Parents May Restrict Release of Information

Federal law permits schools to release the following information about students: Name, address phone number, date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in sports and activities, weight and height of athletes, date of attendance, diplomas, awards received and last school attended. However, parents have the right to request such information not be released. To do this, parents must complete this form and return it to their child's school. This requires schools to withhold all information about a student unless written consent of a parent or guardian is issued.

Restriction of Information Form

If you wish to restrict information about your child, submit this form to your child's school principal.

To: Principal,

I DO NOT wish "Directory Information" as defined in the Yakima School District's policy 3600 and 3605 to be released about my child without my prior written consent. I understand this will exclude my child's name from parent organization mailing lists, school annual and newspaper, commencement programs, publication of honor rolls and other information about public schools students in the media.
