Skyview High School 9000 York Street Thornton, Colorado 80229 Volume 3

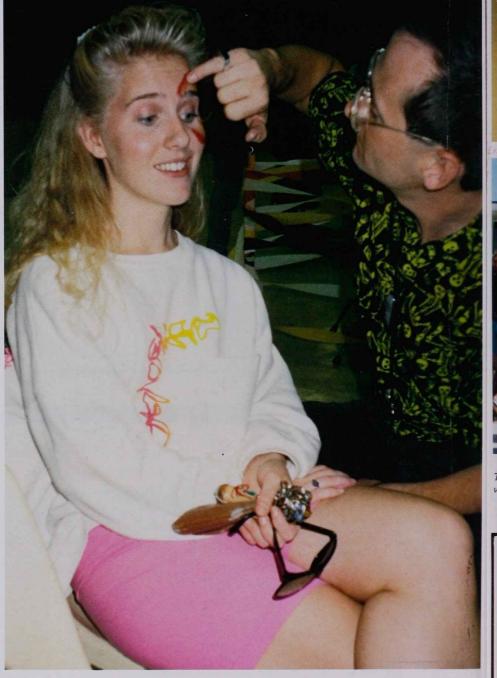

utta line? Who says we're outta line? How did we get that bad reputation? We've heard people talk. "Kids are always outta line over there at Skyview." Rumors and lies?! We've heard them all. Okay, we confess, we were a little outta line, but it wasn't quite like they said. We were unique, full of liveliness and creativity. We weren't afraid to be different, to try something new. Being different gave us character, and we were different characters with our own unique styles. Skyview students stood out in the crowd. We weren't afraid to take risks. But it was those risks and those unique differences that brought us recognition. Where else could you find kids who would give up their lunch to take an eighth class, or hold a carnival for elementary kids in the community. Only at Skyview did we, students and parents, Curtis Hepner and Darcie Carter rush on down to the field to watch our team do its best.

run bingo to finance our adventures. And, we had fun doing it. Outta line? You betand we were proud of it!

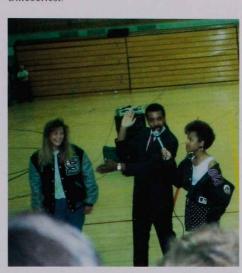

Students sometimes go to great extremes to be outta line. What's Jody Meis going to look like kay, so we were "outta line!" At least for 1991. We were tired of the same things that happened year in and year out. We, the students wanted to be recognized for the unique and creative things we did.

How did we show it?? Nowhere, but nowhere, was there a schedule that rivaled the "floating seven" for keeping us out of line. For example, "If its Wednesday, the schedule is period 1,2,7,4,5,6 or is it 1,7,3,4,5,6!" Who knows??

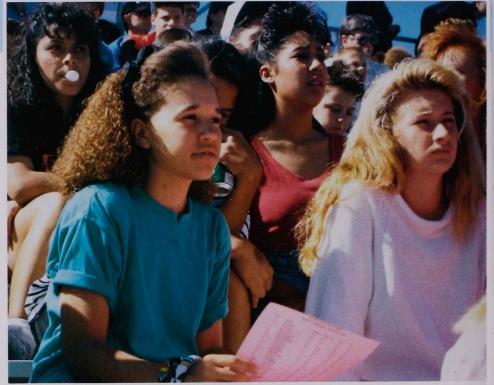

But there were other examples of Skyview uniqueness. SWAP and ICE used block schedules. In these programs for freshmen and some upperclassmen, the confusing schedule only allowed teachers to know where they were going. Or did they?? Another example is Skyview's new system, Channel One. Channel One provides information based on current events. This system is meant to help ith the ninety's now upon us, both male and female hair styles are changing. The newest style for both males and females is bead covered braids.

With spiked hair still being the most popular style of hair for guys, comes such shaved lines and phrases as: sport jersey numbers, "Batman" emblems, and dumb phrases such as "what". Although it is not completely out, long hair amongst guys is not as common as it has been in past years. The bleached and gel-sculptured look has come to attention recently showing that guys are taking more time and care preparing their hair.

Not much has changed with girls' hair, other than the "bob" haircut has been brought out of the closet. Several girls who were questioned commented that their hair color is only slightly different than their original hair color. Study shows that the most common hair style for girls at Skyview is shoulder length and longer — proving that we have no Sinead O'Connors at our school.

Without the strange hair cuts and styles at Skyview, people would lack conversation topics.

unior and Senior girls kicked off the Homecoming week with the annual Powder Puff football game. When the two rivals battled their differences on the field, they resorted to sneaky tricks in search of victory. The seniors, previous champions, did it again, and left the Juniors slightly bruised and battered in their first attempt.

Two days later, float building was held in the teachers' parking lot. The theme, "Welcome to the Jungle," invited a variety of efforts to confiscate jungle foliage in nearby neighborhoods. However, many finished floats did resemble islands.

t was a clear night on October 6, students still excited from the various Homecoming activities: powder puff, the parade, and the game. This was the Homecoming dance.

