

There's nothing so special in this world as when the autumn wind blows in, and the leaves turn that special shade of brown, and on a cool Friday night the darkness is replaced by the glow of stadium lights, and the sound of the marching band intrudes upon the silence of a town who's attentions are focused on the triumphs of a team of local heroes. This magical time when battles are fought on gridirons across America is when I'm reminded of the gift of high school football on Friday nights.
