THE SEVEN AGES OF A SUMMIT GIRL

All our school's a stage,
And all the girlish students merely players.
They have their exits and their entrances,
And one girl in her time plays many parts,
Her acts being seven stages. First the five year old,
Playing and resting in the nursery school,
And then the noisy school-girl, with her satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. Then the junior high,
Roaring like a furnace, or with a woeful story
Tormenting all her teachers. Then the freshman,
Full of strange loves and treated like a dog,
Jealous of friendships, lively and warm in spirit,
Seeking a grown-up reputation
Even in the high school's eyes. And then the senior,
In fair green jacket, with great knowledge stuffed,
With look severe and clothes of latest cut,
Full of Shakespeare and modern politics;
And so she runs our school. The sixth age shifts
Into the sad but happy graduate,
With happiness on face and tear in eye,
Her lovely dress, well made, almost too white
For this great day. Then the last scene of all
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is college girl's return, mere looker on,
Sans books, sans blouse, sans socks, sans everything.
