Second in the Class 3 State Championships

They started running again. A week after placing second in the Class 3 State Championships, these road warriors are back at it. Junior Sam Vaughn says, "It's all about the off-season." Senior Keith Vance says, "If you don't train in the offseason, you're not going to be good when it comes time to race." Vance and Vaughn rounded the 5k (3.1 miles) cross country course at Gans Creek in Columbia in 16:40 and 16:50, respectively. On their heels was sophomore Nate Wright at 16:59. All three were awarded medals for finishing in the top 25. The speedsters hoped for back-to-back Class 3 State Championships, but the top five runners from Fr. Tolton Catholic High School were a tick faster.

Head Coach Kyle Davis said, "How great of a program do we have if we're disappointed in taking second place?" Vaughn says, "I think there could have been little things done by everyone, pick up (pass) a person here and there." Vance says he still gets upset if he spends time thinking about the race. Yet his words are delivered flatly, without emotion. It's as if he's squirreling away an acorn of motivation for the cold winter months ahead. In his next breath, the senior talks about his new goals during the spring track season, like running the 800 in 1:55 and the mile under 4:20.

On the girls' team is his sister, senior Raven Vance. She was the 23rd fastest on race day as the Lady Blackcats finished eighth out of the 16 teams that qualified for the race. When asked why she started running cross country in middle school she replied, "(Coach) Jim Kasten told me to." That suggestion turned into a lifestyle. She won't be on a team next year in college, but she will always be a runner.

While the Vance siblings will be missed, plenty of talent will return next year. Most of the athletes pictured will consistently beat their personal best by 30 seconds or more next season. Their quest to return to the stage is underway. You can see it every day on the sidewalks and roads throughout the Dunklin R-5 School District.

Message From Board President

It is hard to believe that Thanksgiving has already come and gone. It was a great time for all of us to reflect and be grateful for all we have. The board hopes everyone had a safe and relaxing holiday filled with many blessings.

Time flies and one-third of the school year is over! The fall sports and activities at the high and middle schools have been so much fun to follow with all their successes and accomplishments. It has been enjoyable to watch the elementary school and all their exciting learning activities and the Leader In Me program. Following the early childhood students with their learning themes and events fills our hearts with smiles. We are so thankful for our teachers, coaches, activity sponsors, and staff that work countless hours to provide our students with so many wonderful opportunities at Dunklin R5 from pre-K through high school.

The board will be even more active than usual after the first of the year. We approved placing a 13.5 million dollar, No Tax Increase bond issue on the April 23, 2022, ballot at the November board meeting. There is a long list of needs and wants projects to make improvements at each educational building in the district. These projects will need to be prioritized with community input. Decisions are not board-only decisions but a partnership with our community. We will invite the community to meetings and discussions to help set those priorities after the holidays. Your help will be needed to serve on committees to help us inform patrons of the importance of these projects through creating written materials, signs, media information, and of course—getting everyone out to vote!

The board is looking forward to watching our students grow through all the opportunities offered to them during the winter season. We look forward to meeting with you and getting input at our brainstorming sessions. We are confident when the Dunklin R5 Community hears of all the impactful projects that are being proposed, the Blackcat Pride will shine with support for the bond issue.

We are wishing you and yours a safe and Merry Holiday season filled with good health and more happiness and memories than you can imagine.

With Blackcat Pride,
Susan Hartmann, President, and the Dunklin R5 Board

Blackcat Community

During this special time of the year, I wanted to take a moment to wish each of our Blackcat Families and friends a very Happy Holiday Season. My wish is for each of you to enjoy time with family and friends while making memories that last a lifetime.

Legacy Group is a new initiative for community members that are 55 years of age and older. We want to provide you with a lifetime pass to all Dunklin R-5 home events. These personalized passes can be requested by emailing cfreeman@dunklin.k12.mo.us or calling 636-479-5200 extension 7001. Please let me know if you participated in any sports or activities, as this will help us personalize your pass.

The Herculaneum High School Boys Cross Country Team took second place in the state class 3 cross country meet this year. Our Band, Choir, Cheerleaders, Dance, Softball Girls Cross Country, and Football team have also had a great start to the 2022-2023 school year. We are so proud of these students and their accomplishments during the Fall season.