After going out for dinner, and making it through the long wait in line, over 600 students attended the Homecoming dance. Couples and friends danced the night away and were disappointed to see the night end so early.

hosts, goblins and gorilla brides transformed the cafeteria into a walk down Trick or Treat Street on October 27 at the annual Oktoberfest celebration. A traditional community wide event, sponsored by Skyview's clubs and organizations in conjunction with the Parent Boosters, the evening was marked by a carnival atmosphere. Tiny masqueraders were treated to plastic ghoulies for tossing spiders through webs, knocking down bottles, and selecting the right duck from the pond while dedicated Skyview students manned the booths. Hot spots for the evening were the Junior class-sponsored Haunted House, where those under eight were not allowed (too scary), the marriage booth, and the band's cake walk. While some disgruntled students claimed "It's only for little kids," the "big kids" who came found ways to enjoy themselves.

Keep it up! The Oktoberfest was a positive experience with the community. Just a little more advertising and more activities will improve next year's event.

Should I or shouldn't I? When freshmen choose to commit the crime they end up paying the consequences. Parents may inflict some unusual forms of punishment. According to Jason Renfro, punishment is quite a put on, "They make me dress like Eurekel on Family Matters." Amy Jones' parents take the physical approach, "They hold me up by my toes and let the dog lick my face." In reality Mrs. Renfro said, "No telephone privileges for the rest of his life! It doesn't last, but I throw it out there anyway," and Mr. Jones stuck to the basics by saying, "I would like to hang her by her toes, instead I just lecture her." It looks like the class of 94' knows how to keep their parents in line!

Getting Together

Friends- everybody needs a friend but we don't always recognize it. We all take our friends for granted and treat them a little mean sometimes. Most of the time we don't realize how much our friends do for us. A good friend is trustworthy and dependable. A true friend tells you to "chill out" when you are being a brat, but they accept you just the same. Most of all your friends will be there to make you laugh, show you a good time, give you good advice, or just be there with open arms when you cry. As a friend, don't forget that you are a very special and important part of someone's life because we could never survive without friends.

ESL, or English as a second language, helps foreign students new to this country to have a better understanding for our language and culture through a two hour class daily. There are four Mexican and four Afghani students in this program, none of whom have been in this country for more than two years.

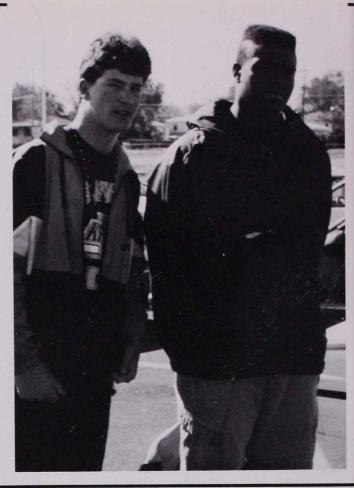

Some of these students come from schools that have no lockers, bussing, or lunch programs, less opportunities to succeed, poorer facilities and less rules to follow. However, the doors were locked so they didn't have an open campus to leave for lunch or released periods as we know them. School days were also quite different since the teachers didn't stay in just one room all day; the students did.

These students don't feel that they have been treated poorly, but that the language barrier has been tough to conquer and it is one to be overcome.

Talking Crazy

Do you remember the delights of pig latin? Skyview's sophomores have developed a new language, and if you don't quite understand, you're not alone. For instance, when Marc Ortiz answers, 'Fishing,' to a question, he usually means, 'Don't ask me. I don't know.' If your wondering who the 'BTM's' or 'The Players' are, they're 'M&M'-Mike Garcia, 'Money'-Jason Trujillo, 'Gizmo'-Tony Garrier, 'Juice'-James Uriales, 'F.F' (Fred Flintstone)-Carlos Sailas, 'Vanilla'-Jeff Camara and 'Special Ed'-Jimmy Klag.

So the next time you hear someone saying one of these words, you'll pretty much understand it, and maybe, just maybe, even be able to answer them with a unique and wild remark of your own!!!!

The best years of our lives? Maybe they're still waiting for us!

it has to do with the sixties and the intensity that the decade brought. Things aren't viewed in the same light so to speak, so what was big then isn't now. A school, once you've been to one, you've been to them all. It's what happens around them that's exciting.

Life Is Too Short

"It's alright being short, because I get a lot of attention!" -CariJo Gagliardi

Whether you are struggling to reach 5' or are well over 6', you would fit perfectly in the class of 93'. Being tall has its advantages. For instance: you never have to look up to anybody, your view is rarely blocked in a movie theater, and most importantly, you never have to stand on a chair to get a cookie out of the cookie jar! On the other hand, short people have their share of advantages: You always win the limbo, you are still allowed to ride the kiddie rides at Elitch's, and the ultimate advantage is the ability to buy Air Jordans in kids' sizes for about ½ price! Even height has its ups and downs.

Freedom and good times, two concepts all teenagers value. In plain language, it simply it was the car of your dreams or nightmares it was basically what you could afford. With the high weighed their options cost of semi-annual insurance payments and monthly car payments, empty pockets seemed to prevent our being able to use those newly acquired carriages. Then, to top it all off, to be operable vehicles of all shapes and sizes, they required gas.

