Lunch time is a time for typical "I am glad to be with my friends" enthusiasm.

Friends make ag projects fun.

Lunch time is perfect for catching up on the news of a friend's day.

SMILE! It's Great to be Back . . .

Summer passes and soon it is time to go back to school. The weather is great. Your tan is perfect, and you have started to miss your friends. We were beginning to look forward to roaming the familiar halls of school. We go out on those last boat rides and go to the last summer parties with thoughts of new jeans and sweaters on our minds. For the people who were bored with summer, the first week is great. But after the first few days reality settled in and everyone was just glad to be back.

Just seeing friends again is the best part of coming back to school.

The halls are a great place to socialize.

Despite crowded rooms, excitement and fun in learning still happen.

Library computers are in constant demand.

Some students actually need to wait their turns to get to their lockers.

Crowded locker bays are one area that students deal with every day.

Large classes mean thirty five people share tables in rooms where twenty five to thirty people would be more comfortable.

Crowds!

Do crowded places bother you? Can students find ways to avoid the lines at lunch, masses in the locker bays, and crowds waiting for help in offices? A bigger student body also creates other problems, such as new students who could get none of the classes they wanted and ended up with a first semester schedule of classes they didn't want. Others complain that five minutes passing time is not enough with crowded halls. But one student hit on a bigger problem, which is, "The large classes keep me from getting the individual attention from teachers during class that I want."

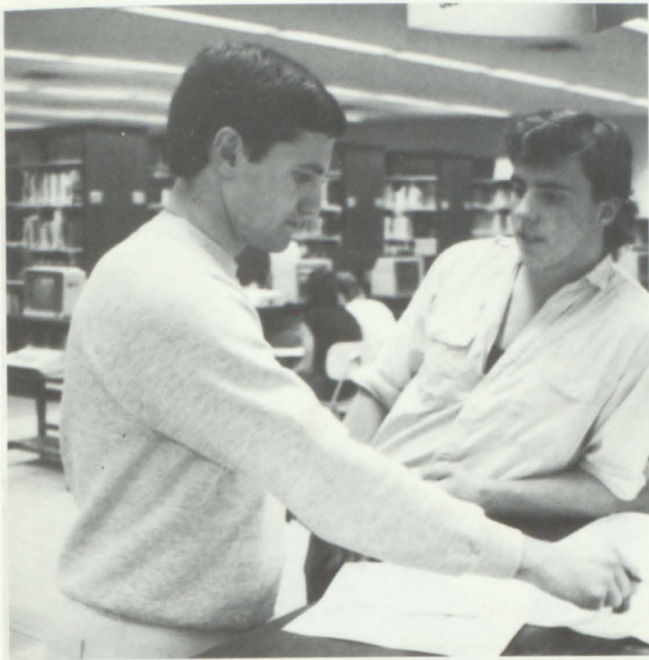

The switchboard is always busy when school is in session.

FFA members work with Mr. Marzolf to beautify the campus.

Karen Bakken is available to duplicate materials so teachers will be ready on the first day of school.

Getting prepared for school means plenty of work ahead of time, but it means teachers have more time to work with kids when the year begins.

Ready . . . Set . . . Go!

Teachers write lesson plan . . . prepare lessons . . . write tests . . . What do Students do to get ready for the new year? "I hit up Target for supplies" or "I run to Dayton's with my mom's charge card" and then "I go in for a new hair cut or perm" were the most common answers. Then I just get ready mentally to face the day.

