In Memoriam

A message from the PRESIDENT

Dear Friends of Central Catholic:

We are excited for you to enjoy this most recent copy of The Emblem! In addition to sharing what is happening here on campus and celebrating the accomplishments and life celebrations of your friends and classmates, we are also proud to highlight some of the many Central Catholic alums, as well as those from Saint Mary High School and Presentation of Mary Academy, who have pursued a career in journalism and broadcasting.

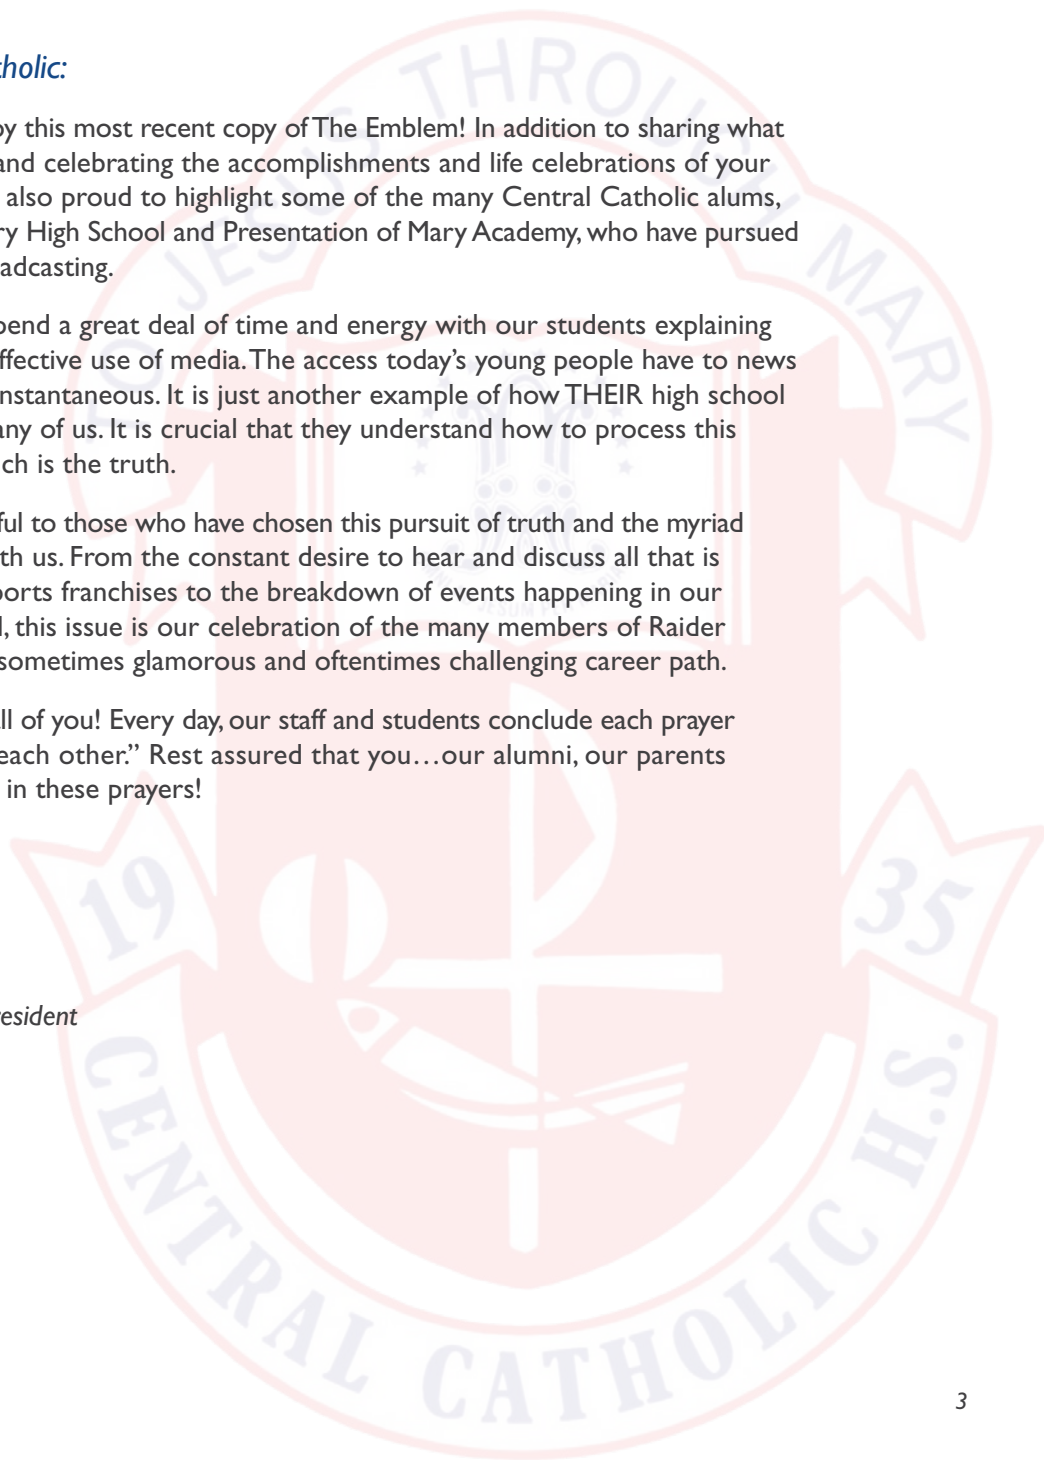

As you can well imagine, we spend a great deal of time and energy with our students explaining the importance of truth and effective use of media. The access today's young people have to news and information is practically instantaneous. It is just another example of how THEIR high school years differ from that of so many of us. It is crucial that they understand how to process this information and filter that which is the truth.

Through this lens, we are grateful to those who have chosen this pursuit of truth and the myriad of ways they try to share it with us. From the constant desire to hear and discuss all that is happening with our favorite sports franchises to the breakdown of events happening in our country and around the world, this issue is our celebration of the many members of Raider Nation who have chosen this sometimes glamorous and oftentimes challenging career path.

As always, we are grateful for all of you! Every day, our staff and students conclude each prayer with a reminder "to pray for each other." Rest assured that you...our alumni, our parents and our friends...are included in these prayers!

In God's Peace,

Christopher F. Sullivan '81 – President

JONATHAN R. LEMIRE '97

*Host of “Way Too Early” on MSNBC,
White House Bureau Chief for Politico*

If you're awake at 5 a.m., chances are you've watched Jonathan R. Lemire '97 deliver the morning news as host of “Way Too Early with Jonathan Lemire” on national news network MSNBC.