With the turmoil in the Middle East, gas prices have risen astronomically, leaving many new car amounts to a car. Whether owners penniless. Walking, though not a popular option, may soon be the only alternative. Students carpooling or riding the bus. The fear of riding the bus prompted many Skyview teenagers to opt for carpooling with others. The more you could jam into one car, the cheaper the cost per person. Then, if your funds were running on empty a collection could be made from generous friends. Generally three or four dollars could get you around for one day. With some creativity, we were able to find means to allow us to dust off our chariots and join the crowd for a night of cruising and partying. But we weren't surprised, while driving down the street to see a group of friends stranded, due to the fact that they were "Out Of Gas!"

"I would never ride the bus again. It's demeaning, the gas price would have to go up to $2.50 a gallon to make me take the bus!"

What Tops Your Pop???

Bombarded with messages like, "Catch The Wave," and "The New Generation," many Juniors roam the campus and surround the area with soft-drinks like, Dr. Pepper, Pepsi, and Coca-Cola. What makes these beverages so popular? Pat Carver and Chris Gallegos said, "We like Coca-Cola, because of the taste and the caffeine."

Everywhere you look, you see a pop machine. Is that all the Juniors drank when their thirst overwhelmed them? No, a variety of other options which include, Kool-Aid, chocolate milk, and the very popular, flavored mineral waters or Seltzers. "There's more to life then just caffeine," says Michelle Kemm.

So the next time you have a thirst, try something else besides pop, like water for instance. "I don't like drinking pop, because of all the caffeine," J.J. Kelley states.

I don't drink pop because of the caffeine in all, it's bad for the body.

As Lee Hanger explains it, "You have to prioritize your responsibilities," and whatever gets done, gets done. He also emphasizes that a three or four day break (not a weekend either!) would be greatly valued just to catch up, rest, and be ready for the next rush.

The lack of time makes it easy to stress out from the pressures that come with these obligations, making it more difficult to maintain the hectic pace expected.

Note Passing

There are three types of notes- those passed between friends and lovers, those taken in class, and those on a musical staff. Most commonly used are notes passed between friends and lovers.

Most teachers, however, hate any kind of note unless it's given by them for our educational advancement.

Some students also think note passing is useless. Brandi Thomas said, "I think note passing is silly. What can you say in a note that you can't say in person?"

So what is the use of writing notes? According to Darcy Carter, "They reveal important information that can't be said in public."

Nick Romero tries a new and different type of Remember?

High school is supposed to be the best and most memorable years of your life, but we can all agree some events are more memorable than others. You remember that day you were walking to math, tripped on your shoelace, fell face first and knocked over three other people while the person of your dreams laughed their face off. That is one experience you most likely didn't forget. But not all memories are embarrassing ones. Who could forget that winning touchdown, basket, goal or run. These are some people's most memorable high school experiences:

EXCITED ABOUT BEING A SEN-IOR???? What, not really?!? Why not? You're going to be out of high school; starting your life in the real world Sometimes that can be pretty scary. You're trying to decide whether to go to college or make your way in the wondrous working world of the 90's. It is frightening, these are decisions that will affect you the rest of your life, but it comes with the territory. It's one of the many joys of being a senior.

To most students this is a great Halloween costume; but in the Middle Eastern countries, the head dress is a custom. Most women only show their eyes to the public.

Jason Stec takes a closer look at the college board. He is starting to get things organized for the fall semester.

Futures Adrift

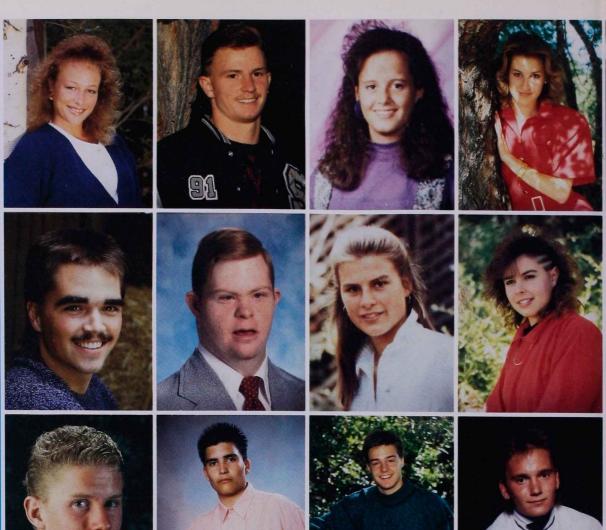

As the year opened, the Middle East conflict worsened. You may have said, "What does this have to do with high school seniors? Well, just last year, seniors made these decisions: go to college, join the armed forces, get a job or start a family. Suddenly, the military has lost some of its appeal, while college started to look a lot more pleasant. As the year comes to a close, more decisions may be made revolving around the situation in the Middle East. Now, signing up for the draft meant more than putting your name on a sign-up sheet. Was the possible reinstatement of the draft a reality? If so, early career starts also had less takers than college. Well, if there is going to be a positive side effect to the world's problems with Saddam Hussein, perhaps it would be the continuing education of more of the class of 1991.

Off of E. 78th and Washington St. lived the Alternative School's Battlin' Prairie Dogs. Since the alternative school began, Aug. 1976, many laymen have considered it for "mess-ups." What they did not realize is presumptions without experience usually prove false. The 134 Battlin' Prairie Dogs have felt distant from surrounding high schools but have succeeded academically as well as spiritually. Students said, "We are not 'mess-ups' because we are not quitters; we just believe in originality as being acceptable." These students have found enough in themselves to keep peace with one another; it's been rare that discipline problems have occurred.

