FFA Department

Agriculture is the largest employment sector in America and the basis for everyday life. There are many different job opportunities in today's market. Ranging from welding, building construction, landscaping, forestry, floriculture, plumbing, electrical, aquaculture, cattle farming, gardening, and the green industry. It is the goal of Addison Ag Department to give each student as many tools as possible to gain the much needed employability skills that are required for entrance level positions.

Future Farmers of America is an integral part of the program of Agriscience Education at AHS. Every student is encouraged to join each year, and there is a place for everyone. Students will be able to practice their skills learned in class by competing in many Career Development events such as Floriculture, Nursery Landscape, Forestry, Soil Science, Ag Mechanics, Small engines, and Live-stock. In addition, FFA officers will be selected to represent our chapter across the state and nation, developing skills helping confidence and employability.