During the November Board of Education meeting, the Dunklin R-5 Board of Education approved placing a $13.5 million No Tax Rate Increase bond issue called "Proposition S" on the April 2023 ballot. If Prop S is approved, your property tax rate will remain the same, but we'll be able to make several improvements to our schools. The possible projects include: Safe and Secure entrances at Pevely Elementary and Senn Thomas Middle School, a new High School competitive gym with a storm shelter, theater lighting, sound upgrades, and a turf football field. In addition, the district will be able to improve, renovate, furnish, and equip new and existing school facilities. Secure school buildings, space to grow, district pride, fiscal responsibility, and the same tax rate for a better district is a win for the entire Dunklin R-5 School District. We have a very supportive community, and this is another chance for us to showcase this overwhelming community support which is key for a successful school district. After the holidays, I will meet with teachers and community groups to ensure everyone is informed of this amazing opportunity for our students and community.

Please see the official Ballot Language Below.

PROPOSITION S

Shall the Board of Education of the Dunklin R-V School District of Jefferson County, Missouri borrow money and issue its general obligation bonds in the amount of $13,500,000 to acquire, construct, improve, renovate, furnish, and equip new and existing school facilities, including the Taylor Early Childhood Center, Pevely Elementary, Senn-Thomas Middle School and Herculaneum High School buildings? Projects may include but are not limited to the construction of secured entryways and installation of security upgrades at the elementary school and middle school, and the construction of a high school gym with a storm shelter. If this proposition is approved, the adjusted debt service levy of the school district is estimated to remain unchanged at the current levy of $0.9500 per one hundred dollars of assessed valuation of real and personal property.

Senn-Thomas Fall Festival

It was a success and they are already planning for next year. The Senn-Thomas Fall Festival took place the Saturday before Thanksgiving with a gym full of games and vendors. The band room became a gaming room. Two classrooms showed movies, and popcorn was available to everyone. Board games were spread throughout the library, including a giant Jenga tower and a waist-high Connect Four. There were so many activities they handed out maps at the entrance.

Dr. Tracy Lewis wanted to welcome families back into the building after all the COVID restrictions. The middle school principal took the idea to her Leadership Team. She says, "I was thinking of a low-key evening event, but they had other ideas." The teachers decided a family-friendly fall festival would be fun for everyone.

One popular activity involved painting a winter scene. Participants had to buy the canvas, but everything else was provided. Art Teacher Samantha Boever talked the room through each brush stroke while her hand movements were projected onto a screen. There were two sessions during the four-hour festival, and everyone got to take home their artwork.

Blackcat Buddies

The simplicity of the idea undercuts its tremendous value. Bring together student leaders in high school with elementary students who could use a little more support. Blackcat Buddies was suspended for two years because of the pandemic, but it's back to the delight of everyone involved. The counselors at Pevly chose the elementary students that might benefit the most. They may talk too much in class, or they're timid. They may have trouble following directions or need a little motivation.

Senior Belle Milojevic says her buddy was really shy at the beginning and a little rough around the edges, but that changed after a couple of meetings. She says, "We are now getting along, and he calls me his friend, and he tells his classmates to come meet my friend Belle." Milojevic figured out her first-grader quickly. She says, "He likes attention but doesn't know how to ask for it, but I can give it to him in the right way. He doesn't have to misbehave to get it."

Sophomore Gabe Moore says, "It reminds me of when I was in first grade, and I think it's pretty cool and just giving the tips on how to get through it. He likes superheroes a lot, and that's a topic I enjoy talking about, so I use that to communicate." Senior Ella Hoskins loves her buddy. She says, "I look forward to seeing Mattie, and she always tells me how excited she is to see me and that she always waits for me. I feel like an older sister to her. She made me a bracelet last time, so that made my day."

Sophomore Jill Jarvis says she normally wouldn't go out of her way to talk to little kids, but her buddy is special. "I'm very shy, and sometimes I might not talk because I don't know what to say or I haven't really met you," the little girl told Jarvis. That didn't last, as Jarvis took the time to get to know her buddy and get her out of her comfort zone. These little transformations happen frequently.

The high school students participating are in student council and are taking a leadership class. With guidance, they prepare activities designed to help their little friends. Pevly School Counselor Jessica Rekate says, "Our students really look forward to meeting with their buddies. The excitement of meeting with a special person carries over into the work the elementary students are putting into the activities that the high school students have prepared."

First Grade Teacher Brittney Marshall says, "My students eat lunch with their Blackcat Buddy, and one of my students told me that her buddy wants her to be good in class and listen to her teacher. It has helped so much already. I wish the high school buddy could come every day!"