Mr. Avalos, a teacher at alternative, stated, "The students receive so much time. encouraging conversation from our staff and I think that has a lot to do with their motivation. It makes them feel included and valuable."

Alternative has been successful because everyone involved has learned to communicate and accept each other's differences, but the requirements for graduation haven't been made easier.

When each student enrolled, he or she was put on contract to meet certain expectations. If the requirements were not met, the student would be recycled and another applicant would be given his or her spot. In order to uphold the contract students had to manage their time consistently and look forward to graduating on Another route to graduation, the district decided to fund Alternative for the benefit of the students as well as the schools. More students have graduated, gotten jobs and supported themselves since the program began. Numerous Battlin' Prairie Dogs said, "Alternative is an environment where we are accepted and can get an education we will value for the rest of our lives."

How Much Have We Done?

We've all had do to it at one time or another. But how much have we done? Seniors look back and see how many hours of homework they have done. Seniors have done an average of 1000-2000 hours of homework since their freshman year. They have used 2000-3500 pieces of notebook paper and have written about 10-20 major essays.

You never thought you would catch it - but you did. There was that day when you decided to take that extra minute in the hall to talk to a friend, and suddenly you forgot about your class. That's when you caught it. So then it turned into extended lunches and maybe you slept in a little bit later. When you thought you could break the chain, you got a little pressure from your peers. Now, no one can deny the fact that they missed a class at one time or another, just to break away from the harsh daily life of being a high school senior.

Bing And A Bang

Last Spring, Skyview students participated in many sports. Of the girls' sports the most popular were tennis and soccer. As you know many people don't appreciate these sports, but a lot of work is put into their teams.

There is not only hard work put into these sports, they can also be lots of fun. Spring of 1990, brought loads of freshman to the fields and courts. This is a great chance to make new friends.

In tennis, Kindra Sanchez and Roselyn Penvari took First Team All Conference; they also went to the State matches in Pueblo. The girls' quoted that, "It took a lot of patience to work together and we had to build our confidence."

Although soccer didn't do as well as they had hoped, it took a lot of effort by both the team and their new coach to make things work.

Team achievements included taking second place in the inaugural Wolverine Classic track meet. What could swimming and baseball have in common? Well, in the spring of 1990 they shared statistics and each had plenty to brag about.

Talk about a productive season! Both teams were substantially small and had only three seniors to start out the season. That didn't stop these wolverines. The boys' swim team met and exceeded every school record there was, while the baseball team went over a .500 batting average and set a skyview record by hitting twelve homeruns! This, of course, couldn't have been accomplished without the help of some star hitters, and Rick Oster, Chris Lee, and Nathan Gonzales were just a few.

That's not all!
Individually, the wolverines accomplished just as much. In swimming, DerekLaviolette qualified for state championships, took first in League championships, and made first team all conference in the one hundred meter butterfly. Meanwhile, Jeff Barath set an individual record in baseball by hitting seven of the twelve homeruns!

Our numbers were small, but our ability to perform was high. In the spring of 1990, we were simply "out to be the best."

S pecial Night

The wild and wacky class of '91 sponsored a Prom to be remembered. Two themes, "Stairway to Heaven" and "Love Me For Life" gave all romantics something to think about. Held at the plush Registry Hotel near Stapleton, catered buffets filled with chicken, shrimp, fruits, and other snacks filled all sides of the room. Royal Blue and silver streamers and balloons winked at the soft lights.

The Prom left lasting memories for many juniors and seniors. Couples danced the night away knowing that these were the last years and even days together for some of them. This was more than just a dance — it was time to socialize and to laugh with friends remembering the past, and speculating on what the future held for them.

S taying Up Late

Just when you thought your glamorous evening of Prom was over, it had just begun with After Prom.
There were many different events going on to keep students busy. For example the raffle, swimming, watching movies, and just sitting around trying not to fall asleep.

Booster Club spent long hard work on the decorations and the planning. Many students were stunned by the beautiful decorations.

The raffle was probably the biggest hit of the night. Students were upset at Michelle Griego and Kymm Washburn because they seemed to have the winning tickets all night, but Philip Sailas did end up with the television set.

Although everyone was extremely exhausted by this time, After Prom was a big success.

venching A Thirst?

An incredibly popular teenager walks into the enormous house, with a case of beer, and the party's a hit! At least, that's what the message is in the movies — but, is alcohol that important to students at Skyview? The Silver Lining took a survey to find out.

On the average, students use alcohol once a month and three-fourths of the student body have tried alcohol at one time or another. However, a lot of our peers feel drinking is too highly publicized and don't need to drink to have fun. In fact, some say drinking can hinder social relationships. Sophomore, Kathy Hugh says, "I don't drink because when people drink, they turn into someone they're notthat's not me. Get it?"

Those who do drink frequently say alcohol is a nice accent to social gatherings, family traditions and holiday festivities; if it's used in moderation.

Others give a spectrum of reasons for use of alcohol, including having fun, fitting in, relaxing, and avoiding problems.

An alcohol-free weekend at Camp Cheley. John Maki relaxes on the steps of the main lodge.