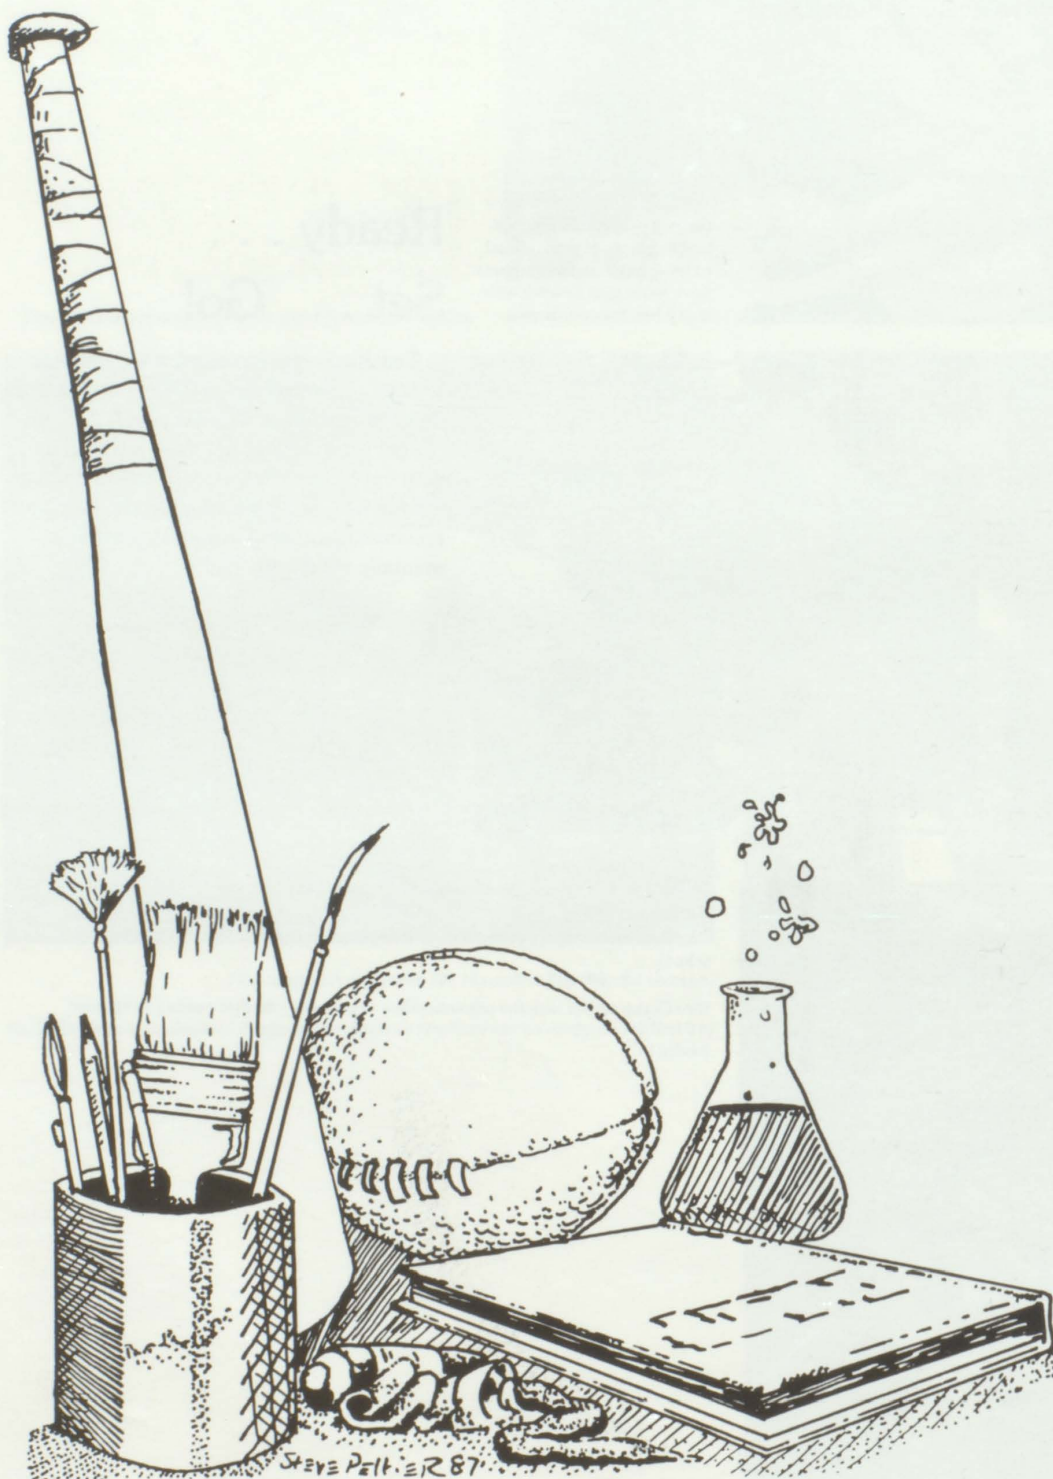

Nancy Ensrud works in the summer, too, to help staff be ready for the opening of school.

Louise Larson handles calls about new registration right through the first weeks of school.

Dee Gorka assists with the administrative secretarial jobs that needed to be done.

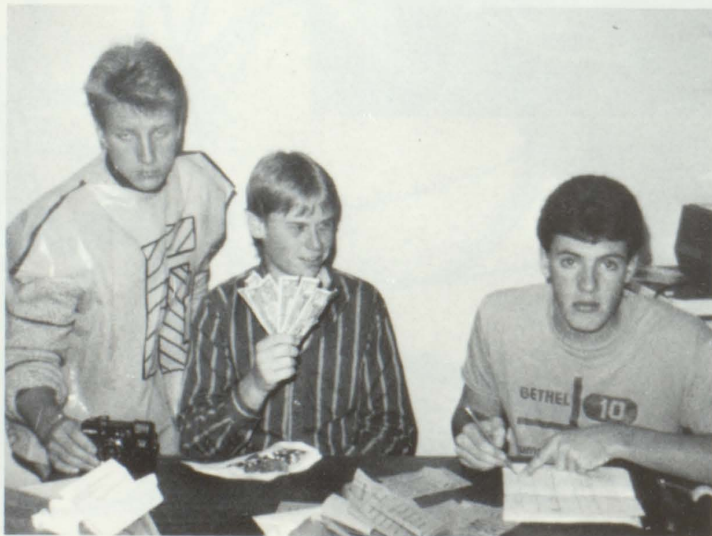

Handwriting Project
Trash To Cash

STUDENT LIFE

Because the bags were hand lettered, each design was unique.

Merchandising Project Turns "Trash" to Cash

School spirit . . . an enigma for the people who have it and cannot understand why others do not. Alan Anderson's marketing class came up with plans to market spirit. Trash bags were turned into pullovers which read "FL #1" on the front and "Trash the Bengals" on the back. The students also distributed and produced a fifteen yard banner for students' names. The concept was to put the names of the entire student body on a banner that read RANGER ZONE. Not only did the students learn the stages of marketing a product, they experienced success and made enough money to cover the cost of the materials.

Collecting the money was easy compared to the time put into the bags and banner.

Brooke Kittelson, one of the project leaders, joins Kim Kauls and Tommy Ramboldt to model the product.

Mr. Reynolds gave support to the innovative class project.

Do You Really Study?

Do you spend twenty minutes studying each subject each night? Students at FL have a broad definition of studying. Some say, "I get the basics done before I leave school so I don't have to carry any books home. I guess that means I don't study." On the other extreme is the girl who works to get the basic assignments done in school, yet carries all her books home every night to review. Her reason? "I don't cram before tests, so I am always ready." From teachers' points of view, several noted that there is more to school than just finishing assigned work. Study means going beyond the assignment and checking yourself for understanding.

One of the drawbacks of studying together is getting off track and talking.

It is easier to keep up grades if your friends use time to study too.

For some, the library can be a good place to take a break after school.

For Kris Ciesilski, math and physics come easy, so he uses time to get ready to tutor.