From covering the corridors of power in Washington and New York, to serving as a key political resource on a variety of national news programs, Jonathan earned his awe-inspiring place in the ultra-competitive field of journalism and broadcasting.

But before he dominated the national news scene, he started as a Raider!

Jonathan grew up in Lowell, MA, with his father who was a history teacher at Chelmsford High School, and his mother who taught English at the University of Massachusetts, Lowell. He was raised immersed in history, current events, and recalls his first experience with journalism was regularly reading the Boston Globe sports pages.

Having attended Catholic school from kindergarten, he took his love of English and history to Central Catholic “...because Central was the best option for academics, lifestyle, athletics and a few of my other friends were attending CCHS as well.”

While attending CCHS, Jonathan was a tremendous student-athlete participating in indoor and outdoor track and field, and cross country, setting several Merrimack Valley Conference and school records, some of which still stand today. He also found time to stay involved with Amnesty International and the Knowledge Bowl.

He credits his experience at CCHS with several role models including the late teacher and cross country coach Mr. Peter O'Sullivan '67, Mr. Leo F. McCue, former CCHS History teacher, Mr. Chuck “Coach A” Adamopoulos, teacher and long-time football coach, and CCHS President Mr. Christopher Sullivan '81, who served as Director of Admissions while Jonathan attended Central.

“Central Catholic helped shape me and offered a strong sense of community, with a top down approach from both teachers and older students,” said Jonathan. “Track also provided me with a really tight group of friends, and we always cheered each other on with a ‘we’ve got each other’s backs’ environment. I have nothing but fond memories of my time at Central Catholic.” Jonathan remains in contact with friends and classmates from CCHS.

