

Cleburne ISD

Furniture Standards-Guidelines

Furniture standards are guidelines, which serve as tools for developing the physical components of a work environment whether in an office or classroom setting. The purpose of implementing furniture standards is to provide District staff and students with functional high quality furnishings in the most cost effective and expedient manner possible.

Standards aren't meant to be static; they should be flexible for changes over time and they should be reviewed and updated periodically. Standards facilitate a consistent quality and character of design and should reduce both the initial cost and the ongoing operating costs for the district. Our Standards program also recognizes that one size doesn't fit all, there will always be exceptions which can be evaluated on a case-by-case basis.

Selection criteria for furniture standards includes durability, compatibility with existing systems, guarantees/warranties, life cycle cost, ergonomics, quality and dealer support.

Furniture is an integral part of the day-to-day operations of the district no matter if you are faculty, staff or a student. There is always a desire to upgrade furniture and bring the overall appearance and function to the level held around the district. To make this process easier, we have implemented the following standards. We strongly believe this will help contribute to a more cohesive overall district appearance while maintaining a certain level of quality.

Please note that Cleburne ISD's basic philosophy on furniture and office moves is that CISD "moves people, not furniture". We will strive to move people into areas where existing furniture will meet or exceed CISD furniture standards.

Three key elements of a Workplace Standard are:

- Selection of product line (s)
- Development of standard configurations based on workspace usage
- Methodology of ongoing management of the program

Workplace standards will reduce Cleburne ISD's current costs of planning, providing, and managing furniture assets. Here's a quick summary of how Workplace Standards will measurably reduce CISD's cost to implement and manage their facilities.

1. Acquisition Costs Reduced with Workplace Standards

Standardizing with one or two dealers will result in better contract pricing, terms and delivery.

2. Costs Reduced with Workplace Standards

New or renovated space can be designed around defined modules promoting better building utilization. CISD staff are able to identify the amount of gross space needed in relocation situations, department shifts, etc. and are able to help plan and evaluate user requests more effectively.

3. Planning Costs Reduced with Workplace Standards

Less employee time is spent coordinating and managing furniture purchases.

4. Workplace Standards Improved

Aesthetics are managed - standard color schemes can be selected that will blend district wide reducing the task of managing a variety of finishes and fabrics with limited applications.

Three Collections Designed to Move

ERGONOMIC HANDLE

A convenient hand-hold, centered for best weight distribution, makes it easy to bring the Alphabet Chair along with you

DURABLE CONSTRUCTION

Heavy-duty seat brackets are designed for durability, while screw attachments provide greater load-bearing capacity, higher shear strength and better shell-to-frame retention

