NWEA Glazer scholars will be taking the Measures of Academic Progress or MAP. It creates a personalized assessment experience by adapting to each student's learning level - precisely measuring student progress and growth for each individual. Teachers will have essential information about what each student knows and is ready to learn within 24 hours and thusly be able to use it to inform instruction. Testing occurs three times per year and begins within the first weeks of September. Please review the resources for additional information!
Links to NWEA MAP Test tutorials – We will take our assessments next week. Please review the tutorials as you will support the testing.

Staff Spotlight – Ms. Mae Kathryn Antonio 4th Grade Teacher

MAE KATHRYN E. ANTONIO

Initially, teaching was not the course I meant to take up. I have seen my mother and maternal grandparents – all elementary teachers – struggle with all the tasks that the profession entails. But through the years, they managed to persuade me to follow in their footsteps which I am really grateful of. I graduated Bachelor of Elementary Education at Tarlac State University in 2003. I started teaching in 2006, a year after I gave birth to my son. After quite some time, I decided to pursue Master of Education and graduated at University of St. La Salle in 2016.

Even after all these years in the field, I still sometimes struggle with all the tasks that has to be done. In order to balance all of these, I turn to music for relaxation. Pop and alternative rock are my favorites. Food for me is also a way to de-stress especially when it comes to pasta and sweets.