"I think people drink to have fun and be cool, Also, to relax and get away from their problems," says Junior Chris Conley.

Fortunately teenagers who drink are responsible when it comes to their safety and the safety of others. A majority of Skyview students use designated drivers or don't drink at all if they khow they're going to drive. Some of the other alternatives are spending the night somewhere, calling a cab, or calling a parent.

So, it seems that although drinking is a part of Skyview's social life, most students know there are other alternatives, like going to the movies, dancing, or spending the day at the zoo!

Of the students we interviewed:
77% would go to a non-alcoholic party

85% don't drink and drive

58% drink at least every two months

Is it still the "me" generation? Do teenagers really only care about themselves? Many people believe today's teenagers only care about themselves, but Skyview's students are proving them wrong.

The Silver Lining took a survey with Ms. Oaks' Government class and Mr. Olsen's 7th set Economics class. The majority of these students have holiday family traditions, some quite unique. For example, Angela Pedotto's family gathers every Sunday to eat a spaghetti dinner while Kenra Burton's family spends Sunday at Bronco Games, then has her grandfather over for a Sunday dinner. Sophomore Aaron Craven's family has all the men and boys from both sides of the family get together to play flag football on Memorial Day every year. Now there is a way to really get to know one another and to have those man-to-man talks.

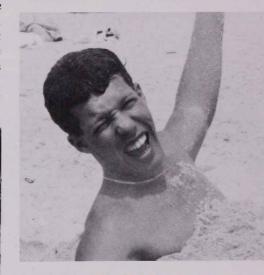

You can see that Skyview's families aren't dying away. Although the majority of the traditions surround holidays, many families carry on personal traditions from years ago. Silver Lining's survey shows the family unit is alive in our community.

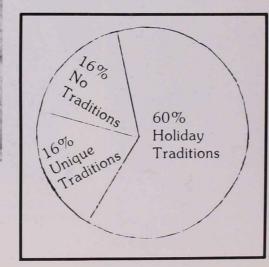

A few of Sheila Scully's favorite traditions are fishing and camping.

High School is a time when most teens begin to look toward the future and focus on preparing for college or careers. As a result, a great deal of time is spent on mainstream classes and attention is turned to the students who are college bound. In keeping with the theme, "Out of Line", the yearbook staff decided it was time to find out about the students who take care of a child, have plans besides college, or just aren't school oriented. So, they did a little research of the students who have children to care for. Most agree that it's hard to go to school, take care of a baby and still have a social life. Their daily routine centers around their kids and doing anything requires a lot more responsibility and preparation. This hasn't stopped them from wanting to pursue careers after high school and they feel that classes like Teen Parents, B.O.L.D., and Moving Out, help them prepare for the outside world. However, that's not enough. Some of the students feel Skyview should work on specializing students' talents and put in a day care. Shannon Green says, "A day care is a good idea. It would help more people to be able to come to school."

of Off The Press

If you happened to drive by Skyview late at night you might have wondered why bleary-eyed students were filing in and out of the building. The answer is deadline week for the yearbook staff. Sacrificing other activities to finish articles or layouts for the yearbook, staffers spent 15 to 16 hours at school when they were "on deadline." Though, to relieve stress, meals and snacks were passed around. Music blared from the radio, keeping the semi-comatose from dozing off, while they waited for an editor or advisor to check their pages.

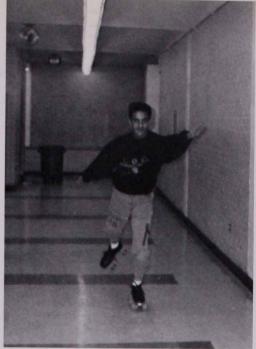

The yearbook staff had a goal in mind when gathering ideas for the new yearbook and were prepared with the motto "If you say, 'That's good enough,' it probably isn't!" The theme "Get Out of Line," was based on the idea that a new look and some variety would improve the yearbook image.

The newspaper was published bi-monthly and contained facts about specific topics or issues that make a difference to students. A fairly new staff this year, combined with a few veterans, joined forces to publish The Predator. To decide what an article should be based upon, the staff had a brainstorming session. Many students chose subjects that dealt with serious causes or information about Skyview. Although many students had a choice of articles, others were assigned to unwilling victims. To obtain information, writers shadowed or interviewed people then wrote up the articles.

And with the part of the part

usiness Is The Key To Success

Future Business Leaders of America and Future Homemakers of America, better known as FBLA and FHA, are clubs designed for students who have taken business or home economics. These students worked very hard to compete at the district and state level of competition. While FBLA members competed in events like Accounting, Postmarking and other business subjects, FHA competed in subjects ranging from cooking illustrations to financing. Although, both of these clubs were designed to prepare people for the future and members found hard work, they still managed to squeeze out time for fun. They even managed to have parties and took field trips, like the one to Disney on Ice. This proves that old theory "You can't mix business with pleasure," is wrong.

SWAP What is it all about? Well, first of all, SWAP stands for "School to Work Action Program." SWAP offers students their English, math, and science credits. Why is SWAP at Skyview? SWAP gives students who might not make it in the normal classroom, a chance to make it through high school successfully. The SWAP students participate in many of Skyview's activities such as Homecoming, Oktoberfest and the traditional giving of Christmas baskets. Basic Occupational Lifeskills Development, in other words, BOLD. BOLD is a class taken by students who want to prepare for their futures. Students work at their jobs for high school credit. The group learns to fill out all types of applications and how to survive the fears of interviews.