STACKS 4 HIGH

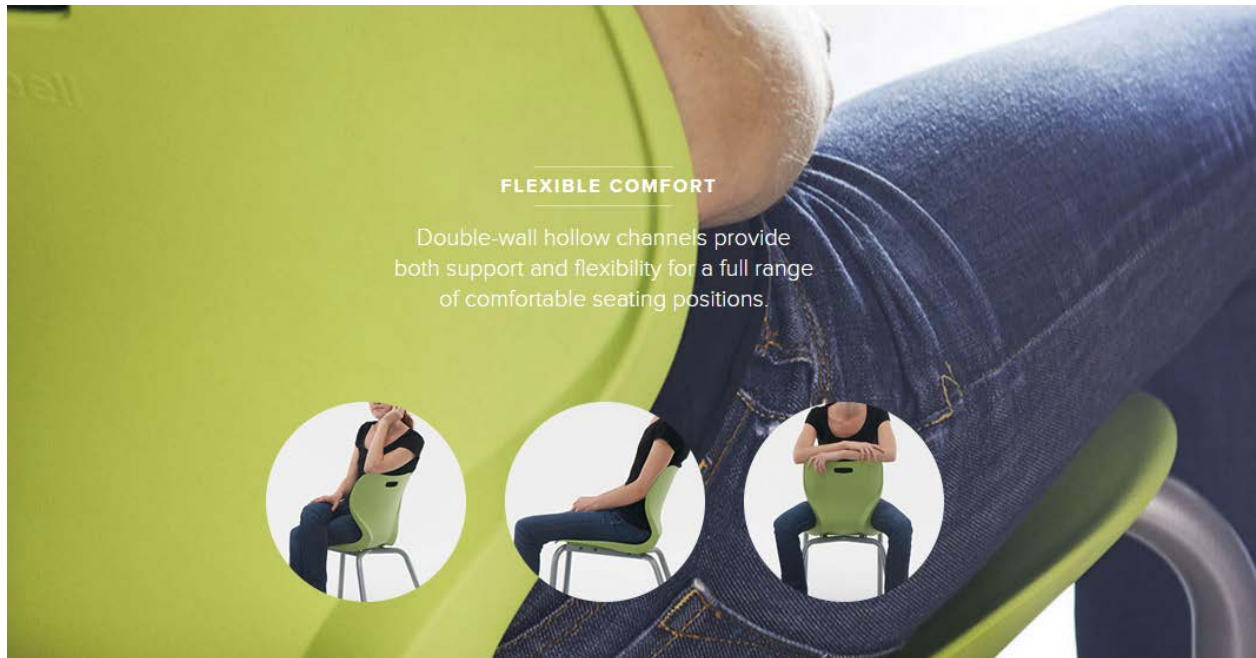

The 4-leg design allows the Alphabet Chair to stack four high and is available in four finishes

NO-SCUFF STABILITY

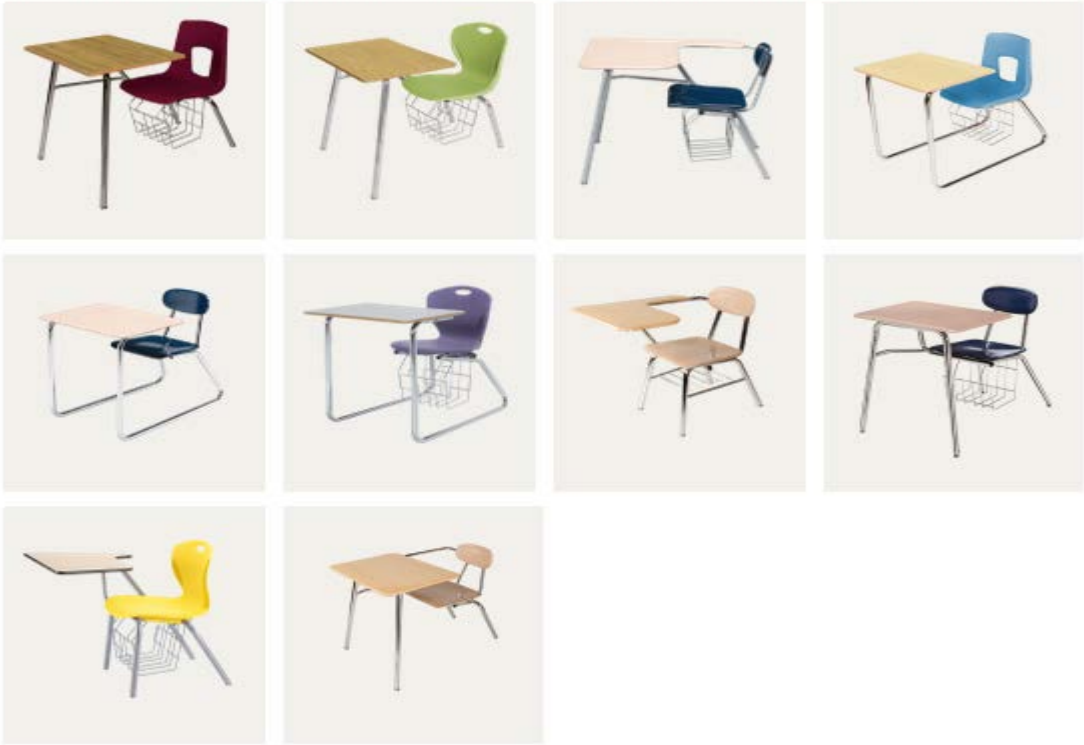

Interchangeable swivel glides, with caps available in nylon, felt, non-skid, and steel, keep the Alphabet level while protecting the surface beneath

