Career Opportunities

Food science can be a forgotten science or only associated with culinary arts, or Family Consumer science. However, Food science is all about the science of certain food and how they react when cooked and consumed. The careers for this are wide and if you choose the Bachelor path or farther you will see chemistry but in a different way which is why many Pharmacy Schools accept Food Science as a degree for admission. Other food science options are more traditional and range from Butchers all the way to Food scientists and technicians. Every food company conducts research on the foods they produce and the ingredients they use and must have someone knowledgeable to lead that research and development.