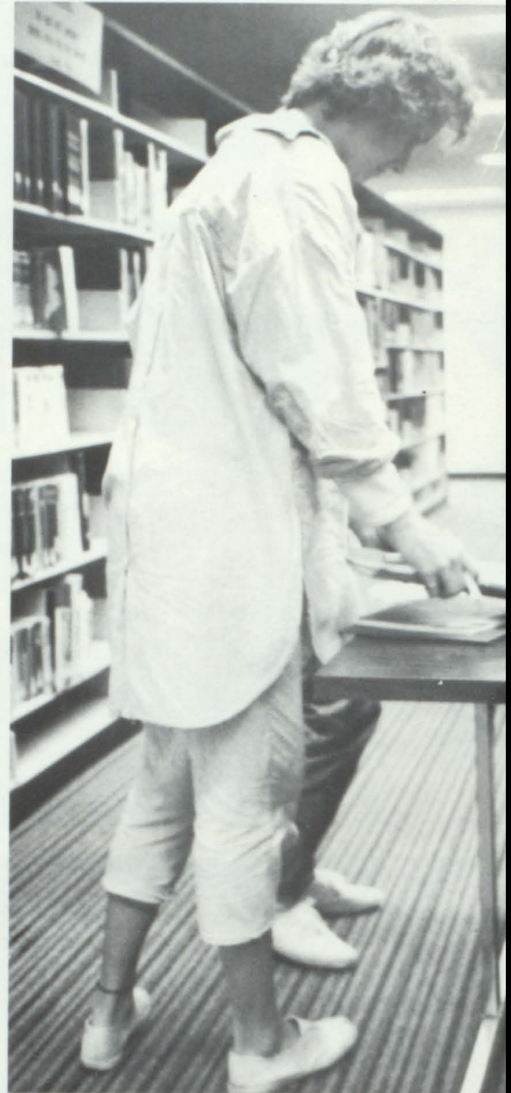

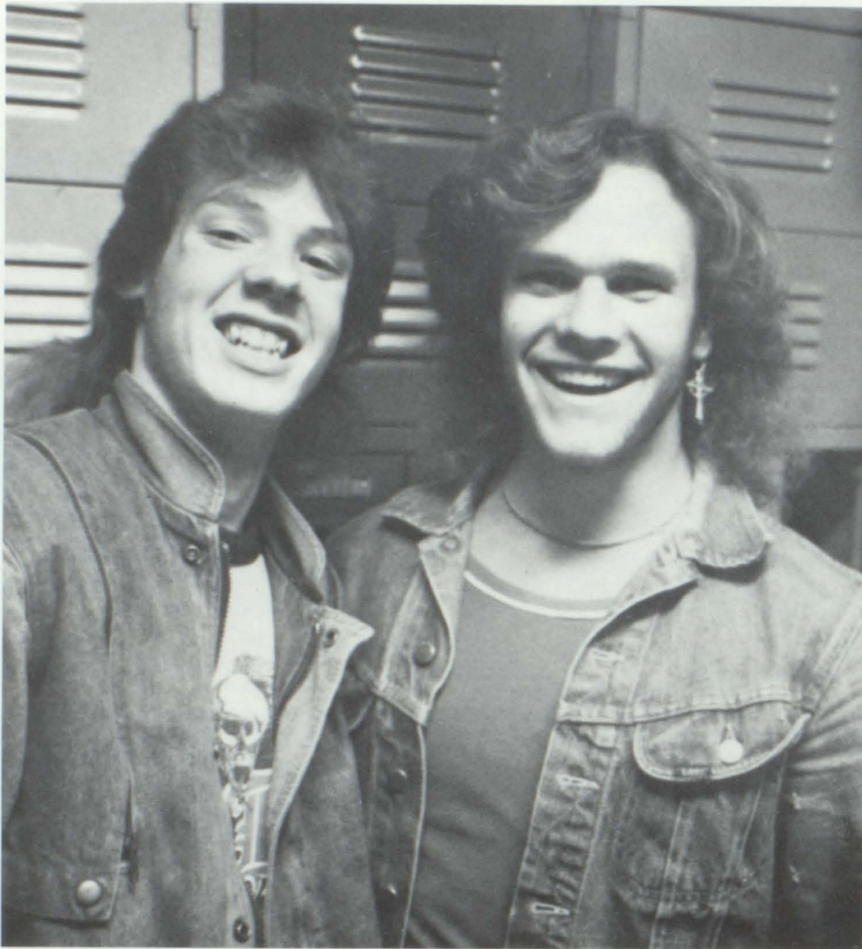

Impromptu study sessions even happen in locker bays.

John Ostrand uses time after school to study.

Short pants, long shirts, no socks, and white sneakers continue to be popular.

Many students are choosing jean jackets.

Ponytails make a big comeback with banana clips.

There is no one "right" answer about style. Students dress for comfort and personal taste.

Clothes Don't Really Make the Person

Guess . . . Forenza . . . Coca Cola . . . Esprit . . . 501's . . . where would these companies be without fads and teen money? Not all students need labels, but those who like the special styles with expensive labels continue to buy them. Fortunately, the eclectic look is popular and everyone could just do whatever they wished.

There are students who choose their clothes to make a fashion statement. Others just grab whatever is first in their closets.

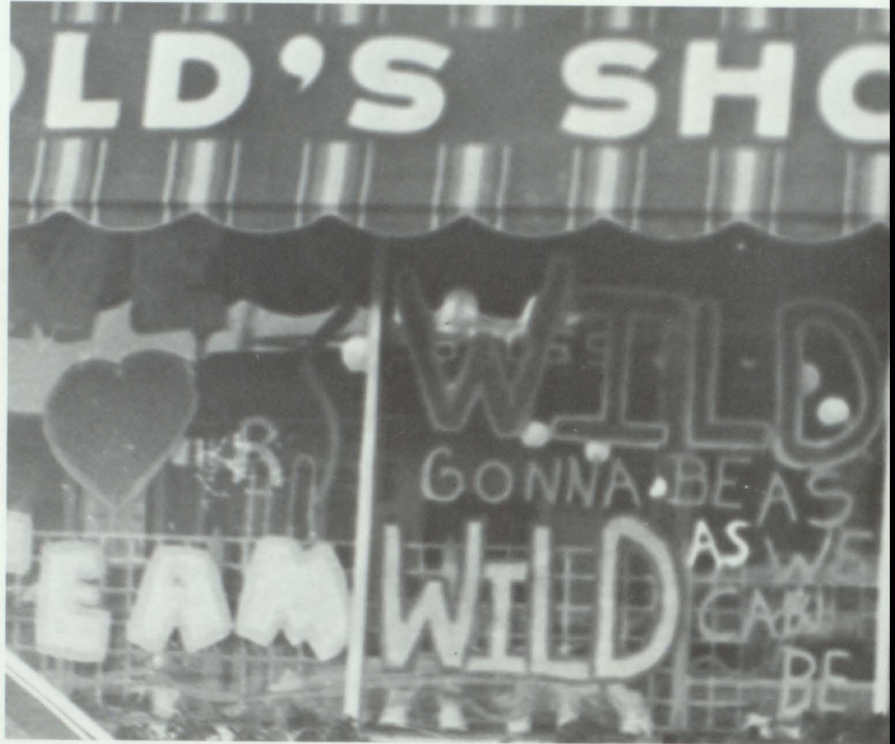

Forest Lake businesses cooperate by allowing windows to be painted

Who Does These Jobs?

