Message from Principal Norman...

Greetings Odyssey ECCO Students and Families,

It is hard to believe we have completed three weeks of school! I am pleased with our solid start, despite the obstacles in our way. We were happy to be able to host the “freshman and new student’s” first-day event sponsored by the Odyssey ECCO Link Crew and even managed to squeeze in the “Freshman Only” dance. Odyssey ECCO is making an effort to bring back that “normal” school experience where it is reasonably possible. We are also committed to providing a rigorous academic experience that provides students access to college courses.

Here are few reminders for the weeks ahead:

- Clubs will be starting next week. Please check out the website for club meeting times.
- Tutoring support will be available in two forms this school year.
 - 1) Tutoring club will be offered after school from 3:00 pm- 4:00 pm, Monday- Thursday. This type of tutoring is for general support.
 - 2) Direct one on one or small group tutoring will offer specific academic support. Per teacher agreement, this type of tutoring can be requested. Tutoring will be delivered via WebEx after school or during evening hours. Students/families can make the request using this form link: <https://docs.google.com/forms/d/e/1FAIpQLScmF-nFgcWBpJL2Ssun4V3a1piSGCibF3ybJfD8KBWpGxw2Sg/viewform>. If possible, please allow 24-48 hours for teachers to make arrangements for tutoring.
- The RJWAC open house is scheduled for Thursday, September 9th from 5:00 pm- 6:30 pm. Please be on the lookout for fliers via email.
- We will be holding our first School Accountability Meeting on September 13th, from 6:30pm - 7:30 pm via Webex. You can join us using this meeting link.

Thank you for your continued support and trust in Odyssey Early College and Career Options. We know we are still treading in unknown waters and fully appreciate the help and willingness to work together. Student achievement and academic growth are our goals, and without your backing, we would not be able to offer these unique and exciting opportunities.

Best,

Sean Norman

BEHIND THE SCENES

Spanish – Mrs. DallamThe Value of Spanish in the Workplace

Dan Woog, Monster Contributing Writer

The Value of Spanish in the Workplace

You're an international banker, marketing manager or production supervisor. You call a colleague, supervisor or supplier in Latin America or Spain. The only foreign word you know is hola, but when the receptionist answers the phone speaking rapid-fire Spanish, you don't panic. You ask to be transferred to Mr. So-and-So. "Just a minute, sir. I'll put you through," the receptionist responds in perfect English.

With Americanized English the common tongue for much of the industrialized world, knowing a second language might seem as useless as learning Morse code. However, executive recruiters and hiring personnel say North Americans who speak Spanish can do far more than chat up Latino receptionists. Bilingual skills help job seekers land work. They can lead to key assignments and pay raises. In some cases, they may even be a job requirement.

Bilingual Means Feeling Comfortable and Productive

According to the January 2005 Korn/Ferry International Executive Recruiter Index, 88 percent of executive recruiters say the ability to speak more than one language is critical to international business success. Seventy-nine percent of North American recruiters cited Spanish as the additional language most in demand by employers. French was next at 43 percent, followed by Mandarin Chinese (30 percent).

"If I send US nationals into another country, I want them to acclimate and assimilate quickly," says Tom Birmingham, Korn/Ferry's managing director of global accounts. "Sure, in certain areas of Latin America they can get around OK without knowing Spanish, but personally and professionally I want them to feel comfortable."

Birmingham notes that an employee who can navigate a foreign environment with ease will probably be both happier and more productive than one who cannot. From a business standpoint, speaking another person's native language helps win trust.

"Global companies look at people who have global skills," Birmingham says. "And the ability to speak other languages, especially Spanish, is a global skill."

Not Just Global

Spanish-speaking ability is also important in the US. Birmingham recently drove through the Atlanta suburb of Norcross and estimates 70 percent of the billboards were in Spanish. "It's not just California and Texas anymore," he says. "Throughout the Southeast, more and more people are speaking Spanish." They come to work in agriculture and manufacturing, which translates into job opportunities for bilingual managers and supervisors.

Customer service operations are also hiring bilingual workers. From clerks at the Department of Motor Vehicles to call center representatives to supervisors in the hospitality industry, the growth of Spanish speakers as both customers and workers means more demand for bilingual customer service. According to the Society for Human Resource Management, up to 20 percent of call center companies' staffs are bilingual. Salaries vary depending on additional skills required, but some call centers pay bilingual workers 50 cents to a dollar more per hour.

The Korn/Ferry survey showed the greatest need for bilingual employees is in the consumer services sector, particularly banking, retail and telecommunications. Bilingual executives are most frequently needed in marketing, sales and general management and to serve as president or CEO.

The Cultural Shift

The rise of bilingualism represents a cultural shift for many Americans. "We're not a multilingual country," Birmingham says. "A lot of students take another language because they have to, to graduate." However, he sees a shift in attitude, particularly among people who want to work in the global economy. "If you see yourself doing work internationally or going into banking or trade or any other business where you'll travel, you'll take Spanish more seriously," Birmingham says.

Spanish-speaking job seekers can do more than simply highlight their language ability on a resume, Birmingham says. One suggestion: Offer to conduct a job interview in Spanish, which shows you're confident and assertive.

Keep in mind both English and Spanish may one day be less relevant in the global marketplace. According to the Information Please database, 329 million people now speak Spanish as a first language, and 328 million speak English. However, more than 1.2 billion people speak Mandarin Chinese.

STRESS TIPSMr. Dowdle – Odyssey ECCO School Social Worker

Try a few of these when you're feeling anxious or stressed (see if any can work for you):

- Take a time-out. Practice yoga, listen to music, meditate, get a massage, or learn relaxation techniques. Stepping back from the problem helps clear your head.
- Eat well-balanced meals. Do not skip any meals. Do keep healthy, energy-boosting snacks on hand.
- Limit caffeine, which can aggravate anxiety and trigger panic attacks.
- Get enough sleep. When stressed, your body needs additional sleep and rest.
- Exercise daily to help you feel good and maintain your health.
- Take deep breaths. Inhale and exhale slowly.
- Count to 10 slowly. Repeat, and count to 20 if necessary.
- Do your best. Instead of aiming for perfection, which isn't possible, be proud of however close you get.
- Accept that you cannot control everything. Put your stress in perspective: Is it really as bad as you think?
- Welcome humor. A good laugh goes a long way.
- Maintain a positive attitude. Make an effort to replace negative thoughts with positive ones.
- Get involved. Volunteer or find another way to be active in your community, which creates a support network and gives you a break from everyday stress.
- Learn what triggers your anxiety. Is it work, family, school, or something else you can identify? Write in a journal when you're feeling stressed or anxious, and look for a pattern.
- Talk to someone. Tell friends, family, or trusted school staff when you're feeling overwhelmed, and let them know how they can help you.
