

Building Relationships Is Key For Vowell

TUPELO, Miss. — Building relationships with students is critical when working in a school setting. As a counselor, it's imperative.

When staff at Carver Elementary talk about Jamie Vowell, one of the first things said is her amazing ability to cultivate relationships.

“Serving as our school counselor, she is such a strong advocate for all of our students,” principal Christy Carroll said. “Building relationships as she works with students and families is a strength of hers. She supports not only our students and families, but our staff as well.”

A native of Philadelphia, Miss., Jamie has been with the Tupelo Public School District for 9 years, the last seven at Carver.

She earned both her bachelor and master's degree from Lee University. She and her husband, Justin, have two sons and a daughter.

“I tell students that it's my job to help solve problems, so, I love when I can help a student or their family meet a need or solve a problem,” Vowell said. I enjoy building relationships with students and ensuring their first years in school are happy and successful.”

This week's TPSD Staff Spotlight, sponsored by Sunny 93.3 and Buffalo Wild Wings, is Jamie Vowell of Carver.