"I don't think kids realize or appreciate the little things, like having a bus ride to school, the cooks, janitors, field trips, or even the other students, like tutors." The student who believes this also said, "We are lucky to have all these things." There are a lot of things we just took for granted during the school year. Students go on taking them for granted until they are gone for some reason, then the complaining started.

Craig Martin works as an office attendant, which means he gives up a study hall to help with errands.

Keeping track of attendance is only one job busy secretaries perform.

Cheryl Sutton helps in the office by running errands and labeling envelopes for progress reports.

Without a school nurse, secretaries in the assistant principal's office must hear and deal with health concerns.

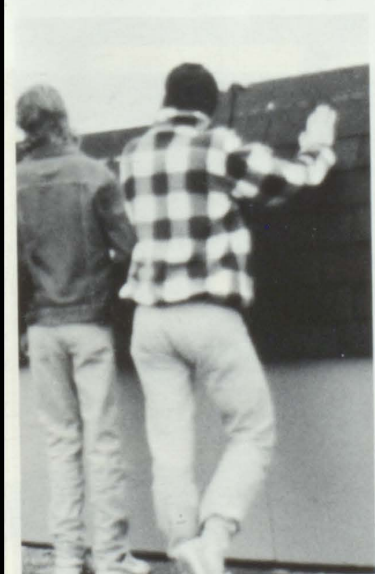

Students work together to complete the stages. First, the individual parts are assembled. A floor is constructed. The shaped roof is cut, glued, and covered with plywood. The pieces are glued, bolted, nailed, etc. so the end walls can be added. Doors are cut, the roof is shingled, and the final shed is painted. The last step is loading it on a wagon and delivering it to a happy customer.

Students Build Sheds in Class

Building a storage shed is a practical skill, and real life skills are the goal of Tom Pogreba's carpentry class. Putting together a major project which involves planning, team work, and application of carpentry skills was the objective that led to the creation of the shed. As one student puts it, "The shed is a lot more meaningful to me than building birdhouses."

Students Say Jobs Needed

"Why do students work?" Some enjoy it and have nothing better to do. Others save money for college. And others pay for all their own expenses and need the job to exist. Many students fit into all these categories at various times. For students who have a lot of homework or have a lot of socializing to do, there was no time to work. For the ones who tried to do everything, something usually suffered. That something was usually time to sleep. Work had benefits, like money and responsibility, but many quit jobs because they got tired of saying "Sorry, I can't." Or having to find someone to work for them got to be a drag. Many parents want their kids to work to pay for expenses. Other parents say school is a full-time job and that is enough.

Jenny Flanagan works in a pet shop, a good place for an animal lover.

Christine Wilson works fulltime to save for future needs.

Dan Moravec takes a rest from the hectic pace of grocery bagging and stocking shelves.

Dave Drolson's job at Lite Reading not only pays for his extras, but gives him a chance to keep up on his baseball card collecting.

Kari Trudeau's work in a photo shop gives her valuable work skills.

SENIORS

Parade Adds to Seniors' Memories

Looking back, seniors will remember selected details about their sophomore and junior years. Ten years from now, they will remember highlights of school. Friends' faces will not all be familiar anymore, and they may not remember the extra responsibility they felt as seniors. Seniors made big decisions and dealt with the pressure of meeting graduation requirements. "My senior year has been the most exciting and fun year of my life," exclaimed Shelly Howe. By June all felt that the year had flown by and there was so little time to put all the pieces together for the rest of their lives.

Mary Peterson coordinates appointments in the career resource center.

Just having fun is a big part of ninth grade and many junior high students do not even think about the future.

Ione Hanson arranges meetings with counselors and helps students plan schedules which meet future needs.

Using the computer in the Career Resource Center is a popular senior activity.

Planning for The Future

Where is the real world? Am I ready to go off on my own and face challenges, not to mention leaving my friends and finding new ones? These questions were asked many times, second only to "What are you going to do after graduation?" Classes were arranged to prepare for the future, and seniors just hoped that they made good choices. In many ways, graduation meant getting ready for a "Real World" that meant more than running to school off to work, and home to bed. After thirteen years the future was a lot closer than some cared to imagine.

Seniors can get passes out of classes to check out programs and options for their futures.

Rules, Rules More Rules

Could we live in anarchy? Probably not, but students seem to always find rules they would change if they were in charge. "One thing I would change is to have an open campus." Many students said this and mentioned that it seems to work at other schools. Other changes were not so big, like adding a line where students could just buy a salad. Bolder students all demand the right to drink pop at lunch. "We need fresh air once in a while," so one girl suggested that students earn the right to leave campus. Most seniors wanted to get a legal skip day, but others added that it would not be fun if it were legal.

Powderpuff football has been eliminated, so seniors act out the roles of battered juniors if such a game was played.