After graduating from CCHS in 1997, Jonathan headed to the prestigious Columbia University in New York and earned a bachelor's degree in History. He interned at New York Daily News and after graduation, was asked to stay on as a staffer. Shortly after starting at the newspaper, Jonathan found himself in NYC during the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks and he worked around the clock bringing the latest news to the world during this unprecedented time.

He continued to spend more than a decade at the New York Daily News, City Hall, and New York's Police and Fire Departments.

In 2013, he joined The Associated Press, the world's largest news gathering organization, as a White House reporter covering the President Trump campaign and administration, national politics, and the federal government, all while splitting his time between New York City and Washington, D.C.

As cable television began wanting print journalists to provide commentary on air, Jonathan became a regular contributor for MSNBC as a political analyst and NBC News, which led to a regular role on the popular morning news program "Morning Joe" (MSNBC).

Ultimately, after serving as a guest host for the 5 a.m. show "Way Too Early" on MSNBC, he was soon named the main host.

He now sits at the helm of "Way Too Early with Jonathan Lemire" and serves as a political analyst for both the MSNBC and NBC News.

Also, after years of working at The Associated Press, he was named White House Bureau Chief for Politico.

Between The Associated Press and Politico, Jonathan has covered two presidential administrations, first President

Donald Trump, whom he interviewed in the Oval Office, and now President Joseph Biden.

In these prestigious positions, he has traveled to the Middle East, Asia and Europe, and has broken scores of news stories and wrote authoritative analysis pieces while covering the day-to-day workings of both presidencies, as well as the 2016 and 2020 campaigns.

He also covered the nation's response to the COVID-19 pandemic, received attention for his news conference questions to President Trump and Russia's Vladimir Putin at their 2018 Helsinki Summit, and reported on the Capitol Hill insurrection (January 6, 2021).

In addition to his "Way Too Early" hosting duties, Jonathan is a frequent guest on MSNBC programs like "Deadline White House with Nicole Wallace" and "The 11th Hour" and he contributed to the network's coverage of the 2020 election and Biden's inauguration. He also recently authored a book, "THE BIG LIE: Election Chaos, Political Opportunism, and the State of American Politics after 2020," which was released in July 2022.

Jonathan is the only Raider in school history to have received a Champagnat Award (The St. Marcellin Champagnat Award for Outstanding Professional Achievement, 2022), and was also inducted into the CCHS Athletic Hall of Fame for track (2012).

He currently lives in New York with his wife, journalist Mrs. Carrie Melago, and their two sons, and spends an extraordinary amount of time thinking about the Boston Red Sox.

From Local News to Dominating D.C.

LOUISE L. SCHIAVONE '68SM

Louise Schiavone '68SM has spent her life successfully climbing the competitive ladder of local, regional and national journalism and broadcasting during a time when female journalists were few and far between.

Today, a career journalist and senior lecturer at the Johns Hopkins University Carey Business School in Baltimore, MD and Washington, D.C., Louise is still going strong in fulfilling her childhood dream of telling life's stories.

She is heard as a contributing anchor on National Public Radio (NPR), writes about sustainability and the marine environment in a regular column for Forbes.com, with by-lines also appearing in the Los Angeles Review of Books and National Geographic. Her award-winning 2020 short documentary, "Crisis on The Half Shell: The Chesapeake Bay" has been shown at film festivals and marine conservation conferences.

Louise has covered Congress, the White House, the Pentagon, Treasury, State, Transportation, Energy, and Housing Departments, as well as national presidential campaigns, the mortgage meltdown and financial crisis, food safety challenges, and natural disasters as an on-air veteran of CNN, ABC News, and the Associated Press.

"My story has involved swimming upstream in a time when women were fighting for their fair place and compensation at all kinds of work - and on-air women were not a big part of the news business," said Louise.

Born in New York City, Louise's family moved to North Andover, MA, to be near the then-booming textile factories of Lawrence where her father, Rocco Schiavone was an internationally known shoe designer.

She grew up as a second-generation Italian-American to parents who did not use English as a first language. None of her grandparents were born American citizens, but immigrated to the United States in search of opportunity.

Attending Catholic schools and participating in Scouts, summer camps and music lessons gave Louise and her three brothers a foundation her parents never had.

