

At Sweeny ISD, it is important to teachers and administrators that all parents are involved in the education of their children. Children learn better and are more successful when their parents are actively involved in their work at school. This is true for all students, but especially for the parents of students who are learning to read, write and speak the English language. You may ask, “How can I get involved and support my child’s learning?” Here are some ways:

- Attend PTA (Parent/Teacher Association) meetings at school.
- Call and schedule a conference with your child’s teachers.
- Attend LPAC meetings where your child’s involvement with the ESL (English as a Second Language) program is discussed.
- Seek ways to volunteer or help out with your child’s classroom.
- Ask about after-school or summer programs that might be available to help your child with learning.
- Have your child read to you in the evenings at home and during the summer.
- Call and schedule a conference with the counselor and ESL Coordinator to discuss your child’s grades and scores on the TELPAS, STAAR, benchmarks, or other standardized tests.
- Don’t be afraid to ask questions if you don’t know or understand something! We want to help, so let us know when you need it.
