Rising 9th graders

Navigating the high school transition can be tough, but students can use the summer to lay the right foundation and:

- close academic learning gaps
- learn to stay organized and manage their time
- develop stress management skills

Rising 10th graders

10th grade is important as only grades through the end of junior year will appear on a student's transcript at the time of college application. Use this summer to:

- prepare for advanced coursework
- close academic learning gaps
- get familiar with high-stakes testing format and timelines

Rising 11th graders

This is the last academic year that is fully reflected in the GPA that appears on a student's academic transcript. Over the summer:

- close academic learning gaps
- prep for the PSAT/NMSQT or SAT/ACT

Rising 12th graders

Senior year's priority is managing the college application process while putting the best possible test score forward. Use the summer months for:
