Actual care and control of the child definition:

* In determining whether a person other than a parent has "actual care and control of the child," the district may consider factors including, but not limited to, the following:

- a. The student's age including whether the student has reached the age of majority.
- b. Whether the student is emancipated.
- c. The degree to which the student's parents have relinquished care and control of the child, both legally and practically.
- d. The extent to which the non-parent adult resident has historically made decisions regarding the health, education and welfare of the child.
- e. The sources and amount of financial support for the child's care.
- f. Whether a parent or a person who has been granted legal custody of the child appeared at the residency hearing to testify regarding "actual care and custody of the child."

* Whether a person contributes the major portion of the cost of supporting a child may be proven by presenting verifiable documentation of the total amount expended for supporting such child and verifiable documentation of the actual amount of support provided by the adult resident of the district who claims to provide the major portion of such support. The district may also consider whether a person has claimed, or is qualified to claim such child as dependent for tax purposes during the period of enrollment.

* Additionally, the person claiming to provide the major portion of the cost of supporting the child must provide a sworn statement (parent consent statement) from the child's parent, guardian or legal custodian indicating the reason(s) the child resides with the person claiming to contribute the major portion of the cost of supporting such child and the reason(s) why the parent, guardian or legal custodian is not contributing the major portion of the cost of supporting such child.

After the expiration of that period of time, or upon the filing of proceedings in the state of residence, the court shall dismiss the petition without prejudice.