This season the band traveled to many different competitions across the eastern part of the state including the C.S.U. Homecoming Parade and football game in Fort Collins where the band received a first place award for parade marching. They also received a fourth place finish in their Band Day Competition the week before, showing an improving field marching unit. The band also traveled in the city to Englewood where they received a second place finish to Grand Junction Central (their first appearance in the parade) and for the third year in a row, Skyview has taken first place in the Thornton Olde Days Parade against Horizon and Thornton High Schools.

Field performing hasn't been a strength, but it is slowly coming up, as Skyview hopes to become a contender with Ponderosa, Douglas County and Broomfield, who have remained in the top eight bands in the state for several years. The night practices are often bitterly cold proving that there is some loyalty and dedication of students to their school.

These competitions are judged on appearance, ability to stay in step and in formation, and playing.

aking Music

This year's orchestra was directed by Steve Mallinson, who also helped out with the fall musical, "Little Miss Mary Sunshine." Their first concert, in December, was a success, and they planned an early spring concert.

The orchestra went to Grand Junction in the spring. The orchestra played a variety of music from pop to classical. It took a great deal of effort to learn so many different pieces of music in a short period of time.

Also having a great year, the concert choir put on a wonderful winter concert and worked well together. For extra funds, the choir put on a Sing-a-Thon and raised money for the music department. With the enthused choir teacher Mr. Kimbrough, the choir made strides in new directions.

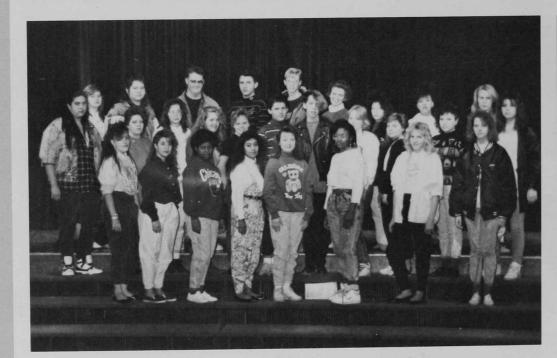

By these faces, it looks like they are having a lot of fun.

Whether you're a bass or a first soprano, a jock or a prep, in the class of 91' or 94', you'll have to accept every difference to be a member of either Silhouettes or Special Edition. Under the direction of Mr. Kimbrough, the newest addition to the music department, people selected for these unique groups combine their different personalities, cliques, and ranges of voices to put on a first class show. Silhouettes and Special Edition are not only taken for school credit, but because their members love to entertain, especially during the funfilled tour of Kansas. Like any other performance, the audience may select a voice singing off key, or witness a person who's not so light on their feet, but the dedication within each person is definitely the basis of every quality performance.

Originality is what makes any activity unique to Skyview's student body. What makes them so original? The teenagers who are dedicated to keeping interest and creativity in these activities. The literary magazine, Sky Views, has been very successful in keeping that dedication alive.

Mr. Cornell states: "The literary magazine strives to give exposure to art forms that don't ordinarily have a lot of audience. For example, drama has it's plays and musicians have recitals." Here artists, like Clark Jones, can be appreciated for their own style of self expression and have a direct impact on free form art at Skyview.

Just one of a rainbow of activities in which students have a chance to broaden their horizons in areas other than academics, they learn how to put their ideals to action.

Stapping Out...

New Choices builds up your selfesteem. You learn to feel secure and confident within yourself, to make important and wise decisions with every day of life and the future.

> -Connie Reppond

New Choices teaches you how to be confident and believe in yourself. Having New choices helps you deal with your everyday problems and gears you for your future.

-Jennifer Clavell Did you know that there's a class where you get to learn about yourself, and meet new people? Well, there is, and according to some people, its quite a great class! "New Choices has taught me self respect, and let me see myself in a different perspective," says

Heather Mayo. Vickey Aragon states, "New Choices has helped me to get along with others better, and 'Lodge' has given me a chance to learn more." Now, some of you are probably asking, "What's New Choices and what's Lodge?" New Choices is a class where you can stop and take a good look at yourself. It helps to let you change what you may not like about yourself. Also, it lets you make the good things you like stronger. Students also learn how to deal with their feelings and not to be afraid to show them. The teacher of New Choices is Mr. Tilsley.

"What's Lodge?"- It's a place where the students, in the New Choices classes, get to escape, learn, and have LOTS of fun! The students do activities that enhance their inner selves, and let them see many opportunities in themselves, and it helps them to become one with themselves so they can get on with their lives knowing that they're worthwhile and good enough to accomplish their goals in life.

AKING THE GRADE

Leadership, responsibility, and academics: these are the values the National Honor Society hold dear. This league is a collection of students who, through hard work and a 3.5 G.P.A., earned the privilege to join. The Honor Society helps the school, arranging activities and assisting organizations, such as Knowledge Bowl, the Math Affair, the Christmas food baskets collection, and the annual blood drive. Two members, Melissa Goodman and Stacy Ketelhut, feel that this society is needed to acknowledge students who excel in academics.

