

Why Aquinas Institute?

Aquinas Institute of Theology is a Catholic, Dominican-sponsored graduate school of theology with an ecumenical outlook. The 800-year-old intellectual tradition of the Order of Preachers and the legacy of our patron, St. Thomas Aquinas, shapes our theological orientation.

It is not an accident that the only MAPS degree specializing in CGS in the world finds its home at Aquinas Institute. There is a special connection between Dominican spirituality and the spirituality of CGS just as there is a special connection between the CGS movement and our institution. Sofia Cavalletti studied with Dominican theologian, Fr. Dalmazio Mongillo, OP for many years at the Pontifical University of St. Thomas Aquinas in Rome. Like St. Thomas, Cavalletti came to understand that friendship with God is the goal of human life and that the pursuit of an ever-deepening friendship with God is best done in the context of friendship with others.

At Aquinas Institute, students are invited into the kind of study, dialogue, and—yes—friendship that Sofia and Fr. Dalmazio shared. Women and men, scholars and practitioners, young and old, all find a place at the table, learning from one another. Since 2005, Aquinas Institute has worked in collaboration with the U.S. national association of CGS to provide a rigorous intellectual and spiritual foundation to more fully support catechists in their ministries.

“Catechesis is to let ourselves be loved and saved. It is to nurture the desire of the Shepherd to remain in his love, to rediscover the conditions and the essential needs of life lived in communion, and to support each other in seeking the way to actualize it.”

Master of Arts in Pastoral Studies – Catechesis of the Good Shepherd

How Might the Shepherd be Calling You?

Through CGS formation, you meet God through the eyes of a child and your own eyes witness the gifts children bring our Church. You dedicate much time and energy making CGS available to children — building materials, seeking out space, writing album pages. But just as the children surface new questions the longer they are in the atrium, perhaps you find yourself asking some new questions as well:

- Where did this amazing work originate? Who were the theologians that most impacted Sofia Cavalletti and Gianna Gobbi in the development of the Catechesis of the Good Shepherd?
- How do we continue to make the spirituality of children discovered in CGS more accessible to the Church as a whole?
- How am I being called to explore this work more deeply and offer myself in greater service to the CGS movement?

The Master of Arts in Pastoral Studies with a specialization in Catechesis of the Good Shepherd (MAPS-CGS) program at Aquinas Institute is the only degree of its kind in the world. Students in the program form a cohort learning community, walking together through ten academic courses interwoven with ongoing spiritual formation. They meet other catechists from around the country. They form deeper networks of friendship. They begin to answer the questions tugging at their hearts.

Just as Cavalletti’s background as a scholar made it possible for her to talk about God with children in a way that intrigued and enthused them, the scholarly formation provided through the MAPS-CGS program creates a foundation for present-day catechists inviting children into relationship with God.

Students who hold the MAPS-CGS degree possess greater theological, scriptural, and liturgical expertise for the ministry aof CGS. Many graduates go on to assume leadership roles within the CGS community as association staff, board members, and formation leaders. Others pursue their vocations as directors of religious education, pastoral associates, full-time catechists, diocesan staff, consultants, and faculty.

Program Format

The Master of Arts in Pastoral Studies with a specialization in Catechesis of the Good Shepherd is a 48 credit-hour program offered via an online-hybrid model. The program can be completed in three-and-a-half years, during which students follow a set schedule of classes as a learning community, completing the coursework online and traveling to St. Louis seven times for on campus intensives.
