James Perin

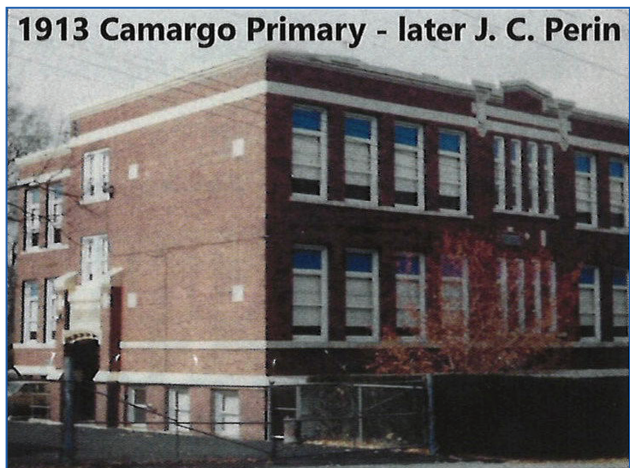

James Perin was a Madeira High School Class of 1930 graduate who went on to become a Civil Engineer. As a husband, father, and Madeira resident he became involved in the community which led to him being elected to the Madeira City School Board of Education. Between 1941 and 1973 he served as a member, clerk, then president of the board. He was responsible for developing and implementing board policies which made it possible for the board to reach solutions to many problems faced during the district's period of major growth. Mr. Perin retired from the board after serving for 32 years.

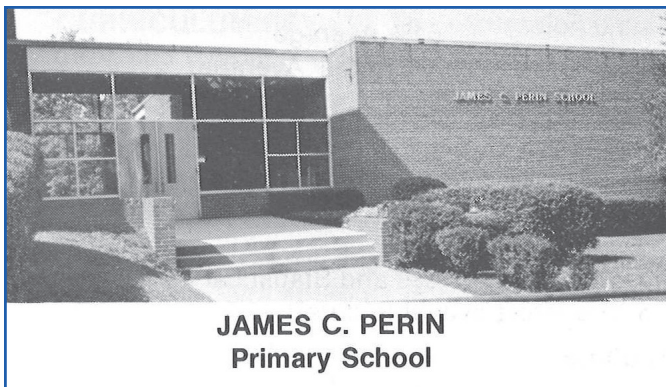

In 1974 Camargo Primary School was renamed the James C. Perin School in honor of his decades of commitment to the district. Madeira High School's James C. Perin Media Center was dedicated on October 20, 1997.

In January 2015, Perin Media Center became Perin Learning Commons - a first-rate, 21st Century facility featuring high efficiency geothermal technology.

Mr. Perin was also inducted into the first MHS Hall of Fame class in 1991.