Then there's knowledge Bowl, Skyview's team of junior Einsteins. This group meets weekly to participate in what Michael Harper, Eric Kline, and Brian Parchman call a fun, intellectual competition. They also meet monthly to compete against other high schools, the largest of these is held at Skyview and run by Miss Egbert. Miss Egbert the teams coach, hopes the future includes a trophy, yet, the teams efforts earn a more rewarding prize: fun and knowledge.

The Skyview 1990-91 Booster Club and Student Council are among the many prides and joys of Skyview High School. Both groups contribute so much to the school that they are sometimes taken for granted. The talented Boosters spend a countless number of hours during the school year supporting the school. Boosters are involved in everything from helping at sporting events to helping various clubs and organizations throughout Skyview. Another group that is essential to the existence of the students at Skyview is the Student Council.

Student Council is made up of Headboy and Headgirl, (Student Body Pres.) a President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, two Representatives from every class. There are also various members who do not hold elected offices in Student Council. This year's class was sponsored by Mr. Gary Kell. Student Council sponsors many events to promote spirit. In closing, these two groups are appreciated and a very special part of Skyview.

All Bumped Out

Did you know the average height of the varsity volleyball team was a mere 5'6.5" tall, and Angela Mazzuca, who received 2nd team All-Conference honors, served close to 120 times? After 12 hours of practicing per week, the varsity team fell 7 matches short of a winning season.

Junior Varsity had a lot of enthusiasm and sometimes got their priorities mixed up when practice time was spent laughing hysterically and having fun. Music by M.C. Hammer, BBD, Troop, and Vanilla Ice were pre-game intensifiers that signified the competitive excitement among the athletes.

The freshman team was understandably unsure of themselves and their talents. As they were gradually accepted by the upperclassmen, the terrified looks on their faces during game time vanished. Great things will be expected of them in the future, as soon as they acquire enough experience to meet varsity standards.

(Colorado Association of Recreational Athletes) in the him started in soccer year 1988 and has been competing ever since. From 2:45 until 4:15 Chris practices with Skyview's team during swimming season. Then she practices with the USS (United States Swimming) until 5:30 all year round. Very dedicated to swimming, Chris showed it when she qualified for state on February 23 in the 100M backstroke. Setting a new Skyline League record made her a League Champion this year.

J.J. Kelly's father got approximately two years ago, when he came to Colorado and he had been playing ever since then. J.J. has played for some 15 to 20 indoors and outdoors teams, including Skyview's. J.J. showed off his talent by making 1st Team All Conference of the Skyline League this year.

With pride, these two Juniors stood out from all the rest. To make a team everyone must work together, not as individuals.

Here Chris Asmussen shows off her style while performing the backstroke. Chris placed 14th at state out of some 40 qualifiers.

"I want to play in the Olympics after college and eventually the National Team, but that is just my farfetched goals," J.J. Kelly.

Pin To Win

Coach Cooter, the team got off to a slow start. The wrestlers had difficulty adapting to the style of Coach Jaynes. After awhile they began to adapt to the new ways, and the wrestlers progressed quickly. As for Coach Jaynes, he did a fantastic job forming the wrestlers and when he wasn't watching, the captains kept everyone disciplined. Skyview managed to keep the good reputation they had, by sending four Wolverines to state and bringing home two state Champions along with one second place finisher. Junior, Eric

In the first year without Romero at 103 pounds was a State Champion, along with Senior, Jerry Rodriguez at 171 pounds. Senior, Delfino Rodriguez at 112 pounds placed second, losing the final match by only one point. Junior, Tony Mazzuca at 145 pounds finished eighth and the Wolverines finished in the top ten in state. That happened as a result of a lot of blood, sweat and tears. With a returning state Champion and qualifier and many upcoming wrestlers, the Wolverines should be strong contenders, with the future for Skyview wrestling looking bright.

Lady Hoopsters

After long hours of practicing and conditioning themselves for basketball try-outs, the girls varsity team was made up of six seniors and five juniors, coached by Nick DeSimone. The season got off to a slow beginning, as the coach and team learned to work together.

The Lady Hoopsters were unable to show their talent at State, but proved their aggressiveness both on and off the court. Seniors Caroline Burke and Shanna Consol along with junior Courtney Harlan lead the team throughout the season with their great playing ability and outstanding performances.

We'll miss our seniors next year as we always do, but look forward to a new and rewarding season with the returning players and new talent among the J.V.

Winter Of Discontent

Up and down explains Skyview's season for 1990. They came out tough in their first game and lost to the #3 ranked team in the State of Colorado losing by three points. The next couple of games included two victories and one loss. The mighty Wolverines were to have a long climb to the end after that. The season ended in Douglas County, where the Wolverines lost the last game of the year, which might have decided if Skyview went to the Regional Playoffs. With a record of six wins and eleven losses, however, the team was destined to sit out this post season.

Young Wolverines proved

Young Wolverines proved a lot by starting three underclassmen and two Seniors. They should be very tough in the 1992 season because six out of eleven teammates will return to action.

... discipline

Cheerleading requires total commitment on the behalf of all the participants. The sport involves many responsibilities and personal effort. Cheerleader Michelle Cic says, "Cheerleading takes up a lot of time and more responsibility than most sports." Everyday after school, excluding Wednesdays, the cheerleaders attend mandatory practices for a few hours to improve their techniques.