While a student at St. Mary High School in Lawrence, MA, Louise got her start in news writing for the St. Mary's "Marian Monitor," where, not surprisingly, she was Co-Editor-in-Chief – along with classmate Lynne Murphy '68SM.

Louise and the rest of the staff sold advertising space to local businesses, took photographs, cranked out papers at least once a month - more than that, in the case of a blockbuster front-pager which, without question, included the sub-freezing blaze that damaged St. Mary High School.

Graduating from Emmanuel College in Boston, MA in the middle of a recession, Louise wrote commercials for WCCM-AM and FM in Lawrence for $75 a week. After working a full-day writing advertisements there, the News Director let her pitch in at night, covering local news stories.

Ultimately moving up to the newsroom, she continued to work two jobs: one, full-time, reporting and anchoring at WCCM, while at the same time, working an additional 20 hours a week writing for then all-news WEEI Radio in Boston.

Moving to Washington D.C., Louise wrote speeches, press releases, and constituent correspondence for the late Paul Tsongas, during his first term in Congress, before moving to New York City to pursue a graduate degree in journalism from Columbia University.

It was 1978, and with job offers in Boston and Washington D.C., Schiavone rolled the dice on a city she'd never seen and where, at first, knew exactly one person: Atlanta, Georgia. Jimmy Carter was President, the Atlanta crowd was in national power, and the city was led by the civil rights leaders whose names fill history textbooks.

A year later, flying into Savannah while everyone was evacuating the city, she covered her first hurricane, David. It was a huge national story that ultimately led to a job offer in Washington D.C. with the Associated Press.

From covering the 1981 shooting of then President Reagan, to an appointment as Senate correspondent, to more hurricanes, political chaos and campaigns and beyond, Louise has had a multitude of opportunities that have shaped her career and life.

Today, she shares her extensive professional experience teaching business communication, crisis strategies and business ethics at Johns Hopkins.

"Above and beyond everything else, success involves a lot of work," said Louise. "Hours and hours and hours. That's what it takes to be a creative, successful person."

Creatively, her current focus and passion is the environment and marine biodiversity, which she has had the opportunity to develop with the support of her university.

Louise's older brother Nicholas P. Schiavone is a 1967 CCHS graduate. She is married to CCHS alum and fellow journalist Richard Uliano '69, a correspondent and anchor on WTOP Newsradio in Washington, D.C. They have a daughter, Christina, a federal attorney in Baltimore, MD.

Soon It's Curtain Up – THE REBIRTH OF THE ALLAN B. ROGERS THEATER

By David DeFillippo '66

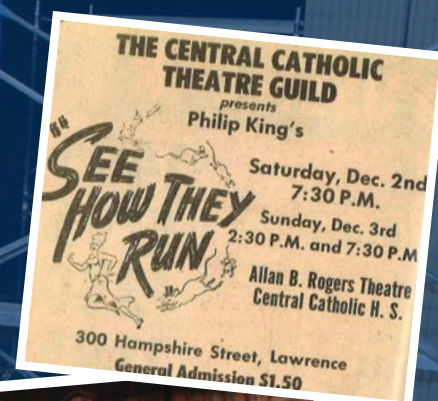

Advancement Associate & Foundation
Giving, former CCHS Principal

Central Catholic's enrollment was growing rapidly in the late 1960s. Central's reputation as a superior college preparatory school for students in the Merrimack Valley had become well-established. The Marist Brothers, alumni, educators and community leaders saw the clear need for the school's expansion to respond to the demand for admission and to provide modern academic facilities for students.

Embedded in school's 1968-1970 expansion plans were "big dreams" for the development of programs and activities in the visual arts, music and performing arts. The designs included art galleries and a 400-seat theater, which would be named in honor of the late Allan B. Rogers. A benefactor of CCHS himself, Allan, along with his father, Irving E. Rogers, publisher of the Eagle Tribune, were among influential community leaders who vigorously supported Central Catholic through its early years.

In 1972 the grand opening of the Allan B. Rogers Theater inspired the founding of the Central Catholic Theatre Guild. Fast forward five decades, in this same theater where Central Catholic students first "trode the boards" to put on those first 1972-1973 performances of "See How They Run," and "Guys and Dolls," Central now prepares to celebrate the 50th Golden Anniversary of the Allan B. Rogers Theater. In tribute to its rich history at CCHS, the Rogers Theater is undergoing a complete renovation and will be reborn with a fresh face and the most advanced theatrical technologies.

