by my student’s racial background since there was no other way to explain why this excellent student was being held back. In schools all over the country, demographic data shows that students of color are overwhelmingly enrolled in remedial or lower-level courses while their white peers are placed into honors or AP classes. This pattern is not accidental, nor is it a passing trend. Students are placed into classes at a young age and the rationale behind these placements is often the result of either implicit bias or explicit racism. Unless we stop making decisions about what students can do based upon personal perception when they are still at their most formative stage, nobody will check the inexcusable results that happen time and time again. The only way to stop this de facto segregation is to engage in a vital antiracist practice and stop tracking.

What considerations go into making the change away from tracking? To begin the process of positive change, here are some questions to pose:

- What need does tracking serve? How can we meet that need in heterogeneous groupings?
- Are classes tracked because of perceived ability or perceived motivation? If the former, what data measures do we use to make these decisions? If the latter, why is academic ability aligned with behavior?

- If we begin to experiment with heterogeneous groupings, what might be a good grade level or department to begin with?
- How can we explore our beliefs about tracking as a school, confront ideas that do not serve students, and have productive conversations about moving forward?
- What kind of professional development or support might teachers need who make this transition?
- What are our biggest concerns about making this transition? How can we address these concerns productively without moving backward?

While the questions above are just a start, they provide some reflective opportunities as well as a call to action for change. Over the past year, we've been given a huge opportunity to reexamine so many of our educational structures, to challenge their effectiveness, and to put a stop to the status quo. As we think about scheduling students for next year and helping them recover from so much learning disruption over the course of this pandemic, the last thing on our minds should be finding ways to further limit opportunity and access. Tracking has not, nor should it ever be, a legitimate way to provide students with a strong sense of academic confidence. Instead, it has created a system of have and have-nots, and that is simply unacceptable. Looking forward, making a case to remove tracking with our school teams is a solid investment in our students and in what they can really do when we believe in them wholeheartedly.