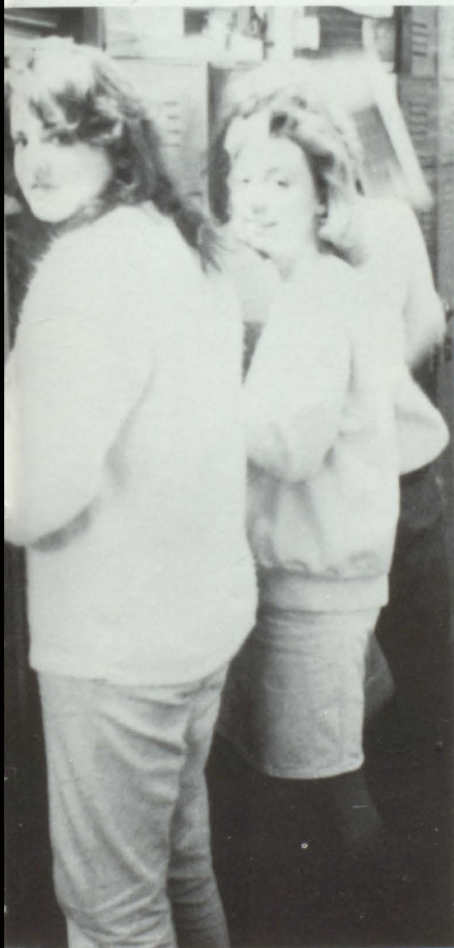

Safety goggles are kept close at hand in shop and science classes to meet safety requirements.

Heading out of school without a pass, especially on senior skip day, earns plenty of detention.

Parking stickers are required and all students must park in back.

Passes to lockers are few and far between because of the high rate of break-ins and theft.

Every student is required to buy his or her own lunch and no one is allowed to share a tray.

Srs. Feel Pressure

Pressure, decisions, mixed emotions, fun . . . these are all used to describe a senior year. Life seems easy at the beginning of the year. Tension builds. College fair announcements begin. Letters from schools were flooding the mail. Decisions needed to be made. Enlist? College? Work? Class motto and flowers were chosen. If you dream it, live it became the motto for "87" and a red rose was chosen as the symbol of memories for the class. Spring came and the class looked forward to marching together in black and white robes to receive diplomas. The year finished with graduation parties to add to memories.

Class time to finish assignments helps busy seniors keep up.

Korey Finnes and Dave Drolson clown around while getting ready to take pictures for the yearbook.

Seniors can let down, have a little fun, and enjoy their last year.

Sheila Pletan spends extra time after school in math to catch up after hectic homecoming activities.

If You Dream It, Live It

Will I go to college? Can I afford to go to prom? Will there be a job or financial aid for me? Should I take the ACT or the SAT? These questions affect the dreams of seniors. The answers also made the year a memorable one. They remembered their last homecoming. Spring turned thoughts to senior week and seniors began dreaming about commencement and the all-night party. The year was one where seniors could turn dreams to action.

Ranger Royalty Reign

Ranger royalty Monica Lindell and Craig Bennet reigned at the bungled Bengal attack at the Homecoming football game where the Ranger gridders caged the Bengals. Marking the first homecoming victory in six years with cheers, the crowd moved into the gym for a back to the '50's dance.

1. Homecoming kings grin happily when the results are out, compared to the screams and squeals of the girls. 2. Tuxedos and formals add a formal touch to homecoming, such as when Craig Martin lights the official bonfire. 3. CANDIDATES: Chris Kauls, Dan King, Jeff Julkowski, Craig Bennet, Craig Martin, Mark Stacey, Jill Wallraff, Sheila Pletan, Dianna Valenty, Monica Lindell, Karen Johnson, Brenda Schwab. 4. 1985 royalty Tom Hallberg and Amy Gross pose as they prepare to pass on their crowns. 5. Each girl knows she might be queen; Monica Lindell is still surprised. 6. Student council members and candidates stand around waiting for the clock to signal the start of the event. 7. Riding in the parade is one of the official duties of the royalty. 8. Leaving and facing the crowd are the first job of the new king and queen as they prepare to go to the bonfire. 9. Mark Stacey and Sheila Pletan are part of the procession of royalty which rode in fancy cars.

Bengals Bungled!

The Ranger jungle proved to be a perfect place for the Blaine Bengals to bungle. Students spent the week getting ready for the game. Seniors will remember the game and festivities of 1986 for the new ideas. People dressed in inside out clothes. Candidates served dinner after a day of flashback dressing. As usual anything goes day brought lots of surprises. Jungle outfits moved in the hall Thursday, and school colors dominated the classes Friday. Shortened classes Friday got people in the mood for the pepfest, parade and game. The week ended with rockers dancing to the music of the 50's in the gym.

Juniors Get Routine

Juniors in schools across Minnesota found themselves doing mainly the same things. But life can be more than just dull routine if juniors put some thought into their schedules. Some go tanning before school in the morning. Others meet weekly for breakfast clubs. Many juniors are anxious and working hard to letter in a sport or activity. A lot of juniors like the feeling of being "just in between" and enjoy each day.

Administration and Board Set Policy

Somebody needs to take charge. Our school is run by a school board, district office administrators, and the high school administration. So why did we bother to give up all this time? Why graduate? "My Mom makes me." "I go to school so I can get some money." "To see all my friends." "High school prepares us for college." "It's a law." "School is FUN!" These are some of the reasons that students at FLHS give for going to high school. Although the reasons vary from person to person, most agree that the benefits of a high school education make it well worth it. School helps you prepare and make important decisions that will effect the rest of your life. The discipline, knowledge and experience gained from classes, homework, and other school related activities is something that you can get no other place. High school helps students develop into educated adults and most teenagers agree that this is the best three years that they have had so far!

Art Students Find New Outlets

When the arts were mentioned, most students thought of painting, sculpture or fibers classes. At FL students also could experience other arts as well. For example, the English department offered theatre courses. Musically talented students could perform in one of the bands or sing in one of the choirs. Creative outlets were there for the student who could fit the courses into their schedules.

Job Skills Emphasized in Many Courses

When the five minute bell rings out the start of school, most students are rushing from their lockers into classes where they will be taking notes or reading. But there is a group of students who trade their pens and pencils for signs of a trade. Typing students arrive with typing paper, ready to type away the hour. Safety glasses, carpenter's aprons, and tool boxes are the norm for others. Trade and industry students worked on cars and found solutions to various auto problems. Machinery, computers, hot metals projects, electronics puzzles, and more challenged students with real world working issues.

Languages Emphasize Culture

Regardless of the language spoken, cultures and people became the focus of language classes. English teachers used the language to teach basic writing skills, as well as zero in on humans through the themes and ideas found in literature. French and Spanish students conjugated foreign verbs, but also sample foreign cultures through food and conversation. Reading students honed their reading skills and learned about people's idiosyncrasies from their literature.