FLEXIBLE COMFORT

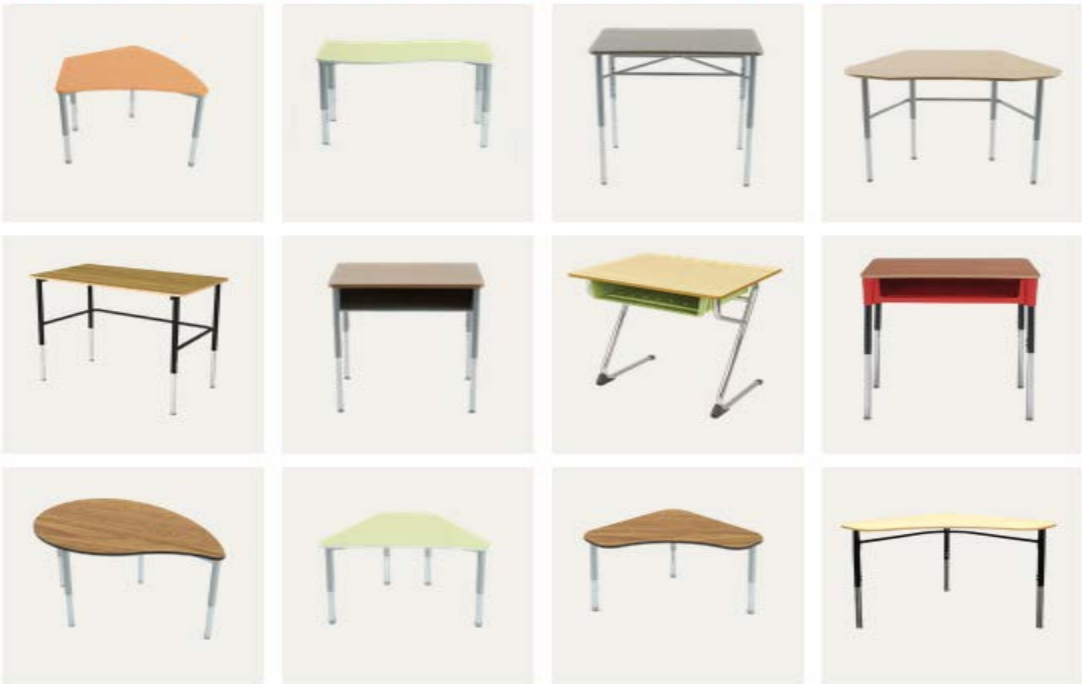

Double-wall hollow channels provide both support and flexibility for a full range of comfortable seating positions.

The Living Classroom Concept

The living classroom is a concept that works on the dynamic nature of learning, which is evolving continuously and develops every day. This theory is based on the idea that a classroom has multiple functions and the activities in the space keep changing based on the style of instruction and the participants. Transforming the classroom from the 19th century mechanical/industrial age to the 21st century, organic living classroom age is an important part of reinventing today's school systems.

The living classroom provides room for all types of learning. Each student learns a little differently, and the Living Classroom makes a place for everyone. A single desk or table is the right size for individual study, for partner projects, or for one-on-one tutoring sessions. When the team or project grows, desks and tables come together.

Reviewing critical pieces like standards, curriculum, instructional activities, and testing, is standard but it is also important to consider the classroom space and how to arrange desks, set up bulletin boards, and organize materials. You can bring these seemingly disconnected components together in a system of six learning zones. The instruct, learn, collaborate, gather, reflect and share zones will help establish routines, save time, and maintain organization from the first through the last days of school.

SIX ZONE LIVING CLASSROOM

Zone 1: The instruction zone serves as a little oasis away from home, but it also helps you manage all of your professional responsibilities. This zone can be used as a private space to host one-on-one conferences with your students.

Zone 2: The learning zone houses the worksheets, resources, games, and tech tools for the subjects you teach. It's important to also display how subjects interconnect, because too many students have a difficult time relating subject matter to other disciplines. Tools and resources should be moved from closets, storage bins, or cabinets and placed in this zone. Provide anchor charts with key ideas and strategies, flashcards, study notes, key people in the field, timelines, and a variety of print materials. Upgrade your word wall by adding visuals and real objects. Organize vocabulary alphabetically or by concept or story -- the key is to provide context for each term. Define the zone with a header and comfortable seating.

