Updates on construction from Valley View Local Schools

Issue Two - November, 2022

Footprint Complete

Excavation at the site of the new K-12 school, now clearly shows the outline of what will become the foundation footprint.

Fanning Howey Architects, the Conger Construction Crew, Superintendent Joe Scholler, and Valley View Director of Operations Erick DePew are at the site daily. The specific locations, depicting academic spaces, gymnasiums, and staff offices, are apparent from a high rise near the back of the property.

The driveway, ready for asphalt, winds its way toward the planned building past a retention pond which will only hold water during heavy rainstorms, explained DePew.

The driveway off Farmersville Pike will be the main entry for the public. Two other entrances will serve as a convenience, one from the former high school and another new entry off Manning Road.

A large culvert is under construction behind the current school where the entry from Manning cuts through what is now a practice field. It will bridge the driveway crossing an existing waterway in the field.

New practice fields will be maintained behind the newly-constructed facilities. The fields currently serving baseball and softball will remain undisturbed.

The new facility includes 217,373 square feet and Conger anticipates that the construction will be complete to welcome students in the fall of 2024.