Blackcats and Bronchettes

While the football teams went to battle, striving for dominance over their rival, an unexpected show of unity occurred at halftime. The Bayless Broncos and Herculaneum Blackcats each have a dance team that performed together at Dugan Memorial Field. To the crowd's delight, the colorful dance troupe smiled their way through a fun routine. It was a subtle reminder that the students with pom-poms and those with helmets were just high school kids making memories.

The Blackcat Dance Team knew of the Bayless Bronchettes because they are in the same category during competitions. Senior Carmen Weier says, "They are really nice girls. I've never talked to them one on one before." While the idea was positive, the logistics were a challenge. Junior Anna Fehr says, "We didn't practice with them at all. We had a practice planned out, and it just didn't end up happening." Coach Courtney Stenzhorn went to Bayless High School to teach the Bronchettes the routine, but the teams didn't come together until the evening of the performance. She says, "We practiced together an hour before the game."

While the dancers didn't know each other, the coaches have a long history. Stenzhorn went to high school with their coach, Shannon Ulrich. That connection led to forming one large dance team. Weier says, "It was a way to bring us together to have a good time." Fehr says, "It ended up going a lot better than we expected." Next year, the Bronchettes will teach the Blackcat Dance Team a routine to perform during halftime when Bayless hosts Herculaneum.

NHS Staying Busy

Herculaneum High School's National Honor Society welcomed ten new members during a ceremony in the Dunklin R-5 Theatre. The organization has been active this fall by participating in the Herculaneum Veterans Day ceremony, helping with the Taylor Festival, providing candy for the police department's Truck or Treat, and working the Herculaneum Fire Department Rally. The high school library was getting rid of hundreds of books and offered them to students and staff. There were still numerous titles left over. After a few calls, they learned Scenic Nursing and Rehabilitation Center was interested in getting new books. Soon their residents got a visit from several NHS members as they delivered seven carloads of books. Currently, NHS members are gearing up for the holiday season by organizing spirit week, decorating the school, and adopting a local family to provide food and toys for Christmas.

Herculaneum High School's Cross Country Coach Kyle Davis was named "Coach of the Year" by the Missouri State High School Activities Association and the National Federation of State High School Associations. It's so rare that Davis didn't know anything about the award. Only one boys cross country coach in Missouri is chosen for the honor. The sport has six classes, resulting in six state champs, so that alone won't bring the plaque to your doorstep.

One week Davis was asked to attend a Friday night football game. He expected Activities Director Jason Gillman to present him with some minor award as a half-time filler. Then Davis saw MSHAA's Assistant Executive Director Lou Mazzocco. As a state official responsible for football, cross country, and track, Davis wondered what Mr. Gillman did to cause Mazzocco to show up. Davis says, "I did not know until I walked out to the 50-yard line." The announcer started talking about the highest honor you can receive as a high school coach. Mr. Mazzocco walked onto the grass field to present the honor. Soon they were shaking hands during the surreal moment. Davis says, "It's really cool. It's an awesome honor. I honestly didn't know that MSHSAA gave anything like that. That's how unfamiliar I was with it."

Over the next few days, as the excitement faded, the meaning began to grow. Davis says, "You know, education is hard. It's a hard field." As word spread of the honor, alums started contacting Davis. Some former runners hadn't spoken to their high school coach in years. Davis says, "It gave me a sense of – a renewed kind of purpose that it's worth it. It's worth it to do this."

Davis appreciates the history of the cross country program at Herculaneum High School. He says, "The tradition is fuel. It's fuel to me. I didn't create it. I just keep it going." This fall, the boys' team took second place in the Class 3 State Championship, and the girls' team finished eighth among the teams that qualified. Both teams have several runners returning next year.

The future of the program can be seen at the middle school. Davis is well aware of the talent at Senn-Thomas. He says the girls have solid numbers, and that group has the potential to do something special. The boys have fewer numbers, but Davis sees them as being very productive as they get older. Before a fun run at Herculaneum City Park, a slim 6th-grader, whose personality is too big for his body, bragged that he was going to run like Sam Vaughn. When 6th-graders at the middle school know the names of varsity runners at the high school, it's obvious that the cross country program has roots.

Herculaneum Esports is Dialed In

On the same day that the boy's cross country team competed in the state championship, and the football team fell short during a district semifinal game, another team was impacting their sport. The Herculaneum esports team participated in a competition at Southeast Missouri State University. These unknown high school gamers from Herculaneum effectively planted the Blackcat flag to announce their arrival in the virtual world of esports.