Although the cheerleaders seem very busy, they always find time to work at various fundraisers, which include: bingo, selling candy, selling Skyview paraphernalia and having car washes. Kelly Stratton names a few uses of the money earned, "Fundraisers help with uniforms, camp and a few extras." The squad is not as large as in recent years. but the challenge of improvements is still the same.

I nside nformation

We do not give much thought to the hard work and dedication that goes into keeping our great school functioning smoothly.

The administration organizes the calendar for the year, plan our budget, and oversee activities, social events, and instruction. The principal also answers to the district level administrators, and sees to it that our school functions properly.

Meanwhile the secretaries keep track of people and the paperwork, administration, and the principal.

Down at the cafeteria the cooks provide the right nutritional foods to help us make it through the day's educational pursuits.

Finally, the custodians toil sixteen hours a day to keep halls, grounds, and classrooms safe and spotless. It takes a great deal of effort and teamwork to pull it off but it works for all of Skyview. We give thanks to them all.

Gina Cummings, John Maki, Michelle Kemm, Melissa Hoffman, Wendy Helms, Trish Vargas, and Diane Ranallo discuss a recent Channel One broadcast.

Tuning In To The World

Skyview is one of the first schools to include Channel One into the daily schedule; although, the decision to include it was not an easy one. It took much thought from many people including student council, staff members, and the school board. This process began in early 1990 when Whittle (the company who provided the Channel One services) presented District One with the proposal said, "Free TV for the guarantee that students will watch it every day for twelve minutes." Whittle wanted the commercials to be viewed and to assure that, it had to be promised. Because of this standard the decision was difficult to reach. Those making the decision saw that Whittle made the proposal with money making in mind; and that it meant exposing students to commercials. Channel One's benefits out weighed this concern, so the school board agreed to accept Channel One.

Most students agreed that the new program has been beneficial. Vicki Aragon stated that it's good to have for those who don't make themselves accessible to events around them; and Ms. Acosta's third hour students agreed with her when she said the program was educational in a way that was comprehensible to them. Of course, some students would rather have done without, only because that meant twelve extra minutes of class! But Channel One has helped many students relate to various events enough to know what is being talked about. Mr. Middleton stressed how important world issues are when he stated, "It is vital that American society becomes aware because communication, transportation, WAR! You name it- is too fast; and it is easy to become a victim of an event that you can master. It all has to do with intellect," he said.

Getting Ready!

Vocational classes have the reputation of cutting of a paper thin line and assembling being easy. Amazingly enough, the classes require a lot of work, concentration, and the ability to solve problems in the least timeconsuming fashion possible, whether it's a business, auto, metals, wood, or a work study

Wood and metal shop give the impression that it's easy to weld metals and nail wood together but both skills require precision the project while keeping it square. Students must even know heat tolerances of the metals to be welded insuring that a good bond is obtained.

Business classes require some repetitive actions, but here are many various actions such as requiring concise summaries, inventive ways to get a point across without being too blunt, and having the ability to change thought patterns and form styles without much adjustment time. As LeAnn Moffit explains: "It can be difficult if you aren't paying attention." In classes like accounting and recordkeeping, you have to balance statements that have many columns containing many numbers.

The job placement programs, B.O.L.D. and B.O.E. (business office education), let students experience what their future career will be like, allowing them either to go further in this field or to change before they spend several years in college, preparing for the wrong profession.

We interviewed a couple of students at Skyview and asked, "What is the pressure of college prep classes, and how does it affect you?" One student whom we interviewed answered these questions. Lee Hanger said, "An honor student has more responsibility than any other student. Your teachers expect better work, faster." Heather Dixon also commented that parents and sports keep her going. As a highlight of the program the students will be Mentors to the elementary kids for a day. That is, the student writes a story and reads it to the elementary kids. Then, the kids will visit for a day, and the students will show them around. For the little kids, it's a big deal to hang around with a High School teenagers. This helps SWAP students build-up self confidence they may have had before they came into this program. Those who teach SWAP are a very caring group, teaching with a purpose. Mr. Matsuo says "It's easy to complain about something that's wrong and not do anything about it". SWAP is a positive group at our school.

Robin, I wish you good luck in the future. I'm sure the whole tennis team will miss your good attitude and great tennis skills. (Ha! Ha!)

-Carrie Berlin

Jolena, here are two things you should have learned from tennis: 1. Always check for falling mufflers before driving in the Broomfield area to save yourself from further embarrassment. 2. Don't be nice, lines are out!

Caroline, we've all learned a lot from you athletically (because you're beast at the net) and from the wonderful person you are. Thanks for being such a good friend and think of me when you're having so much fun in college.

Mr. Sekich improves his student relations skills with Randy Lizer. Even high school principals can be out of line!

Saudi Arabia were shown on wrists, pants jackets, shoes, and foreheads. As Aspen Rothe says, "The oil crisis started by Saddam Hussen had to be outta line!"

What about the floating seven schedule? That created some out of line behavior. Mark Hammer chuckles in amazement, "Mike Davis and Chris Campbell actually went to class!"

For every action, there's a reaction. Well, we covered your actions, let's see your reactions!
