 - Prep your child for changes in routine.
 - Structure Up Play and Summer Activities to Build Independence.
 - Use visual supports (i.e. calendars, timers, communication supports, and video/visual social stories) to ease transitions from preferred to non-preferred activities. Visual supports are effective for activity choice boards and chore charts. Choice boards are a great way to provide options for your child.
 - Find special needs friendly summer activities
 - CAMP Camp
 - Morgan's Wonderland
 - Sensory-friendly movies
 - Day camps
 - If traveling, Google has images that can be printed onto a document so your child will have visuals to provide some comfort. You can also take a travel bag and pack essentials for: something soothing, something sensory, and something structured (visual supports). Include an extra reinforcer for helping with transition when it's time to leave a location.
 - Play time is important. Make time for structured play.
 - Many resources can be found online: wall calendars, social stories, chore charts, visual supports, etc.
- ❖ Review of minutes from last meeting
- ❖ Meeting adjourned at 12:30 PM