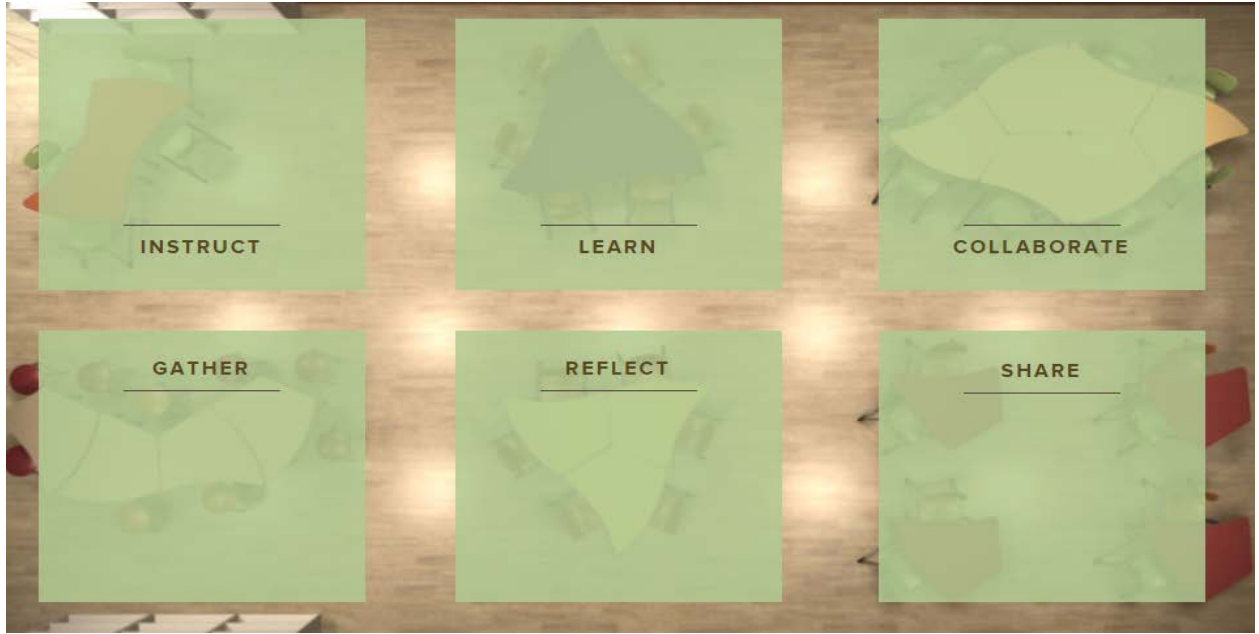

Zone 3: A collaborative zone serves multiple purposes. Students are reminded that we are all working toward common goals. It provides time to discuss what was learned, make connections, pose questions, present other perspectives, and engage in reflection. These discussions are an opportunity for you to evaluate progress, clarify information, address misconceptions, and take notes to plan ahead. At the start of the year you will lead the discussions, but students should be guided until they can open, facilitate, and close the meetings. It is helpful to define the zone and include the meeting time in your schedule. You can use an area rug to anchor the space and give several students a place to sit. Other students can remain standing or bring in their chairs.

Zone 4: The gather zone houses all those items that spark imagination. These include arts and crafts materials, recorders, cameras, music makers, games, puzzles, and fun books and magazines. Share samples of different projects so that students have a jumping off point. You can harness all of this creativity by giving the students a central concept to explore. Have them draw what they see, list observations, and write down their questions.

Zone 5: Reflect. Sharing the classroom space with 20 or more other kids isn't always easy. Some students naturally prefer to work alone, while others simply need a quiet zone to catch up on work, study, read, write, take a test, or reflect. Some lounge seating or a spare table and chairs in a corner of your room can be used to define the zone. If possible, provide some earphones to help filter out classroom noise. If needed, study carrels to block visual distractions.

Zone 6: A sharing zone serves multiple purposes. Students are reminded that we are all working toward common goals. It provides time to discuss what was learned, make connections, pose questions, present other perspectives, and engage in reflection. These discussions are an opportunity for you to evaluate progress, clarify information, address misconceptions, and take notes to plan ahead. At the start of the year you will lead the discussions, but students should be guided until they can open, facilitate, and close the meetings. It is helpful to define the zone and include the meeting time in your schedule.