In the college arena, there were rows and rows of computers set up for the teams. Jack Shadowens says, "We were all a little nervous when we got there because we've never done anything like that." Matt King says, "You could see them. You could see your competition. It was way different." Soon the computers came to life, competitors put on their headsets, and they were off. Payne Hawkins says, "We were always talking to each other, like telling each other what to do." Game after game, Herculaneum was racking up victories." It didn't surprise Steven Stenzhorn. He entered the competition with confidence, knowing they could triumph. He says, "Teamwork is how you win games." When only a handful of teams were left in the competition, the crowds got larger. Drew Helms says, "We got a lot of weird looks and questions about if we were a team that wasn't registered for a while... if we were actually a one-year team."

SEMO had some members of their college esports team provide play-by-play as the electronic games unfolded. They admired the Blackcats' skill and strategy, eventually saying, "I've got to meet these players from Herky!" Among the 25 schools that participated, Herculaneum took second place in playing Rocket League as well as Overwatch. Hawkins says, "We are definitely in the top tier for competition in high school esports." King says, "We got beaten by Fox, but we'll be doing more tournaments where we will face them again." Herculaneum has always been competitive on a track, field, or court. We can now add the virtual world to that list.

Blackcat Hall of Fame

meager savings and a barbecue fundraiser allowed for the purchase of books. She would be the first in her family to graduate college.

She began her career teaching science in the Fox School District. During her morning commute, Hill heard a radio interview that changed her career trajectory. The United States military needed educators overseas to teach the children of service members. Hill was soon headed to Bermuda for her first teaching assignment. That was followed by Portugal, Germany, Iceland, Okinawa, Japan, Canada, and several cities across England. By then, Hill was working as an assistant principal and business manager. She says, "It was all because of 'Govey' calling the president of Southeast Missouri State and getting me a place down there. I never will forget that." There is a delightful memoir penned by Hill named Shout Gratitude! The Life of Barbara Hill.

Growing up, everyone in the Thomas family played golf. However, most evenings, he and his brother would shoot hoops. He says, "There was nothing on television because we didn't have a television." His promotion to the varsity basketball team happened halfway through his freshman season. The center was injured, so they called upon the tall, red-headed kid to take his place. Over time, Thomas became dominant on the court, scoring 2,106 points before graduating in 1965. The Blackcat was selected First Team All-State as a junior and senior.

Thomas earned a four-year basketball scholarship to Oklahoma State University. The coach there wanted a good defensive team. He says, "We could have a three-hour practice, and we wouldn't touch the ball for two or two and half hours." It wasn't fun anymore. Fortunately, Thomas also played golf for the Okies as a walk-on. He transferred his basketball scholarship to a golf scholarship and graduated in 1969. A year later, he had a master's degree from the same institution in economics and finance. For the next 30 years, he worked in the home office of General American Life Insurance Company, retiring in 2001. Along the way, Thomas married Catherine Bond, and they had three children; Elizabeth, Rachael, and Matthew.

A humble teacher and a star athlete have joined the list of legends in the Blackcat Hall of Fame. Alumna Barbara Hill was voted "Best Athlete" by her classmates, but teaching was her calling. Alumnus Bruce Thomas was vice president of the National Honor Society but was known as a gifted athlete. Their accomplishments were celebrated during this fall's induction ceremony into the Blackcat Hall of Fame.

Hill credits her career to a phone call and a car ride. Growing up, she got a job working in the St. Joseph Lead Company cafeteria for 35 cents an hour. She was 13 years old at the time and would continue through high school. While serving meals, she met Walter Govreau, an electrician who also served on the board of education. Knowing that Hill wanted to go to college, Govreau offered to give her a ride to Southeast Missouri State. She was intelligent, graduating fifth in her class in 1957, but there was no money for college. He said they would work it out. Govreau called and made an appointment with the college president and got Hill a job in a dorm cafeteria to cover her room and board. Her

Awesome Audrey

Principal Katie Dunlap says there is more of a crossover between gym class and traditional studies than you might think. "It is not uncommon to hear students in Coach Meda's class solving multiplication facts during a team building game in the gym as they work towards a common goal or reading site words around the gym to score more points," says Dunlap.

As the Dunklin R-5 School District's Emerson award winner, Meda will attend a banquet in St. Louis and be gifted a crystal apple by Tiffany.