Over the 50 years, the Allan B. Rogers Theater has been home to the CCHS Theatre Guild and its 96 shows and over 300 performances by countless talented students who graced its stage. The original wooden stage, which still exists, was donated by Broadway legend and Tony Award winner, Lawrence native, the late Robert Goulet. The Theatre Guild has been blessed with many faculty leaders over the years, most notably, its founder, Thomas Kirkman '60, and talented directors, Karen E. Moynihan '69SM, Sharman A. (Walsh '87) Merrill, and presently, co-directors, Matthew J. Joyal '08 and Christine M. (Leonard '06) Thompson.

The renovations and enhancements to the Allan B. Rogers Theater began in the summer of 2022 and continue throughout the fall. Central's students are wildly excited at the prospect of a cutting edge, new home for theater arts, so excited that they raised tens of thousands of dollars through their most recent annual Walk-a-thon to kick-off the dream of the Rogers Theater rebirth. We are grateful to the spirit, devotion, and leadership of the student body!

The renovations to the Allan B. Rogers Theater, with a price tag of nearly $250,000, include many of the bells, whistles, and comfortability features of a modern theater:

With a major in International Relations, I am hoping to be able to use this to my advantage and have doors opened up that allow me to travel and possibly become a Foreign Affairs Officer.”

Reflections on CCHS: “I will always value my CCHS experience, the lessons I learned at Central and throughout my high school career. I will remember the friendly, even family-like classroom environment. The teachers at Central were so loving and caring towards me and my peers. Especially through the pandemic, we persevered as a class and the school as a whole. The teachers were so helpful, always guiding us in the right direction and showing the light at the end of the tunnel. My favorite part of the CCHS community is the family aspect and how I can recognize the face of a Central person anywhere I go. A simple smile goes a long way!”

Faculty Role Model: “Yes, there are multiple role models for me!. Mr. O’Neill (Mr. James O’Neill, Religious Studies Teacher), whom I had as my Religion teacher both freshman and senior year, taught me many life lessons. Another teacher who has shaped the end of my journey at Central is Mr. Romero (Mr. Christopher Romero, World Language Teacher), who was my Public Speaking teacher, who taught me some very valuable lessons in our short time together. I learned that consistency builds character and motivation, and the importance of honesty and time management. The variety of clubs, sports, and other activities and the diversity of their participants is truly special."

To name a few, Mr. Clements (Mr. Michael Clements '94, English Teacher/Coach) and Mr. Grella (Mr. Sully Grella '92, Math Teacher/Coach) truly made me feel included and cared about, and Mr. Leal (Mr. Michael Leal '94, Math Teacher/Coach) taught me that it is okay to learn and have fun at the same time. Also, during my junior year I was hospitalized with an unknown condition from mid-September until January, forcing me to drop many of my classes and repeat my junior year. However, I was able to finish due to the tremendous time and effort of Mrs. Martino (Mrs. Anne Martino, Religious Studies Teacher), Mrs. Lonero (Mrs. Carmen Lonero, World Language Teacher), Mr. Welch (Mr. Joseph Welch '90, English Teacher), Mr. Cavanaugh (Mr. Richard Cavanaugh, Science Teacher), and Mr. O'Neill (Mr. James O'Neill, Religious Studies Teacher). EMILY
LICCIARDI '17

From WHDH Boston to The Tonight Show, Emily Licciardi '17 — a recent Endicott College (2021) graduate — has landed several desirable internships as she continues to pursue her dream career in the entertainment industry.

By her senior year in college, Emily had already gained invaluable experiences at WHDH Boston and “The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon.”

As a digital media major with a concentration in Film Production at Endicott, Emily’s passion and determination opened many high-profile professional doors, starting with a summer internship after her freshman year at WHDH/CW 56 in Boston.

“At WHDH/CW56, I interned in the Creative Services Department under the supervision of Tiffany Middleton, who saw my drive and desire to work in the industry and let me be her assistant on the promo shoots with the talent, where I got to talk to them and ask all about the industry,” said Emily. “Approximately six months after completing my internship, a job opened up in Tiffany’s department and she reached out to me to interview, which I ended up landing in February 2019.”