Social Studies Varied

Man is a social animal. We need other people to function. Social studies courses made these statements come alive in courses like American and World History. Marriage and the family students looked ahead to the future and brainstormed about potential problems. Psychology and contemporary problems classes touched on issues which seniors need to confront.

Labs Allow for Active Participation

After several hours of sitting in a desk, some students prefer to get into a classroom where there is little time for sitting. Students could be found heading off to the developmental learning center or into an elementary school classroom to observe. Other home ec. students were cooking in labs or running preschool classes in the afternoon. Sewers could be seen cutting and completing masterpieces.

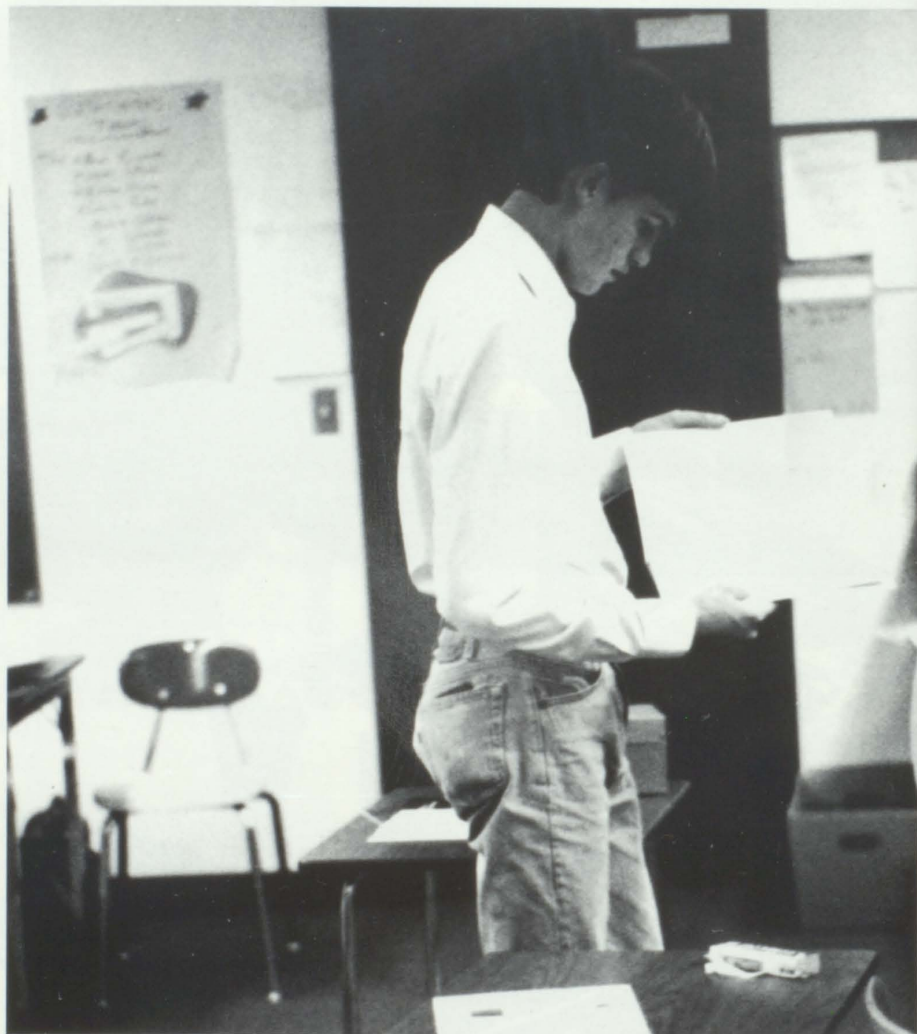

Down in the gym, basketballs, volleyballs, tennis rackets, floor hockey sticks, etc., were hauled out for daily workouts. The mezz was active with weight trainers and gymnasts and wrestlers. Units changed and outdoor education classes could be found throughout the community practicing their skills, too.

Co-Curricular Courses Demand Time

Co-curricular courses contained students who were willing to give up time outside the regular classroom to practice the skills taught in the courses. Agriculture students participated in leadership classes, traveled to the national convention, and entered many contests. Breeze and Forester staffs could take the classes, but were found camping out at late hours to meet deadlines. Debate students gave up weekends to compete. Occupational relations students left school at noon to head into town for their jobs. For them the work was not only a paycheck, but also a credit.

Thinking Skills Emphasized in Technical Classes

One area of the school where students could be sure to use high level thinking skills was in the math and science wing. With courses required for graduation, the teachers worked to provide classes which challenged all levels of students. Lectures, loaded chalk boards and plenty of homework kept math and science students writing.

Office Staff Ready With Answers

If students had questions, they made their way to the offices where questions were answered with expediency. Attendance office staff worked mainly with tardies, absences, and health questions. The principals' secretaries were also ready to pass information on to principals if needed. Setting appointments and answering phones kept these ladies on their toes.

Special Areas Provide Expert Help

Staff have been hired to attend to the special needs of students. Experts trained in specific areas are available for a variety of purposes. A librarian and two aides give help in the library, while a media specialist and aides attend to the duplicating and audio visual areas.

Students in need of special program help will be serviced through the special education tracks at the high school. Not only do they assist with extra instruction, aides and tutors are available for assistance as needed.

To top it all off, a clean and attractive building is provided through the efforts of the custodial staff headed by Bud Houfer. Visitors to the building notice how clean and well kept the grounds and inside of the building are.

Paul Karlson replaced Dick Moskop as librarian.

Cultural Diversity Encouraged

Food service employees helped students promote foreign language week by serving foreign pastries in the mornings before school. During homecoming week, foods were given various names also. The cooperative nature of the staff led by Shirley Erickson is a positive trait of the school's food service staff.

Student suggestions are always welcome, as is evidenced in the variety of foods available. For example, the traditional items included hamburgers, turkey and gravy, and hot dogs. But students could also go through the line and choose pancakes, burritos, many Italian favorites, and salad bar selections. Soup also continued to be available, but only when served by a cook.