This year's Emerson Excellence in Teaching Award goes to Physical Education Teacher Audrey Meda. She says, "I'm honored and humbled that I was even nominated." The alumna remembers being a student in the same gym where she teaches at Pevly Elementary School. Meda was a 1983 State Champion Track Team member at Herculaneum High School and played volleyball at North Alabama. She was teaching in the Carolinas when her husband landed a job at Scott Air Force Base. They moved back to Missouri, and she was hired at Herculaneum High School. In addition to her teaching duties, she spent the first 15 years at Dunklin coaching one or more sports.

Watching Meda with her elementary students, pitching a kickball game while reviewing the rules between plays, you'd say she was a wonderful mix of patience and youthful energy. In some ways, it defies logic, but she says, "I'm such I'm a type A personality. I'm always ready to come back after Christmas. I'm always ready to come back after summer vacation. I love what I do; I really do. I'm just not ready to hang it up." Meda is by no means old, but the median age of Missouri teachers is only 38, so by comparison, she has plenty of experience.

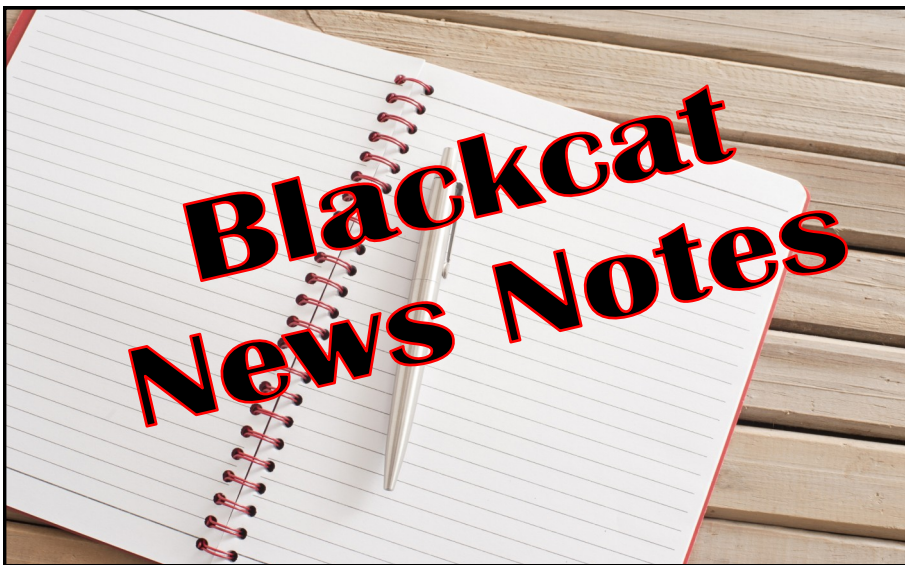

Meda is almost bashful when it comes to being praised, but she will stand up for her specialty. She believes teachers who work in a gym instead of a classroom are often overlooked. She says, "I feel like what we're doing as physical education teachers has a direct impact on all the other classes." Meda argues that healthy students are more likely to do their math or reading assignments. She says, "It all starts here."

Veterans Honored

Veterans were honored the second week in November with a concert at Pevely Elementary School, breakfast at Senn-Thomas Middle school, and a reverse parade leading to Herculaneum High School. That's where another performance took place in the Dunklin R-5 Theatre featuring the band, choir, and a guest speaker. Hundreds of students from every building were involved in the celebrations.

Congratulations to Mrs. Andrea Medley, who was recognized as an Unsung Hero during the Missouri State Teachers Association's conference. It's a way to spotlight members for their contribution to the MSTA.

The National Honor Society's blood drive was a success. They surpassed their goal of 35, collecting a total of 44 units of blood.

We had a fantastic Thanksgiving Food Drive, providing meals to over 30 local families! Thanks to our high school students, their families, community donors, HHS Student Council, and Bright Futures for your support..

Two showcase events are taking place in February. We are hosting the River Summit on Friday, February 17th. It's a combined Professional Development Day for several districts. The following Monday, we'll host the State of the County in Robinson Gymnasium.

Pevely's Family Friday Reading will return on January 27th and February 24th. It's a chance for parents or guardians to visit the school and read to their child from 9:30 a.m. to 10 a.m.

The Fall Play is Friday and Saturday at 7 p.m. Elf Jr. is based on the popular movie.

Don't miss the high school's Choir Concert on December 14th and Winter Band Concert on December 18th.

Congratulations to Senn-Thomas Principal Tracy Lewis for earning her doctorate degree in Educational Leadership. Dr. Lewis joins an exclusive club that includes Dr. Clint Freeman, Dr. Joe Willis, and Dr. Amanda Britain.