Emily found that this internship truly prepped her for the next big step. “I learned how to think on the fly, stick up for my ideas and to not be afraid to make mistakes. This turned out to be the best preparation for an award-winning show like The Tonight Show.

“I have always been a fan of The Tonight Show and Jimmy Fallon himself, so when I saw an open internship available, I figured applying was worth a shot!” said Emily.

She was right... Emily was selected for the internship and within two weeks, she moved to New York City to start her next chapter at Studio 6B at 30 Rockefeller Center.

Though due to confidentiality, Emily can’t share her exact duties while working with Jimmy Fallon, she can say that every day was a new, exciting challenge. But once COVID-19 hit, her internship was forced to change in order to follow health guidelines. “I worked remotely, but was able to assist more staff members and work on a lot of additional cool and creative projects.” She completed her Tonight Show internship in May 2020.

Emily’s ambition blossomed at Central Catholic, where she was a member of the Tennis Team, Student Ambassadors, and the Student Alumni Association (SAA) Executive Board.

“My experiences with Student Ambassadors and SAA equipped me with important skills for the working world such as the power of networking, holding myself to a higher standard and always treating people with respect,” said Emily. “CCHS staff members Mr. Christopher Merrill '89, Director of Admissions and Mr. David Erwin, Chief Development Officer, taught me how to speak not only about myself, but about an organization.”

She was also significantly impacted by faculty members Mrs. Ashleigh (Ward '00) Brown and Mr. Jarrod Brown '98, who supported Emily in the classroom and on the tennis court.

“I have never met two teachers who not only cared, but pushed their students to strive for anything and everything in life. Mr. Brown used to stay after school with me and other classmates for almost an hour every day just to make sure we were on track for success,” said Emily. “Mrs. Brown was my tennis coach and the one who pushed me to look into playing at college, flash forward four years later and I played on a conference winning NCAA team. The Browns, in my opinion, are a treasure of Central Catholic High School!”

Emily currently works as a Social Media Content Creator and Strategist for numerous clients, from Boston TikTok Star, Kevin Cooney to Four Seasons Hotel and Resorts.

The entire CCHS community welcomes Mr. Jarrod Pelletier '01 as one of the newest members of the Board of Directors. As current Co-Portfolio Manager & Co-Partner of WGI Developed Markets-Ex/US Fund for Westwood Global Investments, LLC Boston, MA, Jarrod has extensive professional financial experience. High school is a unique time for teenagers, and the faculty and staff at CCHS are there to help you navigate such a complex time in your adolescence. I feel I owe a great deal back to a school that gave me so much, a school I genuinely love. For a school that contributed so much to my individual success, it is my honor to pay it back. In the midst of Lawrence City..."

ABOUT MRS. GISSELLE A. (GUERRERO '00) PEREZ

The entire CCHS community welcomes alum and current parent Mrs. Gisselle A. (Guerrero '00) Perez as one of the newest members of the Board of Directors. Guerrero '96 and daughter Salinas C. Perez '24, a current student.

"When I entered CCHS for the first time, I was full of excitement and eager to see what the next four years would hold. Little did I know that who I am today would be attributed to the learnings, experiences and friendships I gained at Central," said Gisselle. "My parents, factory workers in Lawrence, made many sacrifices to provide the best education for my siblings and I, and it would be the 'one thing they would leave us.' They knew that CCHS was the only option to achieve a great education. My experiences at CCHS were unbelievably great and I often reminisce about wanting to do them all over again. The pride I feel when telling people I am an alum, and now a parent of a student of CCHS, is incredible. Today, when I drop my daughter off, and see the solid structure, inside and out, that CCHS has evolved to over the years, it reconfirms for me that getting involved in this community, my community, was something I very much wanted and needed to do. CCHS taught me to always give back, and doing so at CCHS is more than an honor. Central is not just my alma mater in the 'midst of Lawrence city', it's my home and fills my heart."

ADDITIONAL CHANGES TO BOARD

Mr. Gerald C. Kent has completed nine years of service to the Board and has therefore retired (as required) on June 30, 2022. Jerry's daughters are both CCHS alumni: Leanne M. Kent '12 and Miranda M. Kent '15.