Lunch hour courtesies like a snack bar were also appreciated, especially the ice cream items. For many, lunch was taken for granted, but the highlight of students' days were the delicacies offered at seven thirty in the morning, like fresh caramel rolls and English muffins with eggs and ham.

Rose Parade Is New Year's Success

Rosebowl Fever hit Forest Lake almost a year before the band marched down the streets of Pasadena. Parents joined together out of pride and support for their kids and formed the Band Aids. Fundraisers were organized to bring in the money needed to make ends meet. Community folks put up money to shop at two giant garage sales, eat pizzas, chomp on candy bars, chow down on spaghetti, and display Rosebowl pins proudly.

But the hard work did not end with money matters. Band members and directors put in long hours of marching, counting, and memorizing routines so that Minnesota could watch its representative school perform well.

Not only did the group perform extremely well, they also enjoyed the California sun and sights to the max. Jets routed to California loaded down with kids, chaperones, instruments and proud fans. Jets returned to Minnesota with prouder fans, tired band members, souvenirs, and packed cameras full of memories.

Fifty Years Celebrated

To celebrate as a national organization, FL FFA added special activities to the week of February 21 to 28. By making the school and community more aware of what the FFA is and does they hoped to inspire respect for the largest student organization in the country.

The week included teacher appreciation activities, as well as opportunities for teachers to teach agriculture-centered lessons for a day. Community announcements on WLKX, morning announcements at school and a cheese show spread the celebration of the celebration of 75 national FFA years.

Beginning with the celebration of fifty years as an organization in Forest Lake, the FFA members looked forward to a special year. Success and participation were key parts to the year. Contests afforded the students the chance to put their skills in competition. Members went on to the state contest in Public speaking, management, and production contests. For the second year in a row members of the FL group won the grand championship for their horticulture booth at the state fair.

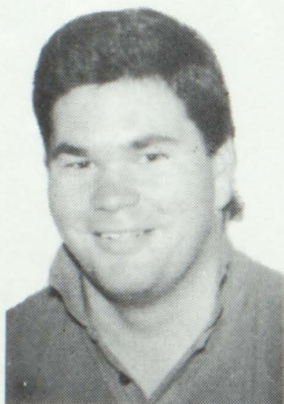

Members also had a chance to attend invitational basketball, softball, and volleyball tournaments with other chapters. The year closed with the annual banquet in which members were recognized for their efforts during the year.

The FFA National Convention offers many opportunities for participants to enjoy the sights.

SPRING

Spring picks up on winter's upbeat mood

Trying To Win Is Everything

You have read where coaches have been quoted as saying, "Winning isn't everything; it's the only thing." I don't believe that this is true. I do believe that trying to win is everything. I've seen many outstanding winners in professional football that never played in a Super Bowl or won their Conference. One of our favorite slogans is, "A winner never stops trying."

Net Gold for FL

The Minnesota State Science Olympiad is three years old and has grown from a Twin City area program involving 14 schools to a statewide competition with three regions and 45 teams. On February 7, Forest Lake was pleased to host the North Region tournament, and placed third among fifteen teams and advancing to the state tournament. Individual medalists were as follows:

First Place — Mike Keyes, Tim Johann (Trajectory)

Second Place — Tim Johann, Mike Keyes, Cary Holter, Jim Sarne (Science Bowl)

Second Place — Tim Johann, Mike Keyes (Qualitative Analysis)

Third Place — Jim Campbell, Jim Sarne (Computer Programming)

Rural schools such as Sebeka, and Osakis-Villard competed with urban public and private schools such as White Bear Lake and Duluth Cathedral. First place was awarded to Totino Grace and second place to Anoka. Rena Benedict, tournament director was assisted by instructors Jack Henderson and Jill Jury in organizing and running the successful tournament. Visiting coaches expressed many compliments about the science facilities available at Forest Lake High School.

In state competition, held February 28 at the College of St. Thomas, Forest Lake placed 11th among 30 teams. Individual medalists were as follows:

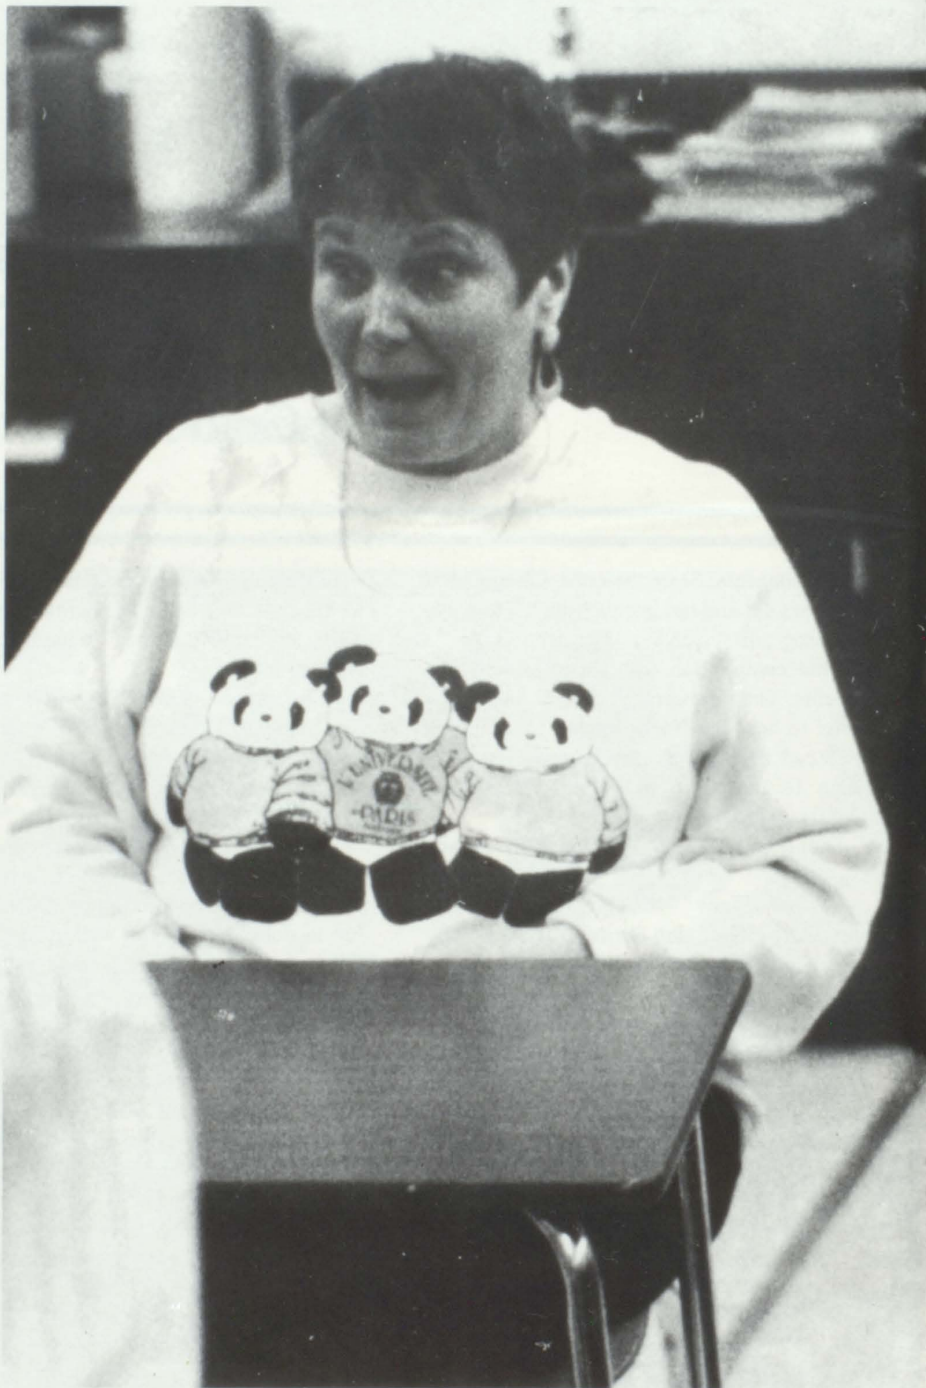

Third place — Mike Keyes (Map Reading), Tim Johann, Brian Blazevec (Paper Airplane) Totino Grace placed first and will advance to the National Olympiad tournament to be held at Ohio State University in May.

The goal of the Science Olympiad program is to increase participation in science at all levels of ability by promoting cooperation and fun in doing science, as well as striving for individual excellence. The events are extensions of the regular curriculum — a chemistry titration experiment was repeated as a race for speed and accuracy. All physics students applied the principles of projective motion to design catapults out of straws, rubber bands, and tongue depressors; the science team extended the design to build a full-scale catapult capable of launching softballs a distance of 15 meters. Science Olympiad events can be used to motivate all science students within the curriculum, and they provide an outlet of further exploration for students whose interests are science-centered. The Science Olympiad stresses that the process of exploration, research, and design is "winning," and that awards a bonus.

Students Proud.

Students at FLHS have a lot to be proud about. Programs and classes exist to allow kids a chance to excel. Most students have a sense of "team spirit" and work to make school a great experience.

1. Mr. Buys shows his prize from FFA week. 2. Home economics is a place for creative seamstresses to excel. 3. Mrs. Julkowski reacts to a lesson on parents' day. 4. Chaime Olson gets involved in English. 5. Working together fosters cooperation in science.

Prom '86 was a new experience for the class of '87.

Short sleeves, bare feet in loafers are two indications that school will soon be out.

And where do the garters end up when the dresses get packed away?

Baccalaureate and graduation, as well as the honor student ceremony are the only places the caps and gowns are worn.

Senioritis Hits Hard in Spring

By the time May arrives, Seniors have set aside an illegal skip day to enjoy the sun, and water of "some" lake or river.

When prom draws to a close, the "perfect" ladies are even clowning around in two hundred dollar dresses!

The hardest part of the year's end is finishing all the projects to graduate on time.

By the time April and May arrived, students found themselves making choices which activities to attend. The biggest draw was Prom, second to the senior banquet and the National Honor Society Induction Ceremony. Not only did spring mean extra activities, it also meant finding ways to finance the spring expenses.

Teachers use break to spend extra time with their children.

Coaches use break to work with teams, since other schools are still in session.

Getting a car fixed up takes long hours, just what break provides.

What is Mr. Pogreba thinking about? He's remembering his Christmas trip to Hawaii. During March break, he works on the farm.

Speech teams in our area didn't all get the same vacation. Ms. Sparling gets caught up on team details.

March Break Provides Rest

Students and parents plan trips to use the March break for rest and respite. Families used time to catch up on activities which cannot be accomplished during the regular week, except for the people whose school activities continued as well.

Skiers made final trips to favorite spots. Those with money end up in Colorado or Michigan.

Some students used break to rest and work because they went to the Rose Bowl at Christmas.

Kim Kauls won first place at the State cross country meet.

Music Extravaganza Returns FL to Renaissance

Minnesota is known as an art education leader. Forest Lake has demonstrated the abilities of art students at the state level. Six students exhibited their work at a state exhibit of student prize winners. They were: Chris Costello, Vicki Kopp, Steve Peltier (twice), Wendy Bontjes, Nikki Marx, and Pam Reinhardt.

The end of each school year brings changes and surprises, as was the case at FL. Moving the honors assembly to an evening program meant that students no longer enjoyed a three hour respite from classes during the last week. It also meant that the chance for the entire student body to congregate a play pranks, some not too harmless, was taken away. Increased supervision of hall, including the addition of parent volunteers, helped keep things quiet and set the tone for final exams.

Who are the people who listen to your problems? Who works so hard to try to get a smile out of you? Friends are the people who share our sorrows and joys. They are the ones who laugh or cry with you.

Just imagine how boring life without friends would be. No one to help fix the car, talk to on the phone, or to shop with. And most important, no one to talk to in school. Real friends share the good and the bad times, as well as really telling you what is on their minds. And their good advice is free.

School is the place where friendships naturally begin. Luckily, the end of our years at FL does not mean the friendships end. All our good friends from school help up bridge the transition into our future. We only get a chance to go through school once, so thank a friend for being there as part of your school memories.
