Document C*The Duke of Sussex ♪

Harry had been sent to Eton to follow in the footsteps of his brother and after he completed his schooling with two A-levels, he decided to take a gap year<sup>1</sup> in a number of locations, which allowed him to get away from the glare of publicity that had begun to follow him. In 2004, he spent three months working on a ranch in Queensland, Australia, learning how to mend fences and herd cattle, he travelled and worked in southern Africa and also went to Lesotho, where he visited an orphanage<sup>2</sup> for children with AIDS and helped build a clinic. Photos were published in newspapers around the world of him playing rugby with African children - a symbolic moment that marked the start of his interest in some of the humanitarian cause, championed by his late mother.

In 2006, The Duke of Sussex jointly founded Sentebale, a charity to help orphans in Lesotho, southern Africa. Together with his great friend Prince Seeiso of Lesotho, he set up Sentebale to offer long-term support to community organisations working with children and young people, and in particular to those working with orphans.

Sentebale is a word that people in Lesotho use when they say goodbye to each other: it means 'forget me not'. It was chosen as the name of the new charity because the two Princes see its work as a memorial to the charity work of their own mothers, and because its aim as an organisation is to ensure that Lesotho, and the current plight of its children, is not forgotten.

B. Student exchange programs

Document A

Erasmus students are those that take advantage of the Erasmus exchange program, a well supported and organised scheme that has been in operation since the late 1980's. It allows for students to study at universities in the EU member states for set periods of time.

Erasmus students study a wide variety of subjects but most use the program for advancing their language skills with a view to working in the international sphere, and it is advised that anyone interested seeks information on the Erasmus scheme online.

The European Credit Transfer System (ECTS) means that academic credits you earn in your course while abroad will count towards your qualification.

Free movement presents Opportunity.

The Erasmus Program works to provide students with the opportunity to experience a global education.

There are currently over 5,000 higher institutions participating in the Erasmus Program across the 37 countries involved in providing the program to students. 6 million students have been a part of it since it was introduced in 1987.

Erasmus works by providing free movement and education exchange between registered universities and institutions for eligible students.

Erasmus can go for 3 months to a year. It could be a requirement to do Erasmus as part of your course or degree, or you do it to experience another country. It will look amazing on your Resume or CV, assist in shaping you to be more motivated, increase your independence, massively; improve your English (and other!) language skills plus provide an unique angle to get some work experience.

3. Grammar

Les modaux

Un modal est en anglais, non pas un mot qui a une signification, mais un mot qui a une fonction. On retrouve en français des mots qui en eux même ne signifient pas grand-chose mais qui précisent une fonction : ex : « de ».

En anglais, il en va de même avec les modaux, qui se comportent dans la phrase, comme des auxiliaires.

Les modaux en anglais ont certaines particularités :

- Ils sont invariables, ainsi ils sont écrits de la même manière quelle que soit la phrase dans laquelle ils sont utilisés. Ainsi à la troisième personne du singulier, il n'est pas nécessaire de mettre un « s » à la fin du modal. Ex : he can, she may, he should
- Ils sont toujours suivis par une base verbale : une base verbale c'est un verbe à l'infinitif qui n'est pas précédé par « to ». ex : I may call you tomorrow.
- Ils se comportent comme des auxiliaires, ainsi il n'est pas nécessaire d'utiliser les auxiliaires « do », « have » et « be » : ainsi on dira « I may not », mais jamais « I don't may ».

CAN ET COULD

Le modal « CAN » exprime une capacité à faire quelque chose.

Le modal « COULD » permet d'exprimer quelque chose que l'on pourrait faire. On le retrouve parfois comme le passé de « CAN ».

A la forme affirmative

- I can go there : je peux aller là-bas
- I could live in London : je pourrais vivre à Londres
- I could hear everything : je pouvais tout entendre

A la forme négative

« Can not » peut être contracté en « can't ». « Could » donne « could not » et se contracte en « couldn't »

- I can not! : je ne peux pas !
- I can't go there : je ne peux pas aller là-bas
- I couldn't live in Iceland : je ne pourrais pas vivre en Islande

A la forme interrogative

Le but de « CAN » et de « COULD » est de demander une permission.

- Can I go there? : Est-ce que je peux aller là-bas ?
- Could I go there? : Pourrais-je aller là-bas ?

MAY et MIGHT

Les modaux « MAY » et « MIGHT » ont pour fonction d'exprimer une probabilité de voir un évènement se réaliser. Leur sens varie en fonction qu'ils sont utilisés dans une phrase affirmative, négative ou interrogative.

A la forme affirmative

« MAY » et « MIGHT » expriment une probabilité.

- I may / might come : Je vais peut-être venir.

A la forme négative

« MAY » et « MIGHT » ne se contractent pas : ils donnent « MAY NOT » et « MIGHT NOT ». Son sens peut alors être comme à l'affirmatif, d'exprimer une probabilité, ou bien encore exprimer une interdiction.

- I may / might not come : Je ne vais peut-être pas venir.
- You may / might not smoke here sir : Vous ne pouvez pas fumer ici monsieur.

Attention à la forme interrogative

« MAY » et « MIGHT » donnent « May I ... ? » et « Might I... ? » et prend un sens différent : ils servent à demander une permission.

- May / Might I? : Puis-je ?

SHALL et SHOULD

Le modal “SHALL” n'est pratiquement plus utilisé au quotidien mais vous pouvez tomber dessus au hasard des pages d'un livre, c'est une manière d'exprimer un devoir, mais cela peut aussi être utilisé comme un synonyme du futur « WILL ».

« SHOULD » quant à lui a un sens différent : cela sert à exprimer un devoir, dans une intensité moins forte que celle de « MUST » toutefois.

A la forme affirmative cela donne :

- I shall overcome : je vaincrai
- I should go : je devrais partir

A la forme négative

- I shall not be moved : je ne devrais pas être ému
- I shan't move : je ne devrais pas bouger
- I should not / I shouldn't go : je ne devrais pas partir

A la forme interrogative

- Shall I go ? : devrais-je partir ?
- Should I go ? : devrais-je partir ?

WILL et WOULD

Le modal “WILL” a pour but d'exprimer le futur. « WOULD » sert à annoncer un conditionnel.

A la forme affirmative

- I will go : je vais partir
- I would go : je pourrais

A la forme négative

« WILL NOT » peut être contracté en « won't » et « would not » donne « wouldn't »

- I will not go there : je n'irai pas là-bas
- I wouldn't go there : je n'irais pas là-bas.

A la forme interrogative

- Will I need this ? : Aurai-je besoin de cela ?
- Would I lie to you ? : Est-ce que je te mentirais ?

MUST

Le modal “MUST” exprime un devoir, une obligation. Il y a un aspect impératif à « MUST ».

A la forme affirmative

- I must go : je dois partir

A la forme négative

« Must not » peut être contracté en « mustn't »

- I mustn't go : je ne dois pas partir

A la forme interrogative

- Must I leave? : Dois-je partir?