LINDA (BELANGER '74SM) CYR is retired and enjoying it so much! She enjoys traveling and has been to quite a few places including a recent trip to Alaska. "I have seven grandchildren and they bring me so much joy. I try to take them to lots of places and teach them about nature and our environment. I have moved quite a few times, but I think I have found my forever home in Plaistow, NH. I'm close to my three sons and all my grandchildren. I keep active playing Pickleball and riding on my bicycle (I sold my motorcycle last year). I also crew a sailboat in the summer. I am always open to new adventures and I'm trying to keep young, though my body screams at me sometimes. Can't wait to see everyone!"

ROSEMARY (HOLMES '74SM) DRAPER and her husband John retired at the end of 2020 after 20+ years of selling real estate and enjoying having their own office in North Andover. "We sold our home in North Andover and moved to a tiny town in mid coast Maine- close to everything- just a lot less traffic! Our son Roger is married, dad to my 11-year-old grandson and an RN in Concord, NH. Lots of time to enjoy vegetable and flower gardens as well as my three pups. French bulldogs have my heart!"

RAYMOND J. DREW '74 and wife DEBRA (FISHER '74^{PM}) DREW are currently living on the middle peninsula in Virginia enjoying the river life. "Our biggest hobby is traveling. We have four daughters and no grandkids yet. I look forward to our 50th reunion. All my best!"

DONNA (WATTON '74SM) OHANIAN retired from Manchester, NH as a school Library Media Specialist and recently moved to Meredith NH, a quaint, fun vacation town. "I added a double story garage onto my home last year. I also own a cabin on Newfound Lake where my three kids love to gather and go boating. I am also a new Nana. Yay! I chose divorce in 2000, so retirement is a bit lonely. I have two gardens, with fruit trees. For decades I skied all over NH. In 1998, I co-founded a group that brought Public Kindergarten to all of NH. I now keep busy doing house projects such as replacing my unevenly spaced basement steps all by myself. I also do woodworking, kayak, and make stained glass mosaics. I've survived massive blood clots and a brain cyst and last winter a broken leg with sprained ankle. I look forward to spending winter somewhere warm enough to snorkel and swim, and maybe try a singles cruise.

SUSAN (NORMAN '74SM) SIROIS-ELLIS is doing well living in Phippsburg, Maine. "I was on my way to retiring, but decided I wasn't quite ready to do that. I took a job with the City of Bath, Maine last April as their marketing and communications person. So far, it's been super fun, interesting, and much less stressful than corporate work. I have one grandchild, Lainey, who is four years old and, of course, completely amazing. I travel, sew clothes, garden, hike, kayak and read a lot. Living in Maine is giving me lots of opportunity to be outside enjoying nature (dressed for the season, of course)! There are also lots of arts and community events that I love. Definitely in my happy place."

Celebrating the Catholic Schools Foundation

Central Catholic and the Catholic Schools Foundation (CSF) have enjoyed a long, successful relationship resulting in much needed educational support for hundreds of CCHS students.

Over $3.3 million has been provided by CSF in support of over 250 Central Catholic students through the Montagne Scholars and the CSF Scholars program, providing scholarships for deserving Catholic elementary and middle school graduates now attending CCHS.

CSF's generous commitment includes funds for a new $100K CSF-CCHS-Lawrence Catholic Academy scholarship pilot for students entering in the Class of 2026 from Lawrence Catholic Academy. CSF has also approved a CSF Scholars grant of $195,000 to support CCHS students for the upcoming year, and supported the CCHS Innovative Learning Summer Academy with grants totaling $20,000. CSF support for students in the 2022-23 academic year will total over $290,000.

They also support enrichment opportunities such as scholarships to attend college readiness summer programs at local universities for CCHS students, complimentary admission to Boston-area cultural events, and sporting events.

Established in 1983, CSF changes lives by providing families with demonstrated financial need an opportunity to give their children a quality education, focused on Christian values and character formation at Catholic schools located throughout the Archdiocese of Boston regardless of race, religion, ethnicity, or gender. They have distributed more than $100 million in scholarship aid to over 50,000 students in the Greater Boston community.
