Is it True?

MYTH: Teens value the opinions of their peers, so parents cannot influence them.

REALITY: Families have a strong influence in their child's planning and decision-making for high school and beyond. Families can influence their child by setting high expectations and through encouragement and motivation.

For example, when families show that they believe their children are capable of high achievement, their children are more likely to set high goals, work hard, and persist in the face of challenges. When families place a strong value on learning and hard work, children are more likely to be successful.

The High School & Beyond Plan (HSBP) is a Washington State graduation requirement. In Highline Public Schools, the High School & Beyond Plan is a sequence of lessons and experiences delivered by dedicated, knowledgeable staff. The HSBP is a meaningful, individualized plan that is grounded in students' interests, strengths, and hopes for their future. Through deeper, structured conversations with caring adults and real world experiences, students stay engaged, on-track toward graduation, and are prepared for success after high school.

Things you can do as a parent/guardian:

Family Discussion Ideas

- Talk about goals and aspirations. What dreams do you have for your child? What do you see as their strengths?
- Create a career genogram together: Activity link. Some questions include:
 - What influence family members' career decisions?
 - Who influenced their career decisions?
 - What age did they decide on their career choice?
 - What type of education was needed for each family member's occupation?
 - What factors affected the educational attainment of each family member?

Family Checklist

- Learn more about the differences between middle school and elementary school. Identify who to contact at the school with questions or concerns about your student (this could be their advisor, school counselor, etc.)
- Provide challenge and support. Push your child to do his or her best but make sure you offer encouragement and help as needed.
- Attend the school family events
